He's DOING WONDERS KEEPING THEM Rolling

WHEN you take your car to your Ford Dealer for service, please bear this fact in mind: there are many thousands of Ford vehicles engaged in essential war transport here in Canada. Ford dealers must stand ready to service and repair these vehicles with dispatch.

Your Ford dealer wants to service your car promptly, too. But when one of these essential trucks or transports comes in his door for urgently needed service, then your car must wait. This may inconvenience you and embarrass the dealer—but war priorities must come ahead of civilian service.

Since all cars on the road are old cars—and steadily getting older—the demands from car owners for service from Ford dealers are steadily multiplying. Though many skilled mechanics are today in the Armed Services, and the manpower shortage makes it difficult to keep mechanics, your Ford dealer is making a valiant effort to service your car, in addition to keeping essential transport rolling.

Your Ford dealer is grateful to you for your patience under today's trying conditions, and will do his utmost to serve you promptly.

Highly Gifted Cellist Captivates Very Large Concert Audience With Matchless Witchery of His Art

Unbelievably gifted Gregor Piatigorsky, violoncellist, presenting with the greatest ease a program ranging for virtuoso talent of transcendent kind, both grand and entertaining, at a large audience in the College Hall auditorium on Friday night at the closing concert in this year's series of the Community Concerts Association, was the outstanding artistic highlight of the season.

GREGOR PIATIGORSKY

Not since the days when Kreisler was in his prime has Belleville been privileged to hear such a master of the violin as Piatigorsky is of the cello. His technique is flawless, his tone that is full of vitality. Beauty of tone and technical ease are evident together with admirable accuracy. His fingers move over his cello like musicians, and his body wells with his music. Every note and phrase has vitality. He becomes a living part of his instrument, and it is difficult to follow the intricacies of some of his pieces for sheer fascination and ravishing tone. Mr. Piatigorsky truly has the technical equipment of the great, temperament and the platform personality to make his playing of his instrument beloved of concertgoers. Jeanne Vitalis.

As for his fabulous cello, it was made by Domenico Montagnana in the year '732, a famous Venetian instrument with a luminous golden brown surface and ravishing tone, one of the most valuable cello in the world. He also plays with at least four bows from his large collection which have been unique instruments made by Francois Tourte, Inspector and Mrs. Hayes, 236 Foster Avenue, have been advised of the safe arrival overseas of their son, Fred Hayes.

The many friends of Mrs. Katharine McCurdy, for many years a resident of this city, will be pleased to know that she has so far recovered from her illness to be brought from the hospital to her home on Logan Avenue, in Toronto, where she is now convalescing.

Shirley Ann Brockhurst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Brockhurst, 31 Hall Street, entertained her small friends at a jolly party on the occasion of her sixth birthday on Friday evening. The playing of games and a delicious birthday supper were highly enjoyed by the young folks.

The Entertainment Committee of the Ordnance Bundled Employees' Guild headed by Chairman, Mr. Clayton Tummon, had a very successful dance in Club Vanity Hall on Friday evening for the employees of the plant and their friends. Featured orchestra for the occasion was "Bobby" Jones and his band. Everyone of the dance reported a "swell time."

Mrs. George Fehnanter, (nee Marion Brockhurst), a very recent bride, was honored at a miscellaneous shower on Friday night at the home of Miss Jean Mills, 18 Chatham St., by the staff of the Bell Telephone Company of which she is a member. Various games were played during the evening, and afforded the girls a great deal of pleasure. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess at the close of the party.

Mrs. Howard Palmer, Chatham Street, entertained on a very charming cup and saucer shower on Friday afternoon in honor of Miss Gyneth Donovan, bride-to-be of April. Fourteen guests were present on the occasion. Pink and white streamers were used in attractive decorations. A large cup and saucer fashioned out of pink and white crepe paper contained all the gifts wrapped gifts. Games and contests were enjoyed during the evening. A very delicious lunch was served.

Smartly Simple

NO NEED for furs, feathers, flowers or jewellery to perk up your spring wardrobe program, for you don't like that sort of thing. BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Long Eyelashes Have Romantic Appeal

Though, in the past, eyebrows were pillaged and plundered to a state of almost total extinction, they are now leading a new normal life, and the beauty-seeking contingent have time, no doubt, to vote to eyelashes. These pretty curtains should be combed and petted so they will increase in numbers, take on flirtatious curly tips and develop more depth of shade.

Lashes are a frail growth. They haven't much of a foothold, since their roots are fairly close to the surface of the flesh. Their span of life is shorter than that of the hair upon one's head. Don't worry or lament them for they protect the eyes. A sty, which is a small boil, can destroy the papilla from which the shaft emerges; it is a menace to healthy lashes.

The silky threads live on the blood supply. It is imperative then that the circulation of the blood streams of the eyelids should be vigorous and active. Circulation is stimulated by bathing the eyes in hot water, then, as cold, or by placing over the lids pads of gauze that have been wrung out of ice water. Repeat this operation several times. As the flesh flows, slap on another cold compress, and this reaction that does the business. You can include this treatment in the beautifying hail hour which every woman could enjoy before she packs herself between the sheets to wait for the sand man.

Curly eyelashes give vitality to the lashes. Mineral oil is a perfect medium. If it does not get in the eyes it will cause no harm or discomfort. Use it, as we do wine: putting it on. Massage lightly, pressing the first finger across the lids.

ALBERT COLLEGE BEATS ST. MIKE'S BY 3-0 COUNT

Green and White Squad Now Leading Junior Section by Full Game

Scoring is goal a period the Albert College pucksters moved into the top slot of the junior section of the O.H.A. hockey group with a 3-0 win over the St. Michael's Academy "Irish" at the Hums arena yesterday.

With the group all tangled by Coach Pepper's well-earned win yesterday, Albert gave Albert College's full game advantage in the junior series, moreover, it remained unchanged today that it was necessary for a match between St. Mike's and B.C.I. on Monday to help settle the condition. As it standing now Albert College is leading with Belleville Collegiate trailing by one point. All of which can be well reversed in the event of an "Irish" win on Monday. In the meantime the St. Mike's and B.C.I. seniors also have a saw-off final game next week.

Don McCullough took Christie's long pass from Albert College's initial goal yesterday, while Johnny Merkley added Albert's second goal with a hard drive off Tougher's pass. In other matters Jim Tougher whipped home Merkley's goal-mouth pass to score the third Pepper's drive of their third and winning goal. Barrett, Meagher and Ross hooked the best for "Irish" but it was the strong Albert defence in front of McGillicuddy in keeping that stood up on soft shoty ice to win.

The lineups:

St. Mike's: Goal, Flynn; defence, Feels and Mohert; centre, E. Barrett; wings, Meagher and Graham; subs, J. Barrett, Meagher and Loaft.

Albert College: Goal, McIntosh; defence, Rikes and christie; centre McCullough; wings, Merkley and Riley; subs, Peck, Tougher, Solomon and Lindsay.

Referee: "Speedy" St. Louis.

Toronto, March 10 — (CP)—Alberta's thoroughbred breeders have decided that as long last they are going to do something about hockey-makers, and so formed a committee.

Prairie Association Ltd. — the Albertans are set to campaign against hockey-makers.

The company is going to ask the Provincial Legislature to put an act giving them permission to take into its own offices for collection and transmission to the part-mutuels at the tracks. If permission in granted the company will operate in Calgary and Edmonton — when race meets are on in those centres.

The breeders believe that downtown offices operated by the company and all the bets going thru the machine will drive the bookies out of business. At the same time the boost in the play at the government supervised mutuels will ultimately result in improved purses for the horsemen. From the public point of view it would be L.O.R.A. should look into the suggestion.

The association adds that it does not think that a man can operate a book and a horse at the same time. He's got to be forced to quit one or the other. Preferably the former.

No Kid-ing:

Unionville is a town in Ontario from whence springs as novel a game as we've come across in all the record books. It's called goat-ball — and we're not kidding.

Patterned along the lines of hockey the game uses a live goat instead of a puck. The idea is to try to drive — shoving or coaxing personalities — the goat into the opposing team's net.

However a few improvements have to be made on the old. The goat put over on the players and when he was "shot" into the centre ice before the breathless fans, Billy — or was it Nanny — jumped on the ice. It's rumored the goat just could not "stand" the game.

Leafs Strengthen Playoff Hopes With Dave Kerr

Toronto Management Signs Former New York Ranger Goalie to Help McCool

By EDDIE LEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto Maple Leafs have a definite chance to grab off a playoff berth in the Stanley Cup playoffs.

More than a week before the first puck is scheduled to be dropped in the world series of hockey finals, Leafs are on the lookout for playoff insurance and the moves they have found it in durable Dave Kerr, veteran goalie who won the Stanley Cup champion New York Rangers in 1939-40.

Not that there is anything wrong with Goalie Frank McCool, Cleon Hap Day and Manager Conn Smythe. Kerr worked out with Leafs yesterday. McCool is top candidate for Rookie S; the year award but having Kerr available and in condition may prove helpful in the playoffs.

And Kerr, 34 years old, has had a good deal of experience in the Leaf lineup despite the fact he has appeared only in two edition games—the Moose Eccleston Memorial game in 1943 and the Lindsay show a couple of weeks ago—since he retired three years ago.

Calgary-born McCool tonight, will face the fire of the playoff hungry Boston Bruins when they attempt to break their fourth-place tie with Chicago Black Hawks at the Boston Garden.

Toronto haven't won since Feb. 17 and will play without Frank Mario, out for the balance of the season with a leg injury, and Johnny Crawford, star defenceman. Both were injured Thursday night when Bruins lost 3-2 to Montreal Canadiens.

Canadiens, who came out of that game without defenceman Frank Eddolls, who also suffered a leg injury, take on New York Rangers at Montreal.

Leafs travel to Detroit for a Sunday clash with Red Wings, Canadiens host Rangers tomorrow in New York and Hawks visit Bruins to round out the weekend schedule.

BARONS DEFEAT ST. LOUIS FLYERS

(By The Canadian Press)

It was a close shave for the circuit-leading Cleveland Barons on their visit to St. Louis Thursday as they managed after three periods of furious play to defeat the trailing St. Louis Flyers 4-3 in overtime.

Putting up their final appearance for the season at St. Louis, the Barons soon realized they had before a fight on their hands as all attempts to score in the first stanza were foiled.

In the second period, a St. Louis drive netted the Flyers two goals, the first by Vic Stroud and the second by Vic Lynn.

Cleveland responded in evening the score one minute before the end of the period on counters by Leo Trudel and Fraser. Then a few seconds later, the Flyers took a 3-2 lead.

The Flyers were in no condition to stop third period rushes, the terrific attacks of the Barons, playing a spectacle game, allowed the puck to slide into their net twice.

Tonight Cleveland meets Buffalo at Buffalo, while Indianapolis Capitals play at Hershey and Providence Reds at Pittsburgh.

Stranger (to golfist)—Pardon me, but what's the idea of this game?

Knickered Boy—Very simple. Just hit the ball with this club and try to knock it into that hole over there with the flag in it. Try it.

A mighty swing, a hunk divie of three hundred and twenty yards. The ball ceases to light and comes to a stop only three inches from the hole.

Stranger (sobbing) — Darn it! I missed it.

It wasn't a threat, either, as Donlin remained out until midseason of 1911, when he returned as a pinch-hitter and extra outfielder for the Giants until traded to Boston.

Remember when

Boston's Battling Bruins went into first place in the American section of the National Hockey League with a 3-2 victory over Rangers at New York 16 years ago tonight. The win was 20-flash in the pan for Art Ross' boys went through to win the Stanley Cup and Rangers were their opponents in the finals, losing two straight games.

Oshawa Too Good:

The Oshawa "Bees" downed Kingston Westerns 6-3 at Oshawa in the Limestone City Thursday night and enjoy a one-goal lead in the final Memorial Cup series for the second game tonight. Maybe it's just as well the local Bears didn't tangle with the Oshawa "Seconds". According to reports the Oshawa Generals will have no part of the Motor City "Bees" in a proposed exhibition game. Works as though Ric' George Campbell will have to lower his hockey dignity and commence hauling the drums for a junior "B" team for a change.

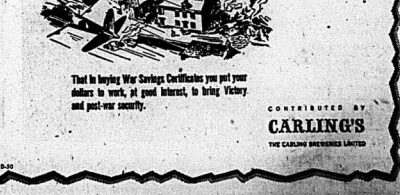
The inaugural game in 1944 was played in the Polo Grounds with Coach Mack coaching the East to a 6-0 victory over the West squad which was coached by Mel Ott.

The sixteen outstanding boy baseball players, under 18 years of age, selected in cities east of the Mississippi, will comprise the East team in this year's game with 16 from west of the Mississippi making up the other squad.



Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 527
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You needn't test your brain to learn the meaning of a jump. It merely shows a Bridge player has code it in a hurry. The high jumper also boost of length, without much promise as to elevation.

A jump is a bid with a higher-than-necessary number. If only one higher, it is a "one-jump;" if two higher, it is a "double-jump;" if three higher, it is a "triple—or high-jump."

All jumps show tricks enough to help make a game; a higher than one-jump guarantees length; the higher the jump, the less strength; an immediate one-jump also shows two sure tricks.

Thus, an immediate one-jump guarantees two sure tricks in enough tricks to help make a game; neither denies nor adopts length in suit.

Thus, a double-jump guarantees a long suit with tricks enough to help make a game; admits having some strength in high cards.

Thus, a triple—or high-jump guarantees a long suit with tricks enough to help take a game; denies having more than two sure tricks; admits strength in high cards.

Take a hand like this:

♠ A Q J 3
♥ K 9 7
♣ A 8 4 3

If partner, opening with one heart and you have the above hand, your first response is a one-jump to two spades. It shows tricks enough to help make a game, inclusive of two sure tricks and a spade suit that is at least biddable.

Change your small spade to a small heart and your first-response is a one-jump to three hearts. It would show tricks enough to help make a game, inclusive of two sure tricks and adequate heart support. The fact that you assisted would deny having a biddable suit takeout.

A jump is a jump for all that.

Hollywood and Here

By KYE BOSSEN

Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger, producers of "A Canterbury Tale," an excellent British-made drama, will shortly make "A Matter of Life and Death," a film to be based on the Declaration of Independence.

This is the first British picture to be made about American history. It's about an RAF pilot who blacks out and goes before the bar of justice where his right to survive is judged by a British and American jury.

Here is really the beginning of something new. But if Hollywood can make films about British history, why can't the British return the compliment? The type of Englishman, portrayed in Hollywood films is not the average one and is often just a caricature with a grotesque accent. It has reminded for some British films as "The Way Ahead" to provide a look at the everyday Old Countryman, a likeable fellow anywhere.

While USA films are busy performing a service for the country in which they originate, such films often unwittingly offer a disservice to the British. Hollywood films shown in countries other than the USA create good will, as witness the welcome accorded the GI Joes everywhere. But many of these films present only the so-called upper class which is unfamiliar as if an English equivalent of Spencer Tracy, Gene Autry, Cowboy, Fox Films, has been nosing around Canadian cities, asking where he was and how he answered: "I keep my eyes open when I'm walking along the streets and in the shops; you never know when you will see just what you want."

Ho ho.

CHIEF OF STAFF KILLED

London, March 10 — (CP) — The German radio announced last night that Lt.-Gen. Wolf Heinrich Ritter Von Xylander, Chief of Staff of an army group on the eastern front, had been killed in action on the same day he received the Knights Cross.

ROATTA RE-ARRESTED

London, March 10 — The Paris radio said today that Gen. Mario Roatta, whose escape last week precipitated an Italian government crisis, had been re-arrested. The broadcast quoted official Rome reports. Roatta escaped while on trial in Rome on war crimes charges. He was Italian Army Chief of Staff under the Fascist regime.

AT THE McCARTHY — Anne Baxter as Evelyn Heath in the fascinating drama, "Guest In The House," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL — A scene from the new attraction, "Swing Hostess" starting at the Capitol Theatre Sunday midnight after 12.05. On the same program Humphrey Bogart in "Passage to Marseille."

"Mrs. Parkington"

Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon match their previous success in "Mrs. Miniver," and "Madame Curie" in their new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer hit, "Mrs. Parkington" which opens today at the Belle Theatre.

This highly popular starring team brings to stirring cinemable life the Rosie and Major Parkington of the best-seller novel on which the picture is based. Suzie is a small-town girl swept off her feet by the dashing, unscrupulous Augustus, self-styled Major Parkington, in a long gay spin with tricks enough to help make a game; admits having some strength in high cards.

Then a double-jump guarantees a long suit with tricks enough to help make a game; admits having some, strength in high cards.

Then a triple—or high-jump guarantees a long suit with tricks enough to help take a game; denies having more than two sure tricks; admits strength in high cards.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(CP Staff Writer)

London, March 10 — (CP) — A combination of old and new ideas in golf came about when Britain's greatest golfer, Henry Cotton, went into partnership as a course designer with Sir Guy Campbell, who has laid out many famed courses in the last 30 years.

The new firm already has been approached for estimates by several clubs. One job in prospect is the laying of a new seaside course on virgin sandhills.

"Sir Guy, of course, knows far more about the technical side of the business than I," Cotton said. "But I can approach the problems from the player's point of view. For instance, a difficult hole is not necessarily a long one. Even a drive-and-pitch hole can be very difficult if properly designed."

On the proposed change in the size of the golf ball which, if adopted, will complicate the problems of course architects," Cotton also has emphatic notions.

"If you must make golf more difficult, changing the ball is the wrong way to set about it," he said. "The better way is to make the courses tougher. My own view is that the standard is already sufficiently high and there is no justification for making any change."

Cotton succeeds Maj.' G. K. Richardson, who died four years ago, in the partnership with Sir Guy. Until a few months ago Cotton was professional at Ashridge, the Hertfordshire country estate of Lord Brownlow and Sir Guy. At Eton, Sir Guy was a cricket captain, oarsman and golfer.

Freddie Mills hit the floor for the first time since he won the British and Empire light-heavyweight championship nearly three years ago when a short right cross lifted him clean off his feet.

He landed on his pants, took an eight-count, then went on to beat his hard-punching opponent, Ken Shaw of Dundee. Mills' knockdown came in the fourth round. The fight was stopped in the seventh with Shaw, 30 pounds the heavier, bleeding from a heavy split in his lip.

It was really Freddie who stopped the fight. After opening the cut, he stood back, dropped his arms and drew the referee's attention to the injury. Shaw was led to his corner and the official verdict was that the referee stopped the contest.

Had the bout continued there was little doubt Mills would have won by a knockout. He threw massive punches, almost non-stop from the time of the knockdown but, at the same time, the match revealed his limitations as a boxer.

He began slowly and for two rounds was outpointed by a man he could stop coming towards him. He took four punches to give one and it was on one of his wide-open, bull-like rushes that Shaw caught him on the jaw.

As one boxing writer said: "Mills is a magnificent puncher. If only he could box."

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being a little steak under a lot of onions and I said, Darn it all, I've got a knot in my handkerchief, and I've been thinking and thinking and darn if I can remember what I tied it to remind me to remember. It's something important, that's all I know, I said.

Then it must of been to remind you to remember not to forget to say Yes in case you're invited to have a second helping of dessert, pop, that's it, I mean it's close enough to remind me what it really was, I said. Here's a whole half of a Man Mountain Nut Bar, in the back of my desk drawr, and it's been there for 2 weeks now somewhere the first thing after supper without letting a moment's grass grow under your feet.

Ert, O, ma, how could I help that, I said. I mean I can depend on you and pop to remind me about my lessons for absolute sure, I said. By some odd chance could it of been to remind you that I've been reminding you for the lessons I have to go and have your hair cut?

No sir, it wasn't that. I said, and ma said, I've got it, it must of been to remind you to arrange your closit into some kind of an orderly semblance of neatness.

Aw, I tell you it was something really important, I said, and pop said, Then it must of been to remind you to remember not to forget to say Yes in case you're invited to have a second helping of dessert.

THE SECRET OF THE MARSHBANKS

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

CHAPTER II

Rebecca came into Cherry's room a little later to find her in bed, looking pale, tired, slightly weary beauty, making notes.

"Listen, Aunt Rebecca, you're something to think about. Mrs. Wellington wants you to go with me to the girls' camp in June."

"Yes?" Cherry asked, her eyes brightening.

"That's nothing. Job. You'd get slightly a month."

"You mean help you manage the camp?"

"Or else I help you," Rebecca was always serene; she looked now as a red apple, bit into it thoughtfully.

"If Mrs. Williams really wants me, I'll go," Cherry said.

Just a week later Cherry sat opposite the judge in his comfortable chambers, the early summer sunlight battering at the windows behind him, the hum of the great courthouse proceeding impressively all about.

"It seems to me that you look extraordinarily well," said the judge.

"You're not going to turn into a handsome woman on us, are you?"

"I'm doing my best. I ought to look well. I'm having the time of my life!"

"It's a success, then? You relieve my mind. I was afraid this appointment meant that something was going wrong."

"Everything's going only too right. I wish I could live with the Pringles forever."

His kindly eyes smiled at her. "From the same place—the camp in Big Death—you wanted to see me about?"

"No, not unless you object. Bess and I can't wait to pack. We go next Tuesday, and the girls begin to come in Saturday."

"Then what was the trouble, Cherry? Your letter said trouble."

"It's this. Amy came down to see me Wednesday, well, I didn't know she was going to, she wanted to tell me all about it, but she said this Nave ensign she's so crazy about."

"Yes, but why bother us, my dearest Aurora that? You like Amy?"

"I do like Amy, Amy's my-for course twenty cousins altogether, Amy and I. But one thing is—one thing is that nobody could ever like me to see Amy too much. She asked me—she practically asked me—not to come to the house any more."

A shadow came over the genial face; the judge's forehead contracted a little.

"My mother did?"

"Yes, she said it wasn't—decent." "Hm!" The judge said, gravely enough. "I'm sorry she did that. You know how much we all like you, and what reason I have for thinking that she wanted to make up to you. Fred was saying only a day or two ago that you'd forgotten us."

"I'll never forget you! But there's more in that than meets the eye—I'm while your brother was talking to me, I reached the house before Amy did and I was in my room, reading, and your mother came in and said much she never resented my being there."

"How much did Amy hear?"

"Well, your mother had just said that if I didn't break off all my relationships there, she'd have to let everyone know, and Amy too, that we were sisters, and she said that would hurt my father, and my mother, too. And I said that that meant injuring the reputation of her own son! Amy heard that."

"And guessed the rest?"

"Guessed that it was you, instead of your brother Fred. After your mother left your door and that she always had suspected that I was—" Cherry's throat thickened, she looked at him imploringly—"that I was your daughter."

"Lee," he said tenderly.

"I didn't contradict her — I couldn't say anything! I kept trying to think which would be worse, telling her, or letting it go and hating myself for it. You see—"

"I see you're in Los Angeles then?"

"Yes. And then I went to Palo Alto and didn't see you, and I knew your mother cared very much about keeping it from Amy than anything else, and—I suppose that Amy wouldn't talk. But now Amy's coming, and she wants me to come to spend the night with her next Saturday, and go to the Queen Anne Ball, and I don't know what to do!"

"My mother's a proud woman, Cherry," the judge said, after a silence. "She's had a sad life, by father's illness ended her social interests, after twenty years in which her position had been everything to any woman , wants — big house, opera box, jewels, Europe. Two years later my young married sister died in childbed, and that ended interest her; she's never been the same. The baby died, too, it was a strapping baby, but there was a setback at the time; Fred was married, and she was a good deal alone with my invalid father. She had quickened in Fred's son Dan Prancicy; she seemed to have nothing left. Virgil's wife was heiress to all this money and I have, but she was a delicate girl and years went by and there was no child. Fred was restless and unhappy and altogether things were not by any to good shape when I decided to give up Washington and come home."

"My mother had been living in an apartment hotel and hating it. Fred and his wife, Amelia, had had a little place in Burlingame. But after years, five or six years, I think, she was going to have a baby, and everyone was anxious that this time it should go right. Old Wellington, her father, was in command of affairs, and he was going to move on from New York for the baby's birth, and nursing for the baby. Fred, who'd been restless and unsatisfied, settled down all of a sudden, I suppose, like the rest of the city house by this time, and they were all together. The baby was coming in November—"

"I know, I'm four days older than Amy," Cherry, listening absently, put in as he paused.

"Yes, and in two months too soon. That's all part of the story. Well! My wife said I and Miss Gregg got like just a week or two before Amy was born, and what we learned was rather confusing. It seems that Emma's sister, Charlotte Jane Hayes—Emma's younger than she was sometimes at the house, and that Fred had been this girl and had taken advantage of her. Emma knew nothing of it until almost the end of term. Lottie came to her and told her. Emma fell that no baby should be born, her sister's secret must be kept now, of all times, when Fred's wife, who, was in any too strong, was expecting her own baby any day.

"But poor little Lottie couldn't bear it. One night she suddenly appeared in my brother's room, as he was reading to his wife, and accused him of having ruined her life!"

"If I was the baby," Cherry said, hardly breathing, "I must have been born just about that time, too."

"You were only a few days old, Cherry, because Lottie, was perhaps weak and feverish, hardly knowing what she was doing."

"But she didn't," Cherry came to the house. She'd have been too weak."

"She may have been in the house with Emma. I have always considered that Emma was there and the baby was born there. However it was, she rushed into Amelia's room, and there was a sad scene. Amelia, gentle, dignified little thing that she was, it must have been a fearful shock. She'd lost all control of herself; she was sobbing bitterly, . . ."

"But she say anything about the baby?"

"Amelia never knew about the baby. Of course, I don't know what she said," the judge admitted, after a thoughtful pause, "but when she said it, I didn't last long, for she died—and when she came to she was very ill, and the baby was born with only an hour. Emma and her nursing down and took Lottie away, and a few days later Emma left my mother, and she and Lottie went to live somewhere in the country."

"Fred was killed in a motor smash a few years later, and Amelia didn't survive long. My mother took charge of Amy, and the money my brother left for you I administered as best as I could. Emma had sent her sister to the school of Saint Dorothea's for a while, when she was little but Lottie hated it and came back. The school of character as the catalogue says, and she never went back there."

"And I hope," the man finished, smiling, "that character is exactly what you've got, Cherry. I look to you for great things. About this matter of my mother," said the judge, beginning after a thoughtful silence, "she doesn't want Amy to be distressed by this, and she'll not speak of it again about it. You come to the house when you like, give Amy such friendship as you can and leave the rest to me."

Cherry was standing; she came over to his chair, bent over him swiftly, and he felt her warm lips against his forehead.

"I love you! There's never any trouble for anyone when you are with me," she said, and was gone! . . .

"Oh, the relief, Kelly!" she wrote him from camp. The relief of doing something you simply don't want to do, and having it over, and your soul as clear as a bell! The Wellington people, and the usual and things stay as they are! . . .

When, will you see me? When coffee with you, and some delicious weeks before that, as soon as we are settled, Rebecca and I and a darling girl named Lucie Parge are going on a wild cruise. Up to Victoria—we'll actually be out of America, imagine!—and on the way Victoria we're going to stay with Lucie's grandmother, who has a darling house on the Malahat Drive, climb Cowichy, and far from Aunt Emma's place; it's only about thirty miles. I've written Aunt Emma that I'm coming over to see her.

"I wrote you that I've made the entrance exams and am admitted; the credits to spare too, so score one for Saint Dorothea's! Life is exciting.

And she signed it "Your devoted and obedient Marshbanks."

But despite high spirits she dreaded the visit to Aunt Emma, was glad that it was to be put off until the end of the holiday.

In the days that she and Rebecca and Lucie drove along the ocean coast, and, later, in the mountains, and through valleys where great rivers raced, it was all glorious and restful and exciting. To have climbed that steep stair at the kitchen door of the Pringle house in a quiet California town and to descend from it in the bright, bright, have been an English city was a sort of miracle, Cherry felt when they were back in California with the great mountains and the days of laughter and adventure behind them. Cherry felt herself older, wiser, braver, and the shock of the little instinctive wincing of her spirit at the thought of encountering Emma again, and of the old atmosphere that was going to seem presently herself at the door of Emma's cabin, with nothing to do but sit and talk with Emma, made her.

Emma lived in a lumber country. Cherry, for her drive to thirty miles, passed through a small city like the other girls with Lucie's grandmother.

Presently Emma's main room was half-open; there were no locks and bolts in this charming cabin of the forest. Cherry, she walks rough pine floors, bare of rugs, the furnishings simple and useful and homemade. There were cruising cabinets and shelves before a cold fire-place in which a pyramid of dry sticks stood.

Emma had been lying on the couch, evidently napping; she was startled, but pleasantly enough, but without an embrace, and, put the girl into a chair at the hearth while she started a fire and lighted one dim brewers lamp.

"Cherry," she said suddenly, "I wanted to see you, I'd rather tell you before I write you. I'm going to be married."

Cherry stared at her in amazement, laughed delightfully.

"Lieutenant!"

"No. A man I used to know twenty years ago. . . . You've never heard his name, my dear. He's not an American: we shan't live in America."

"Aunt Emma! But who is he?"

The plain face flushed as Emma turned from stirring the fire.

"I'd rather you didn't know," Cherry sat back, snubbed and humiliated. "I'm sorry," she said stiffly.

"I don't mean it the way you think, dear," Emma pursued, in her nervously fashion. "I mean that it will be better for you and Amy if you don't. I shall lock the door, get into my car and drive away. . . . You're friends here, although they're all kindly neighbors. I'll meet—my friend next week, be married, sell my car and go away. It's better so."

"But, Aunt Emma, why?" the girl said, recovered from her momentary setback, and full of sympathy, "Even if it's only to write each other, once a year, it's something. You're not . . . the bashful sa at an absurdity. "You're not trying to hide something, are you?"

"I've hidden something for twenty years," Emma said quietly. In the shadows Cherry could not see her face. "It touches you nearer than it does Amy, but you are young," she continued. "I want you to know it, Cherry. But I do not know the difference in the way you live, and what you feel and do. What I did was wrong, whether it's a private offense or not I don't know. I'm telling that. I'm risking your not caring enough, or anyone's caring enough, to follow me—to have me write to tell you in a few words."

Cherry sat staring, her face colorless, her eyes blazing, her lips unable to utter a sound.

"I don't think I heard what you said," Aunt Emma—Cherry said faintly, after a long while.

"Yes, you heard me," Emma said. She repeated what she had said before. "You ought to know—not Emma—but me, Lottie Marshbank, you aren't Charlotte Rawlings at all, Cherry. You ought to know that you're Amelia Marshbank—but—"

Cherry swallowed with a dry gulp, and seemed to speak, failed.

"You said, Aunt Emma—?" she stammered after a silence and pause. "You didn't say that I'm Amy . . ."

Lottie failed her again. The other woman looked at her somberly.

"I'll tell you what happened," Emma said in her unemotional voice. "It was twenty years ago that wild horses couldn't drag it out of me. But you're different. Time was when I wanted everybody good to know. I'm not going to Amy Marshbanks. But she isn't like Lottie; she isn't like her mother, she's proved, superficial; proud as her grandmother is. They've made her like that. Will let it go.

"I went down to the city last week to see the judge about money my cousin Fred the bank," Emma pursued. "I have it all in securities now. I have had it for years with me. When I called at the Marshbanks' house, and I was going up the stairs with two other girls she saw me waiting there in the hall; she didn't even give me a nod. 'It's just one of Granny's old servants,' she said, I think I made up my mind at that minute to tell you that you're the one who ought to have the money, you're the one who ought to be going to the dances and to Honolulu and to Europe!

"It won't do any good, Cherry. You're no proof. Lottie Rawlings kept Lottie, and she's been dead fifteen years.

Silence. Silence. After a while Emma's voice again:

"It was twelve years older than Lottie; my mother died when she was two. She was pretty she was my Amy is, only slighter and smaller, with Amy's fair hair. After my father died we lived with an Aunt and Uncle; they weren't always kind to me, but everyone adored Lottie. When my Aunt died I kept house for my uncle and Lottie was my baby. When she was six I took her to her first school. I did her hair and dressed her.

"My father was John Rawlings; we moved over the river to Troy, and when he died and my uncle and Lottie moved to nineteen then; Lottie was all I had left.

"Well, I married Tom Stanley, and he was a father to Lottie. She was ten, and pretty as a picture. One Sunday we were driving along comfortably, Lottie squeezed in between Tom and me on the front seat and suddenly a big truck smashed in on us from the left. Tom was dead at the wheel; I was almost broken in two. But little Lottie was protected by our bodies.

"Three months later I went to the Marshbanks. I met St. Dorothea's, and I left Troy. I got my position; was a sister to Lottie's children. I didn't tell Lottie's friends in the Irishwoman who had been Lottie's nurse her other, Amelia Marshbank.

"When she was old enough to go to Saint Dorothea's, nine, Lottie's little boarding school in Belmont. Summers she had a camp, and she was happy and good and prettier and prettier.

"Fred Marshbanks, your father was one of the handsomest men I ever saw. I fell—Lottie fell—madly in love with him. He was a lover of blue eyes and light hair, but for a long time it didn't occur to me that couldn't be a child, and it broke her heart. Just Marshbanks was married, to, Mrs. Jo, Fred's sister, East, and they only saw his little boy now and then. That's Gregory, of course.

CANADA IN GERMANY

Here is one of the typical scenes which Field Marshal Montgomery saw when he visited the Canadian front in Germany with during the initial stages of the Rhine Push. Field battered buildings, but along well-preserved roads, traffic moves up to the front. Sitting behind the wheel of a Canadian car is Canadian or German soil during a brief visit to the Canucks.—(Canadian Army Overseas Photo.)

The War Today—
Nazis Cannot Hold Out Long When Allies Cross Rivers in Large Force

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The U. S. 1st Army's sensational crossing of the Rhine at Remagen from temperature to fluctuating violently again and everybody says it's hooey now down the drain will be over.

Well, in these swiftly changing days the smart prophet hides his light under a bushel. So I'm quite fully admitting that great optimism is warranted. I'm sticking to a couple of things I said in my previous comments, it was this:

I don't believe the Germans can maintain organized resistance very long, once the western Allies and the Russians are across the Rhine and Oder rivers respectively in great force.

Since these main defensive barriers already have been broken, that condition will be fulfilled speedily. The Russians are across the Oder in several places and Manchester is pouring a veritable flood of men and materiel into the Remagen bridgehead. The Germans are so greatly outnumbered on the front west of the Rhine that in general they are also inferior in air power and in equipment of all sorts, that they can't withstand the pressure much longer. It is about to be clamped upon them. The Nazis have maintained some semblance of order and that will mean the virtual end of the war. There will be almost any guerilla activities as of comparatively minor consequence.

Japanese War Yet to be Won

However, there's another and serious aspect to this situation of how soon the war will end. What do we mean by "the war"? I'm afraid too many people think of it as the war in Europe.

Actually, there are two wars. The conflict there is only one section of the war. When the Allies defeat Germany they will have only still have the Japanese to beat.

Some people like to look on Hitler as the arch-devil of our time — and I'm not saying he wasn't a bad enough fiend. However, Japan presents a danger potentially as great as the threat of, another Hitler ever to arise in Europe by Hitler.

The Japs are blessed with all the aggression and brutality of Prussianism, plus barbarism. They themselves, like Hitler, have made it quite clear that their scheme is to bring all Asia under their domination and set it up against the western world — the bottom line of cost in conflict with Europe.

Now, how will the Pacific war last? Don't let anybody tell you he can answer that, because he can't.

Marines Repulse Heavy Japanese Infiltration

Guam, March 10—(AP)—United States Marines have repulsed heavy Japanese infiltration attacks on Iwo Island and made small advances of their own, a Pacific fleet communique announced today.

Third division Marines drove to the northern beaches of the island yesterday and continued to expand their hold on the shoreline today.

The Japanese infiltration attacks were supported by heavy enemy mortar fire, but all were knocked down.

Repulse of the enemy was immediately followed by a general Marine attack, supported by land-based fighters, carrier planes, and Marine artillery.

"Resistance appeared to be diminishing although the enemy is holding prepared, strongpoints tenaciously," the communique said.

As the Iwo divisions of Marines neared the sea on the north, the Japanese were forced to come out and battle with grenades, small arms and knives.

Marine Air Force pilots had noted increased activity by the enemy and welcomed it as perhaps signalling "the beginning of the end."

Toronto, March 15 (CP) — A total of 987 agricultural loans amounting to $3,546,177 were paid off during 1946 in Ontario, Provincial Treasurer Leslie Frost said in his budget speech yesterday.

WHOLE RHINELAND IS FLAMING—YANKS CROSS THE RIVER BELOW COLOGNE—TOWNSFOLK BY THOUSANDS SURRENDER

As Yanks blazed away with their rifles at enemy targets across the Rhine they used the railing of a riverside cafe as a rifle rest.

Here is a view from an elevation of the Rhineside town of Remagen where the First Army of Lieut.-Gen. Courtney Hodges scored a history making crossing of Germany's greatest water barrier. Remagen is about 23 miles northwest of Coblenz and is the site of a major Rhine bridge, which may have been captured intact. A special task force of the First Army made the initial crossing and established a bridgehead from which First Army spearheads are now driving towards the heart of the Reich.

Here is a scene similar to that being enacted in towns all along the flaming Rhineland. This one is a street in newly-captured Trier. German civilians, hands in air, surrender. Even the mint, in front, surrenders. "I luffs you all like brudders" says the pose of the fellow leading the surrender parade, while the chappie at left evidently didn't have time to shave off that Hitler brush before joining the give-up march.

A resident of Bitburg, Germany, wearing a high hat and a broad grin, celebrates the arrival of the Allies in his city. His possessions in a box and basket are being transferred from bombed out home to a place of safety.

GERMAN CIVILIANS ROUNDED UP

German civilians—young and old—are guarded by an American soldier as they sit outside their homes after being rounded up by a tank-destroyer crew of U. S. Ninth Army. The grey-haired woman sitting at the Yank's feet holds a loaf of bread.

In the background of this photograph can be seen one of the two vital bridges in the ocean-river suburbs of Duisburg, Germany, for which the U. S. Ninth Army has been battling in its mighty duel for possession of the Rhine banks.

Obviously not too happy about the whole thing is Lieut.-Gen. Baldwin Graf von Rothkirch un Trach, commanding general of the German 53rd Corps, who was captured with his whole staff by the U. S. 9th Armored Division, commanded by Maj.-Gen. Hugh J. Gaffey.

The bombing was visual. Clear weather prevailed over the target. Fires were visible for 85 miles.

Superforts from Saipan, Tinian and Guam participated. This was first announced use of Guam as a B-29 base.

YANKS CONTROL 8 TOWNS EAST OF RHINE

Huge Forces of Reds Shifting to Berlin Front

May Be Prelude To Red Offensive To Join West Allies

Russian Armies Advancing Towards Danzig and Gdynia

By RICHARD KASISCHKE
(AP Staff Writer)

London, March 13 — (AP) — The Russians were reported carrying out a large-scale regrouping of armies today preparatory to another massive shove on the Berlin front aimed at linking up with allied armies somewhere in the Elbe Valley in the heart of Germany.

Already, the Germans said today, the Russians were broadening their attacks, east of Berlin. Four additional divisions, with tank support, attacked repeatedly in a broad front between the two Oder River fortresses of Kuestrin and Frankfurt, the German radio said.

Moscow, March 12 — (AP) — The Red Army Supreme Command began to shift large forces to the Berlin front today after completing the mopping up resistance between the mouths of the Oder and Vistula Rivers.

Only a small chunk of territory at the northern extremity of Pomerania and the Baltic littoral remained to be overrun by Marshal K. K. Rokossovsky's armored and guards hordes that were available for command of a vital sector of the front facing the German capital.

It seemed obvious that he again would take a place on Marshal Georgy K. Zhukov's right flank, from which he wheeled across East Prussia in mid-January and then drove into Pomerania, little more than a month later.

Greatest Red Concentration

The regrouping of Russian strength was expected to mass the greatest concentration of men and guns for offensive operations since the red banner was first carried over German soil.

Zhukov now mans more than a 130-mile stretch of the Oder from where it enters the Baltic to its eastward bend north of Fuerstenberg. On his left flank Marshal Ivan S. Konev holds the Neisse River line from its confluence with the Oder to the Sudeten foothills, a distance of about 70 miles.

Bringing up the bulk of Rokossovsky's 2nd White Russian Army from Pomerania and the East Prussian Corridor zone to the Oder line was seen as another indication that to Russian dispositions for the next offensive.

Foreign observers in Moscow believe the great German river Elbe, water link between Prague and the North Sea port of Hamburg, will be as significant in early Spring operations by the Red Army as was the Vistula last Summer and the Oder since January.

The Elbe runs from south to north across the heart of Germany, passing 55 miles west of Berlin and only 40 miles east of Berlin for more than a month.

If the broad front of the Russian fighting men are realized, Berlin may become only an isolated pocket of resistance to be liquidated while the main front rolls on to a juncture with Allied armies.

Little more than 300 miles now separate the Allies on the Rhine front from the bridgeheads on the Oder. Another view here is that the real decision in the battle of Germany will be between Russian, American and British-Canadian forces joining up after splitting Germany in two.

Moscow announced last night that Red Army units had thrust a column almost to the Baltic midway between Danzig and Gdynia, held ports of Danzig and Gdynia, capturing Koelln, eight miles from the coast. German accounts insisted, however, that the lit.-line between the two cities was still intact.

Capture of Gdynia and Danzig would complete the task, with only Pillau and Koenigsberg, on the opposite side of Danzig Bay, as separate ports from the coast of thousands of German troops trapped in Western Pomerania, the Danzig free city area and East Prussia.

NOT A CANDIDATE

Rio de Janeiro, March 12 (AP) — President Getulio Vargas announced yesterday he would not be a candidate in Brazil's forthcoming elections and that he had withheld ports of Danzig and Gdynia, capturing Koelln, eight miles from

ALLIED BOMBERS ATTACK STETTIN TO SUPPORT REDS

Baltic U-Boat Base Of Swinemuende Also Hit by 200-Mile-Long Train of Bombers

By HENRY B. JAMESON
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, March 13 (AP)— More than 2,000 United States planes slashed a wide path across northern Germany today with the main force of 1,500 bombers blasting military and naval installations on the Baltic coast in direct support of the Russian armies.

The German radio said the Pomeranian capital of Stettin and the West U-boat and naval base at Swinemuende, 35 miles northeast of Stettin, were the largest.

An 8th Air Force announcement credited Allied bombers based in Britain with laying waste to more than 650 square miles of the Ruhr.

Swinemuende is the naval base and outer harbor for Stettin and is only 15 miles from where the most advanced Russian troops were Rat reported. Red army troops meanwhile are hammering at the gates of Stettin.

Bombardier Split Up

The remainder of the bomber fleet split up over Germany's vast yards behind the desolated Ruhr valley, the 8th Air Force announcement said.

Knocking out Swinemuende would hamper the sea supply route to the Stettin front. The rail and river links between Stettin and Berlin already are badly battered.

The 1,500 force sent out on the 26th successive day of attacks on Germany was better than 1,250 way bombers with an escort of 750 fighters.

In addition to the Baltic attacks other heavies battered half-a-dozen targets in the Frankfurt-on-Main and the Ruhr which turn on the bulk of the German war materials. They included Bingen, Koblenz, Dillenburg, Wiziar, Pfriedberg and Siegen.

JAPS ARE CHASED INTO HILLS ON MINDANAO IS.

Zamboanga Airdrome 200 Miles From Borneo Principal Objective of Invasion

Manila, March 12 — (AP)—United States infantrymen invaded the southwest tip of Mindanao Island Saturday after a disastrous naval and air bombardment and chased the Japanese garrison into the hills as they captured four towns in a quick sweep toward the Zamboanga municipal centre and a strategic airdrome only 200 miles from Borneo.

Announcing this 12th Island invasion of the Philippines, a communique today said the operation strengthened the American stockade of the South China Sea and recovered Japan from her rich holdings in the East Indies.

Tokyo radio said the Japanese garrison was engaged in "fierce fighting" and reported without confirmation that Americans landed Thursday on Sulman Island, across the 12-mile Basilan Strait from Zamboanga.

Infantrymen of the U. S. 8th Army hit the beaches about four miles west of the Zamboanga city centre after warships and bombers had plastered the area with explosives and mines had been swept from the strait.

Opposition was light.

Swiftly they seized the coastal villages of San Mateo, San Jose, Calarian and San Roque and sped toward nearby Wolfe airdrome and the civic centre of Zamboanga.

Covers Entire Area

The Americans actually were in Zamboanga city the moment they stepped ashore, for the city covers the entire end of the Zamboanga peninsula, about 600 square miles. In area it is one of the largest cities in the world. Its population is about 132,000.

Mindanao, where guerillas have been extremely active for years, is the second largest of the Philippines and the most southerly, lying between 5 and 10 degrees. Its principal city and port, Davao, is on the east coast 40 miles from the Celebes Sea.

Gen. MacArthur said "we now control the entire length of the western shores of the Philippine Islands, from the northwestern tip of Luzon to the southwestern tip of Mindanao, a distance of approximately 600 miles.

Blockade Intensified.

"The blockade of the South China Sea is closer than ever before and all the Japanese conquest to the south and west is isolated.

Mindanao is 1,200 miles north of the Netherlands East Indies and slightly more than, that northeast of Singapore.

Oni Lasam Island, meanwhile, U.S. troops pressed their systematic reduction of Japanese caves and pill-boxes along the bitterly-contested anti-Davao-Wayne line of the Maritima watershed east of Manila.

King Rests After Weekend Parley With President

Williamsburg, Va., March 12 — (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King rested today from the affairs of state after weekend conferences at Washington with President Roosevelt which will be resumed tomorrow.

The Prime Minister told The Canadian Press that after his talks with the President Friday evening and Saturday he retired and that he relations between the United States and Canada had never been better. Their conversations had been of great value and although he could not at present disclose the topics under discussion he probably would make a report to parliament at its next session.

Mr. King is a frequent visitor at this quiet old former capital of Virginia, and will remain here until tomorrow night, when he leaves for Washington. He will remain in the capital until Wednesday night, when he will depart for Ottawa.

24 Hours At White House

The Prime Minister spent more than 24 hours at the White House—from Friday afternoon until Saturday night—and presumably most of the time was devoted to talks with Mr. Roosevelt. It was thought possible that the attitude of Canada and other "middle powers" at the United Nations Conference at San Francisco next month was among the topics discussed. Members of his secretarial staff and Norman Robertson, Under Secretary of State for External Affairs, were called in during the day.

The Prime Minister's only other official calls Saturday before he left Washington were at the British Embassy and the naval hospital at Bethesda, Md., where he saw the former Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, who has been ill.

Mr. King is enjoying almost summer-like weather during his stay here.

Vichy Ambassador To Japan Requested To Cease Functioning

London, March 12 (AP) — The Berlin, radio quoted s. Tokyo dispatch today as declaring the Vichy French ambassador in Japan, Henri Cosme, has been requested by the Japanese foreign minister to "cease his functions".

The broadcast said the French ambassador would no longer be allowed to "send code messages, but his movements, presumably, will not be restricted."

A German broadcast yesterday of a Tokyo dispatch said Amman, secretariate of French Indo-China where the Japanese have taken full control, has proclaimed its independence from France, and pledged "close co-operation with Japan."

CANADIANS POISE THREAT TO REICH OPPOSITE WESEL

At Shortest and Quickest Route for Link-up With Russian Armies

With the 1st Canadian Army On the British Front, (CP) — Seasoned campaigners of Gen. Crerar's 1st. Canadian Army poised a deadly threat to the heart of Germany today as they lined the west bank of the Rhine opposite Wesel, gateway to the north German plain.

Across the river, where the Germans intensified their defence system hourly, lay the shortest and quickest route for a link-up with the Russian armies already ripping Germany's vitals on the east.

Alive to the menace from west the German had defended the Wesel triangle with their best troops for a week but yesterday collapsed at 10 p.m. Saturday and Canadian and British troops had finished their job west of the great water barrier.

Their troops had cleared 40 miles of the river's best bank from Nijmegen, Holland, where they jumped off February 4 in the pay-off attack, to Wesel. Coupled with previous advances to the south, the smashing of the Wesel pocket, in which the American 9th Army collaborated, gave the Allies 150 miles of the Rhine's west bank from a mile north of Cobleno to The Netherlands border.

Germans Hold Rhine

Along the Rhine, especially from the Emmerich and Wesel area, the Germans now are shelling Allied front roads to Zuker and Xanten. Canadian and British counter-battery work is being stepped up, however, and more German batteries are being engaged in the cross-river exchanges.

In the final surge Saturday, the 1st. Canadian army took 500 to 600 prisoners to bring to about 21,000 their total for the offensive. Nearly twenty straggliers were picked up yesterday in the eliminated Wesel bridgehead and the final prisoner count for the operation is expected to reach 21,500.

10,000 Paratroopers Taken

Nearly 10,000 of these prisoners were paratroopers—the best the German had there was. It was two divisions of parapraons, backed by the most violent artillery fire yet seen over the Rhine in the Wesel triangle. Indeed these paratroopers were considered even better than the crack S.S. (Elite Guard) troops the Canadians previously had smashed at Caen and Falaise in Normandy last Summer.

Fighting through the last miles to the Rhine was an even stickier job. But they, cleared 9½ vital miles of the river where it bends between captured Xanten and Wesel, seven miles to the east. The German immediately began working frantically on the east bank defences.

INCENDIARY BOMBS BY THOUSANDS POUR ON NAGOYA

300 B29s Speed Over Target at 5,000 Feet To Convert Large Area Into Inferno

Guam, March 12. (AP)—Speeding over their target at 5,000 feet, 300 B29s pounded 2,500 tons of incendiary bombs on Nagoya, Japan's greatest plane-producing centre, and third largest city, today.

Tokyo said fires started raging in es which converted a five-square-mile area into an inferno and raged unchecked hours afterward. Radio Tokyo admitted the flames burned 10 hours, but claimed they were controlled by then.

The first Superfortresses struck Nagoya just after midnight, Tokyo time—barely 66 hours after a record 2,300-ton incendiary raid on a 31-square mile area of Central Tokyo. Fires from Saturday's blaze continued to burn when the Japanese capital.

Some of the first pilots returning from Nagoya said the raid did not appear as destructive as Saturday's incendiary blast in the heart of Tokyo. However, many saw only the target briefly and the last crew said they could see little for 30 miles.

Produces Many Planes.

Nagoya now produces 40 to 50 per cent or all of Japan's planes and combat plane engines. Unofficially, vital to Japan's aerial warfare, was not the only prime target. Also in the bombed area were factories producing important rail road equipment, machine tools, bearings, tanks, motor vehicles and aircraft engines. Nagoya, in fact, was an important port.

Its docks are railroads and rail yards.

Nagoya has a population of 1,500,000, a high percentage of whom are engaged in some phase of aircraft production.

Nagoya had not paralyzed from the incendiary blast, however. Fighting fires began in Tokyo shortly after the new attack and fires in the rivers, canals and a few wide streets were left to burn.

Radio Tokyo, increasingly less informative with each broadcast, said in its latest report that "fires were started at several points in a Nagoya area" and that there was no hint of the extent. It claimed that 117 of the attacking planes were more than 50 damaged. There was no claim that Tokyo's defenses, with reports still incomplete, no losses had been recorded.

Raid Another Blow

Washington, March 12. (AP) — Superfortresses hit at industrial targets in the Japanese city of Nagoya for the second time in a daylight raid. A medium-sized force of 300 B-29s struck Nagoya's harbor in the big naval base at the tip of the Mikay Peninsula.

The approximately 40 big planes flew in two separate high-level formations of 20th bombers command. There was no immediate announcement of results or of any enemy damage to the assault force.

Only 24 hours before, 300 20th Air Force Headquarters here, came the Superfortress bombers' first successful attack in similar strength against vital rail installations at Kuala Lumpure, some 200 miles north of Singapore, Feb. 24, 1,620 last hit Singapore Feb. 24, when approximately 150 of the big planes participated.

Accept Candidates At Lower Age

Ottawa, March 12 (CP) — Navy Minister Macdonald announced today that candidates for the Royal Canadian Naval College at Royal Roads, B.C., now will be accepted if they are between 15 years and 10 months and 16 years of age on September 1 of the year of entry, which is two years less than previous upper age limit.

Mr. Macdonald, chairman of the Board of Governors of the College, also announced that the first time entrance examination papers were being prepared in both French and English. Applicants also may be examined in Spanish or German instead of French.

Last year 60 candidates were admitted to the college and Mr. Macdonald said it was anticipated at least 80 would be accepted for entry for the two-year course starting next fall.

Extend Bridgehead Several Hundred Yards During Night

Nazis Say More Crossings Made South of Honnef

By JAMES M. LONG
AP Staff Writer)

Paris, March 12 —(AP)— United States 1st Army attacks bulged the three-mile-deep Rhine bridgehead several hundred yards further east during night along a river strip which the Germans said was 12½ miles long.

Lt.-Gen. Hodges had thrown so many men, cannon and tanks into the rugged Westerwald east of Remagen that nothing less than a powerful German counter-attack could budge his forces—and there was no indication that the enemy would be able to organize such a force from the ashes of his defeat west of the Rhine.

The U. S. 3rd Army just to the south dominated all the German west of the Rhine and north of the Moselle river except for two small pockets.

Patten Takes 14 Towns.

Lt.-Gen. Patton's tank and foot troops captured 14 towns and won domination of all the west bank of the Moselle except a 10-mile stretch between Cochem and Enden.

Coblenz was besieged.

Some enemy divisions were being dragged from a two-mile-square pocket in a wood midway in the 16 miles between Mayen and the Rhine. The other pocket was on the Moselle, over which some were filtering into the Saar district.

At dusk yesterday a train of inner Germany east of the Rhine were under American control.

The Germans peppered the bridgehead with light artillery fire during the night but made no new counter-attack.

The extension of the crossing was so complete that the Germans have been unable in five days to muster a counter-attack in any strength, Associated Press correspondent Don Whitehead reported from 1st Army headquarters.

Germans Kept on Run.

Similar Canadian troops of the 1st Canadian Army and U.S. 9th Army troops to the north kept the Germans on the motherhook by maintaining 40-mile smoke screen along the Rhine front. The enemy said a crossing attempt was imminent in the Arnhem-Emmerich-Wesel, where the last enemy parachut troops were driven across the river.

American advances into the rolling hills east of the Rhine were much more high ground from which Germans could have had to look out to Ludendorff bridge. The captured towns were up to five miles north, four south and three east of Erpel—at the east end of the Remagen bridgehead.

A Aztreet battle progressed in the town of Honnef (8,000 population) five miles north of Remagen along the east bank road toward Cologne and the Ruhr. Other 1st army troops were advancing south along the river road beyond Ins (8,250) north of the Ludendorff bridge of the Rhine gorge and inland beyond Linz, Neuwied and Oldenburg into the Westerwald black rock hills.

Though the 1st army still had to cross the mouth of the Moselle river before fighting into the main part of the city. Across the Rhine from Coblenz the troops and smaller rock formations of Ehrenbreitstein provided the enemy with formidable defense positions. Ehrenbreitstein is Germany's Gibraltar of the Rhine.

Fresh troops had been moved into and placated in the Wesel area where the Germans broke pocket guarding 9 1-2 vital miles of the Rhine had been cleared by the Canadian army on Saturday night following collapse of German resistance in the triangle of this area, the Allies now held virtually all German territory west of the Rhine and north of the Moselle.

BRITISH GUNNERS BREACH WALLS OF FORT IN MANDALAY

75-Yard-Wide Moat Has So Far Been Obstacle to Entry of Troops

Calcutta, March 13 (CP) — British 14th. Army artillery has smashed three breaches in the walls of Fort Dufferin in the heart of Mandalay, but the 75-yard-moat so far has proved an effective barrier to the entry of British foot soldiers.

Japanese entrenched in the square mile fort which encloses the Royal Palace are resisting fiercely.

Troops which crossed the Irrawaddy at Myinmu, 40 miles west of Mandalay, scored a major advance after three weeks of hard fighting, reached the vicinity of Myotha, 25 miles across east of Mandalay, and took control of a road leading north to within 13 miles of Mandalay.

A British armor which sprang a coup by slashing to Meiktila, 75 miles south of Mandalay, is having a field day on the network of roads radiating from that strategic base athwart Mandalay's chief communications line than 600 Japanese were killed at two road-blocks on the road to Mahlaing, 20 miles northeast of Meiktila.

Northeast of Mandalay Chinese troops advanced five miles south from Lashio along the railway to within 110 miles of Mandalay and about 30 miles from Hsipaw.

Fifteen Children of Ascoli Family Bedded Down in Montreal Hotel

Montreal, March 12 (CP) — House-hunting and shopping were the immediate concerns of the Ascoli family, settled today in some half-dozen rooms in a Montreal hotel following their arrival last night from Kingston, Jamaica.

The large family may not pose too much of a problem, despite the size of the family and Montreal's accommodation. J. A. Ascoli, 48-year-old father of fifteen children, said that night that as a result of publicity attending their arrival he had been invited to several twelve offers of houses.

The youngsters, all bundle warm clothing, for the warmest Jamaica could provide proved little protection against Montreal's March winds.

Father Ascoli resignedly admitted he would probably have to give in to the girls' desire for fur coats and promised that he hoped that the city could provide enough overshoes to go around.

At any rate, speaking in bilingual Montreal will not present any difficulties for all members of the family speak French and English—not to mention Spanish. Mr. Ascoli can get along in four or five others.

Mr. Ascoli, who came here a few weeks ago to take a position with a Quebec province co-operative association; is a firm believer in a greater diversification of crops and greater market for expanding industries.

Moscow, March 13 — (AP) — The Red Army Supreme Command began to shift large forces to the Berlin front today after completing the mopping up resistance between the mouths of the Oder and Vistula Rivers.

Only a small chunk of territory at the northern extremity of Pomerania and the Baltic littoral remained to be overrun by Marshal K. K. Rokossovsky's armored and guards hordes that were available for command of a vital sector of the front facing the German capital.

It seemed obvious that he again would take a place on Marshal Georgy K. Zhukov's right flank, from which he wheeled across East Prussia in mid-January and then drove into Pomerania, little more than a month later.

Greatest Red Concentration

The regrouping of Russian strength was expected to mass the greatest concentration of men and guns for offensive operations since the red banner was first carried over German soil.

Zhukov now mans more than a 130-mile stretch of the Oder from where it enters the Baltic to its eastward bend north of Fuerstenberg. On his left flank Marshal Ivan S. Konev holds the Neisse River line from its confluence with the Oder to the Sudeten foothills, a distance of about 70 miles.

Bringing up the bulk of Rokossovsky's 2nd White Russian Army from Pomerania and the East Prussian Corridor zone to the Oder line was seen as another indication that to Russian dispositions for the next offensive.

Foreign observers in Moscow believe the great German river Elbe, water link between Prague and the North Sea port of Hamburg, will be as significant in early Spring operations by the Red Army as was the Vistula last Summer and the Oder since January.

The Elbe runs from south to north across the heart of Germany, passing 55 miles west of Berlin and only 40 miles east of Berlin for more than a month.

If the broad front of the Russian fighting men are realized, Berlin may become only an isolated pocket of resistance to be liquidated while the main front rolls on to a juncture with Allied armies.

Little more than 300 miles now separate the Allies on the Rhine front from the bridgeheads on the Oder. Another view here is that the real decision in the battle of Germany will be between Russian, American and British-Canadian forces joining up after splitting Germany in two.

Moscow announced last night that Red Army units had thrust a column almost to the Baltic midway between Danzig and Gdynia, held ports of Danzig and Gdynia, capturing Koelln, eight miles from the coast. German accounts insisted, however, that the lit.-line between the two cities was still intact.

Capture of Gdynia and Danzig would complete the task, with only Pillau and Koenigsberg, on the opposite side of Danzig Bay, as separate ports from the coast of thousands of German troops trapped in Western Pomerania, the Danzig free city area and East Prussia.

Seabees Drive 20-Ton Bulldozer To Summit of Mount Surabachi

Iwo Jima, March 12 (AP)—There was some excitement on this island when a 32ft road was forced up on the southern airstrip but that wasn't a patch on what happened the other day.

A bull-dozer got to the top of Mount Suribachi!

It really did. Thousands of Marines looked and marvelled and some said: "Well, it'll be horn-swoggled."

The Marines were fighting the Japanese in the north and there was the 20-ton bulldozer sitting on the crater of the volcano.

The fact would have been reported sooner except that nobody knew the names of the men who made the history class of the 133-foot high mountain at the southern end of the two.

The men are Seabees Albert L. Patterson, 34, Danville, Ark., and E. C. Cagle, 33, Paula Valley, Okla.

The Seabees have been allotted three weeks to build a road to the summit but Chief Warrant Officer Jack Purcell, Santa Barbara, Calif., gave them the 20-ton road gang said: "We'll have it finished in 10 days easy."

Stamp Selling Campaign Exceeds Objective Here

Coming through in fine style during the last few days of the campaign, Belleville and district more than achieved its objective of $3,000 war savings stamps sales. Food and Allied Industries stamp selling drive was completed with the campaign completed but with complete returns not yet in, Mr. Norman Liddle, chairman of the local campaign, today stated that 33,500 stamps had been sold, up until Saturday night.

This report included schools and stores in Belleville while it was expected that the campaign would from 2,000 to 3,000 stamps would be reported by stores in the outlying districts.

To the stamp selling drive Belleville goes the lion's share of the credit for the Belleville district achieving its objective, according to Mr. Liddle. Total sales in the Belleville public schools, at St. Michael's and at Belleville Collegiate Institute amounted to $2,000 made up by 41 1-2 per cent of the quota sale. Mr. Liddle stated that the sales made by Belleville school children was $2,500.

Commenting with the objective the local campaign the national campaign to sell 13 million stamps was successful with the above objective being surpassed, according to an announcement made Saturday evening from headquarters.

Inebriated Man Treated Money With Contempt

Scattering a roll of bills, which he counted "about a would make a horse" over a section of Lower Front Street pavement, an out-of-town gentleman who had raced on the wine when it was slightly on the scarlet side, provided entertainment for Saturday afternoon shoppers.

Apparently the gentleman in question had been in the liquor department with a friend, a discussion which led to him offering to back his opinion with the long green but when just out of the pocket the money was in his hand, but two and ten's, twenty's and fifty's flew from the hand with the greatest of ease. Pedestrians, pigeons and passing motorists gathered the money and rescued it for its owner.

Pocketing the currency and stuffing it in a capacious pocket in his a janitor would a dust rag, the gentleman turned, jumped into a dilapidated car, and roared down the street, without as much as a thank you.

Last of River Ice Disappears Quietly

Completely ignoring the prophecy of pessimistic weather prognosticators that was the result of abnormal snowfall during the past winter, a flood would be the inevitable this spring, Old Mother Moira shed her last remaining shackles of ice over the weekend and the last little remaining bit of ice from the Canadian Pacific Railway bridge to as far north as Bridge Street.

Favored with ideal weather conditions the ice in the river disappeared gradually and without a sign of the customary jam. Only a few feet of water in the river channel belies the fact that the spring freshets of other years are lacking.

Complete absence of frost in the ground is also responsible for what has been the predominating factor in this spring's run-off. Little or no ice in the river channel despite the fact that the greatest snowfall in years has left but disappeared. With the gradual melting of the snow the dry ground has soaked up the water with the result that the spring freshets of other years are lacking.

Creeks throughout the country district are also tributary to the Moira this year are behaving and as a result the current in the Moira yesterday was considerably below normal.

L. Cpl. S. Reynolds Reported Casualty

Marmora, March 12 — Another of Marmora's young fighting men has been reported a casualty. The name has become a casualty. Lance Corporal Sydney Reynolds, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Reynolds, has been reported slightly wounded in action. This will have meant his third admission into a military hospital within a year. An illness and an injured ankle occasioned previous hospitalization in England. "Clarence," as he is known to his friends, left the employ of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company, Limited, to enlist in the Canadian Army September 30th, 1940. Before proceeding to England, he was also stationed at Petawawa and Camp Borden. He went overseas in early April of last year and in recent letters to friends wrote from Normandy, France. His brother, William, is in hospital in England at the present time with an infected knee. He has been attached to a headquarter's unit of the army, while he is said that he was driving a staff officer that a shell exploded, seriously injuring the two men, the officer the more severely.

MARMORA

FAMILY REUNITED FOR FIRST TIME IN OVER 5 YEARS

Major Percy Gray's Family Circle Complete With the Arrival of Son From Overseas

Marmora — "Sunday will be one Mothering Sunday I'll have cause to remember" said Mrs. Percy Gray of Marmora on Friday evening with the whole family home for the week-end, making the family circle complete for the first time in over five years. Sergt. Robert Gray, original member of the Hasty Pees arrived home on Friday from overseas and his mother spoke truer than before reporting to Kingston. To his many old friends Bobby is a regular boy on the street or whom he welcomes at his home, Bob has to prefer his title of Sergt. to Bobby. The right hand is affected through injuries received in the line of duty, the course of fighting in Holland before Caen. Bobby was in the possibility of further medical treatment affecting a better recovery but for the time being it cannot be undertaken as before. Otherwise the young soldier looks fine and his many friends are five years ago he was five feet nine inches in height and weighed 170 pounds. He has now two and a half inches to his stature and his present weight is 145 pounds.

The fathe, Major Percy Gray who say service with the 21st Battalion in the last war to later transfer to the Machine Gun Corps, is familiar with the Provost Corps at Ottawa and Kingston where he was to join the rest of the family in the happy reunion. Father and son have a lot in common and to see if they had gone over any of the battle fields of the last conflict that they had both been to Armentieres and Vimy Ridge, Ypres and in Italy for a short while before crossing the channel to Holland. Major Gray was in the Somme, Arras and Raymond Nobe, the latter having been awarded the Military Medal for his efficiency as a sniper. He also paid a tribute to Capt. Rev. F. J. Bell, Chaplain of the Hasty Pees at that time for his devotion to duty, during the time returned to Canada last year and preached at Bobby's wedding to Miss Ivy Gray in July while vacationing at Crowe Lake as he had done in pre - war days.

The last Marmora boy Sgt. Gray saw in Holland was Corporal Ernie Wiley, news concerning whom came through on the battle front and was recorded in action. In England before he embarked for home, Bobby met Capt. Rev. Bell and his wife. Sergt. Bell is a native of Belleville, returned to Canada last year and preached at Bobby's wedding to Miss Ivy Gray and is the son of Reeve and Mrs. John A. Bell, Belleville, and Rev. Bell was also a Hasty Pee.

The interesting point came to light in the interview with Sergt. Gray, that he is a cousin of Sergt. William Gray, son of Percy Gray, formerly of Peterboro. The latter is with the Royal Canadian Regt. 21st Battalion and the fact of two Percy Grays being in the same company of the 21st used to lead to some confusion at times.

Bobby is looking forward to a good taste of maple syrup from his father's camp in the spring, the treatment accorded returned men overseas by the Red Cross and Canadian Legion and was able to endorse the sentiments of the latter in every way. Questioned concerning the great value of the Blood Donor service of which he was the beneficiary, Gerbie, who is teaching near Napanee, has written home and put more on the homeward trip.

The Catholic Women's League held their meeting on March 8th in Mr. Campbell's rooms on Forsyth Street with Mrs. Gilmore and Mrs. Dee Gray for a cake donated by Mrs. James Black. Mrs. J. Clairmont was holder of the lucky ticket.

The Sidesmen's Body of St. Paul's Church met on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Pearce with a good attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace J. Neath celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary on Wednesday.

BLUEBIRD DIAMONDS FOR ENGAGED

CCF Amendment To Throne Speech Will Test Govt.

Toronto, March 12 — (CP)—Outstanding among the week's events in the Ontario Legislature, ahead with introduction of the budget, was the unanimous decision of the 38-member Progressive Conservative government of the session's official opposition, C.C.F., to launch the Speech debate in the 90 seat House.

Bringing down of the budget, however, indicated that the decisive issue, if forthcoming at all, will await disposal of the bulk of the session's business. Budget debate is not expected to be sufficiently contentious to bring another split.

Chief significance of Wednesday's double division, in which the government was upheld by C.C.F. votes, was to emphasize the parliamentary attitude rather than to indicate real support of the administration by the official opposition.

Both votes were called by former Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, House Leader of the rejuvenated Liberal group, over the introductory stages of the budget. Mr. Hepburn termed it a government attempt to "throttle" the unfinished Throne Speech debate.

Questions on the stand of the 32 C.C.F. members after the divisions, Leader D. B. Carlin emphatically indicated no withdrawal from the party's attitude of non-confidence in the government as expressed in his address in the Throne Speech debate. The C.C.F. would support more important issue before opposing the government, he said.

The major issue may arise when the House takes up the five-point C.C.F. amendment to the address in reply to the Throne Speech. As the C.C.F. said in their Speech debate, not a majority of House seats, Liberal support of the amendment would cause its passage and place the administration in a difficult situation.

Will Step Out If Defeated

And although Premier Drew, by stating a modification of his government's attitude toward family allowances, over negotiations for Federal Legislation three weeks ago, has assured more than that the administration will step out of office if elected on major issues in the Legislature.

Also before the House is a Liberal amendment to the speech in reply, which in effect assails the government's policies in respect to labor legislation and religious education. Moving the amendment last week, Mr. Hepburn told the House the Liberal party would accept another wartime election if deemed after action necessary to the public interest.

Action on the amendments will probably be deferred for some time, as budget speech and consideration of estimates will occupy much of the time and attention of the Legislature. In addition, more than 15 speakers are still to be heard in the Throne Speech debate.

Most important legislation considered during the week was the proposed new Securities Act, which passed second reading and was referred to the legal bills Committee for further study. The committee, of Ontario Law is slated for further airing in the House following introduction of Mr. Hepburn's 40 bill to amend it. The Liberal leader claims that provisions of the Act allowing regulation of certain advertising practices by the Ontario Optometrical Association are the result of a "political commitment" by the Premier to the Association.

He further asserts that these regulations will make compellable, before the eyeglasses business of the province.

Friction between the National War Labor Board and the Ontario Labor Relations Board, reported early last week, became a subject of the Legislature Thursday when C.C.F. Leader Carlin asked the House to protest a ruling by the National Board against a previous decision of the O.L.R.B. in the case of collective bargaining rights of the Bellevalle and Wright-Hargreaves gold mines in the Kirkland Lake area. All parties agree that the government should make representations to the Federal government to set aside the National Labor code, which sets out the powers of the N.W.L.B.

Payment of Income Taxes Now Advised by K.L. Reid, Inspector

Right now the offices of the Income Tax Department are quiet orderly places, with the staff very busy, smoothly and like any other office these pre-Spring days not overburdened with the pressure of much urgent business.

But a week from now, March 15th, if former years can be judged a criterion, the scene will be different, they should not, the Income Tax people here will be the centre of a busy hive.

For Mr. and Mrs. John Public, March 15th has developed a certain psychological twist that changes the well-ordered business man, office worker, or whatever categories pay income taxes into a "Last minute Mike" will throng income tax offices, clamoring for attention and service.

And therein lies the headache and the bane of all good income tax inspectors and staffs.

Why Wait?

"Why, Or why," asked Income Tax Inspector K. L. Reid, head of the local office, "do people wait until the last few days to file Income Tax returns? They put off the evil day," so to speak until the last minute then expect to get their refunds, should have got a month previous."

"Returns must be filed by April 30—there is no evading that," the inspector pointed out. "At the present time the staff here is not being crowded, and can handle returns efficiently—they are brought up to date. In addition they have time to devote to taxpayers and returns, and tends to eliminate any errors which may occur during the latter days when crowds of people are clamoring for attention."

"Taxpayers," he said, "should file returns as soon as they have the necessary information."

Would Ease Rush

"If this is done, it will ease the whole situation a bit—and will give income tax staffs an opportunity to take care of those who, by force of circumstances, are obliged to wait until near deadline."

The Income Tax office here has had no information regarding the spread of 1945 tax payments over an extended period of time, as has been the case last year, Inspector Reid said.

But he intimated there is a possibility of the idea being tried.

A branch office of Income Tax Division will be set up here in Peterborough on April 1st and remain open until the deadline on April 20. This is being done for the accommodation of taxpayers in the neighboring city.

The War Today

Enemy So Shocked by Rhine Crossing Nazis Trot Out Hitler for Morale

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

The Allied coup in crossing the Rhine has so stunned Germany that Nazi propagandists have trotted Hitler out his ghostly image again yesterday in an effort to bolster public morale by a personal message which offered the despairing adherents to Nazism little more than Nietzsche gets tired and quit.

The Fuehrer's address was in the form of a proclamation read for the Dictator—isn't surprising. It was obviously the first thing to shock to the general morale of the country. Indeed it may well be that its effect was forced by a necessity of the military advantage to the Allies.

Remagen Bridgehead.

Now that the Remagen crossing is a great victory—or will be if the Allies continue to hold the bridgehead—is hardly necessary to look at it. However, we shouldn't regard it as the decisive blow which in itself can wind up the war overnight.

The decisive blow is undoubtedly farther south than the Ruhr—some say Berlin, maybe Leipzig or Dresden (and probably still are) to be struck. Moreover, it's in a rugged, hilly region which favors the defence, and Allied troops are likely to find the going tough as they push their way into the open.

We are still waiting for the Germans to stage their major counterattack against the bridgehead. The assaults which they've made so far have been minor affairs although they have managed to bring amounts of artillery that is pouring a steady stream of shells into Allied positions.

As I pointed out last week, the speed with which Field Marshal von Rundstedt strikes, and the weight of the counter-blow, will give us a fair indication of how hard he has been forced to regroup his armies after their costly retreat across the Ardennes salient attack. If Rundstedt can't meet this emergency of the bridgehead, then he is indeed in a bad way.

We have here a rather paradoxical situation in which the British High Command likely hopes Rundstedt will stage a strong attack on the bridgehead. The point is that if he does, so he will have to withdraw troops from the defence of strategic sectors of the Siegfried Line.

Rundstedt In Bad Spot.

Now that is very important to Gen. Eisenhower. Today's news report from the front confirms my suggestion of last week that he presumably is preparing to make another crossing of the Rhine in the northern flank. They will be difficult and costly operations—amphibious operations at the best, and any crossing of the German forces on the east side of the Rhine will vastly facilitate the Allied task. As von Rundstedt knows, Germany has on a bad spot. If the German commander can withdraw his troops from the north he won't have the opportunity to hit Montgomery in the beachhead: if he does withdraw them, he lowers his guard in the Ruhr area.

Queens Science, Arts Students Riot on Campus

Kingston, March 12 — (CP)—Inter-faculty hockey rivalry developed into riot last night after classes began today as Queen's students, reported, resulted in injury to three arts students. The riot was the aftermath of a hockey game last night between teams which the arts team defeated the science cagers.

This morning science students 500 strong paraded to the new arts building on the campus and at the height of a driving snow storm bombarded the arts students with eggs, shaved their heads and painted them yellow — Queen's science colors. The artsmen, bolstered by courageous girls of the Faculty, only recently won the right to enter the attacking science students.

Three arts students were injured and required treatment. Most seriously hurt was Andrew Hendrickson of Ottawa, star athlete, who required three stitches to close a cut over his right eye. He was admitted to hospital.

Mary Black of Utica, N.Y., was treated on the campus for minor injuries while the girl students' manse was not immediately available. Miss Black and the third injured person were not admitted to hospital.

Painted Science Rooms

After Thursday's basketball victory the arts students apparently invaded the science rooms at the new building and painted the walls in arts colors — blue. Crowning the deed was a red-lettered sign proclaiming the sciencemen as "plumbers."

A meeting was held in principal R. C. Wallace's offices yesterday when representatives of science and arts Faculty students societies at, which time the riot was discussed and student leaders against further disturbances.

This morning's riot was broken up by Dr. Wallace himself who arrived at the campus a few minutes after it started and though hit by snow balls, had a hand when the injured students and managed to stop the fighting.

Knickmaker was injured when he was dragged out of the arts building and thrown down the steps.

No disciplinary action has been announced as yet by the principal's office.

Light Snowfall Blankets District

Old Man Winter, loath to loosen the tentacles that have bound the district in snow and ice, has counter-attacked the first advances of Spring Sunday night when a light snowfall awakened to find another snow blanket covering the city and countryside.

It was a feeble effort, however, and the sunshine soon melted most of the snow into rain, a fact that was welcomed by residents of the low banlieu.

Spring-like weather over the weekend that dried pavement and highway brought out Spring topcoats and sent many people scurrying to the darkness of closets, only to be brought out again today.

This, however, will be only temporary, if the weatherman is to be believed for there is another of a decided Spring nature, claiming it will be fair and warmer tomorrow.

Count De Marigny Seen in Montreal

Halifax, March 12 (CP)—Count Alfred De Marigny, who was acquitted last week in Bermuda, Bahamas, of the slaying of his multi-millionaire father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes, was seen over the weekend on his way to Montreal to join his wife, Lady Eileen Oakes.

Dr. De Marigny arrived here as third officer aboard a Canadian merchantman ship which he joined at Havana. He said he planned to stay in Canada if immigration authorities removed a barrier which limits the stay of non-resident merchant navy personnel to 30 days. Failing that, he said he hoped to make his home in Newfoundland.

He said that he had "more in love than ever" with his wife, answering recent rumors of a marital rift between himself and his heiress wife.

CHILD FRACTURES SKULL IN FALL FROM BRIDGE ARCH

While playing with other Minah children on the upper bridge Saturday afternoon, six-year-old Bobby Frazer, of 90 West Moira Street, fell from the cement arch and suffered a fractured skull and is in the Belleville General Hospital suffering from concussion of the brain. He was attended by Dr. E. M. MacDonald, while the boy's mother and condition was described as good after such a serious accident.

The little Frazer lad, along with other children of his age, was playing on the upper bridge when it is believed he attempted to climb the cement arch over the bridge. Losing his balance the lad fell to the bridge below where he was picked up in an unconscious condition. Rushed to the hospital X-rays revealed the skull fracture.

Increase Quota 'Rotation' Leaves Of Men Overseas

Ottawa, March 12 (CP)—Increase in the quota of "rotation" leaves for men with long overseas service from 1,000 a month as at present to 1,500 for March and 2,000 for April was announced today by Defence Minister McNaughton.

The statement announcing the quota revision the Minister said the extension had been made possible because monthly intake figures were lower than had been estimated for January and February, and additional replacement of long service officers from overseas, for whose leave, could therefore be made within a reduced period, was also available of the Canadian Army.

Defence headquarters announced March 1 that the casualties during January totalled 2,068, second highest monthly total since D-Day—June 6. The lowest monthly total was 1,000 reported for December. Casualties for February have not been announced.

Further increases will be made as the situation warrants and as more men in the transport can be arranged.

Asked from certain officers and a few specialists in pitner ranks it was announced today that the men returning under the Rotation plan will be granted 30 days leave, plus at least six months. Provided the present satisfactory rate of leaves and furloughs is maintained it was hoped that there would be no call on Canada to send these men for further duty overseas, the Defence headquarters statement said.

After a period of a clear 20 days' leave at their homes the men would be posted to training and other establishments so that full benefit could be obtained from their overseas experience.

Defence headquarters said First, Second and Third Canadian Infantry Divisions will continue to remain at their present strength.

The Fourth Canadian Armoured Division will be reduced to cadre strength and the personnel posted to other units.

Fourth game is scheduled for Hamilton tomorrow night.

Tonight's game is match penalty in Saturday night's game after hitting Bill Ezinicki over the head with his stick. No substitution was allowed. Referee Mel Harwood required four stitches to close the gash. Sensational netminding of Frank Brimsek in goal for Art Childs was the key-factor in the Bruins 4-1 win though Childs short-handed.

Leading the contest St. Catharines' manager Jack Rose notified O.H.A. president Frank Buckley that he had definitely forfeit the balance of the series if Sherry was allowed to play. Sherry suspended from playing coach, required five stitches in face during Saturday night's week when Sherry cross-checked him.

CHEVALIER DENIED
EL VISA

London, March 12 (CP)—The Home Office said today that Maurice Chevalier, French actor, had been denied by producer Jack Hylton for a series of shows, had been denied a visa to enter the United Kingdom.

Hylton first disclosed the British ban on Chevalier in advance of British-French theatrical talent.

Hylton subsequently confirmed that it had refused Chevalier a visa, he said:

"As a matter of fact the case is not closed. It is true he had been denied a visa but there may be further developments."

Hylton said "no evasion has been given and I am at a loss to understand the British attitude."

Chevalier had been reported entangled in charges of collaboration with the Germans during the occupation.

Motion Picture Studios Tied Up By Strike of 12,000

Hollywood, March 12 — (AP) — Picket lines were established at entrances to motion picture studios today as a strike of 12,000 A.F.L. set decorators, members of the local authority regarding set designers went into effect at all the major studios.

Herbert Sorrell, president of the Conference of Studio Unions, which voted the strike, said the work stoppage would "tie those studios up in a knot, and the only one who can stop us is Uncle Sam himself."

Sorrell predicted within two or three days production of movies would be cut in half. Only studios not affected by the strike are Technicolor, where no set designers are at work, Walt Disney, Monogram and Producers Releasing Corporation.

The A.F.L. Painters, Local Union 1431, a member of the Conference of Studio Unions, has been ordered by the War Labor Board as bargaining agent for the set designers.

Sorrell said the strike was called because the A.F.L. unions have been "pushed around" by the C.I.O. International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, which also claims jurisdiction.

Asked if he anticipated sympathetic interruptions, Sorrell said he thought not.

The executive committee of the Screen Actors' Guild was to meet today to take action on the strike situation, but until the actors vote on the issue, Guild members will not cross individual picket lines when they pass through picket lines, said executive secretary Kenneth Thomson.

Sorrell called the walkout "the last night at a meeting of the 1,500 workers in the Hollywood Legion stadium.

A spokesman for the producers said they were powerless to prevent the strike. He said: "All I know is that the two A.F.L. unions was over the "Set Decorators" Union that is made up of only 12 men. It does not involve wages, hours, working conditions or any other matter within the power of the employer to give or withhold."

Pledged in support of the walkout, said a union statement, were "grips, property men, painters, electricians and members of the Screen Players Union.

Sweden Reports 'Convoy Battle' In Skagerrak

New York, March 12. (AP)—The Swedish Radio said today that a "convoy battle", presumably between German ships and Allied aircraft, was fought last night in the Skagerrak, separating Norway and Denmark.

The battle developed "far off the Swedish coast" the broadcast said, "was still on at 12.30 a.m." (Swedish time). The broadcast was reported by the Federal Communications Commission.

The Swedish radio said yesterday that a 30-minute battle between a German convoy and Allied planes had taken place in the Kattegat off Goteborg (mouth of the Skagerrak) early today. When the automobile ran into the moving engine from a train, killing the two injuries, although there was considerable damage resulting to the automobile police learned several hours after the accident. Investigation revealed the accident occurred shortly before seven o'clock in the morning but they said it was not reported until 9.30 a.m. Constable Wilfred Hendrickson attended Henley's car had apparently run into the side of the train as it was freight shed.

Police were unable to announce the identity of the train crew as soon. Sergt. C. Arnott and Inspector Hall investigated.

Germans Increase Resistance Along 5th's Entire Front

Rome, March 12 (AP) — The Allied 5th army push toward the German stronghold of Vergato southwest of Bologna slowed today as Allied headquarters reported increased German resistance along the 5th's entire front.

Patrols probing enemy strength met their greatest opposition along the winter mountain line before Bologna.

Vergato, on the Pistoia-Bologna highway, has been outflanked, but its defenders continued to battle strongly.

British 8th Army units on the east coast were reported to have carried out aggressive patrolling.

Any hope the enemy would give up Vergato under threat of encirclement appeared blasted when American troops along the front flier reports of the town caught heavy mortar and machine-gun fire from the stronghold early Tuesday.

The Germans also attacked American positions northeast of Vergato, Allied headquarters said.

Field Marshal Albert Kesselring has instructed his troops to defend the Northern Italian territory at all costs, an order taken from a captured German soldier's diary, Reuters said.

"You do not defend Italy in these battles but Germany," the order said. "Not one inch of the ground must be surrendered or destroyed without orders. Officers and men alike must be permeated with this thought."

"I know that the troops and particularly the commanders are convinced of the necessity of this campaign.

Portsmouth Wins 'Battle of Levee'

Portsmouth, O., March 12 (AP)—Portsmouth today had won its five-day "battle of the levee"—a 810-foot earthen dike.

An estimated 9,000 residents began returning to their homes and business places as the flood-swollen Ohio River crested at 66.9 feet stage, two feet below the top of the section of the flood wall which the dike guards. Sandbags had buried nearly 500,000 sandbags to build up the levee in the battle against rising waters.

City officials estimated that the fight that kept out the raging Ohio had saved as much as $100,000,000 damage to industrial mercantile and residential property.

ALLIED BOMBERS

The German radio said the 300-mile-wide line of bombers which flew 600 miles across northern Germany to Berlin consisted of 1,000 to 1,200 bombers and some 3,000 tons of explosives on the city.

The Allies made the heaviest ever directed against one target by the R.A.F. Bomber Command highlighted a day in which more than 4,000 Allied planes battered Germany in more than a dozen places.

R.A.F. Mosquitos spot the offensive with attacks on the night by hitting Berlin with two-ton block-buster bombs on the nights in a row. They also attacked various other communications targets in western Germany.

More than 1,350 American heavy bombers attacked Germany by day, switching from railyards to submarine yards at Hamburg, Bremen and Kiel.

One U. S. bomber was lost in the attacks on the Ruhr.

Meanwhile, American fighters stopped two more attempts by the Germans to blow up the bridge and two were shot down in combat during the weekend. None got in bombing range.

Capt. Jack Morgan Home on Furlough

Captain Jack Morgan, son of Dr. and Mrs. Morgan, 144 West Bridge Street, and veteran of Sicilian and Italian campaigns arrived home last night on a thirty-day furlough.

Formerly a lieutenant with the Argyll Light Infantry, Capt. Morgan went overseas in 1940 with the same rank and joined the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Training in England with that unit until June 1943, he went with the first detachments to Sicily and then home to this Italian front. As a company commander he saw plenty of action at the Adorno River and at Lamone as well as many other battles in which the regiment took part. He was promoted to the rank of captain about a year ago.

While in England he met and married Miss Evelyn Pickett of Ringgate, Enniskillen. They have one child, Mrs. Morgan, who at present is awaiting her turn to come to Canada, is expected to arrive here within the next month.

Battle for Iwo Jima Appears All But Over

Guam, March 12 — (AP) — The battle for Iwo Jima appeared all but over on the 22nd day of the bloodiest invasion of the Pacific war as United States Marines drove the Japanese to the last defensive positions in a 1,000-yard triangle on Kitano Point northeast of Mount Suribachi.

There they fought with desperate fury, however, as Allied warplanes artillery and the guns of U.S. naval vessels.

Only one other pocket of resistance remained at 5 p.m. yesterday when it was wiped out by a force of sixty-odd Japanese earlier yesterday by Marines of the Fifth Corps. Almost to a man they captured most of Iwo's northeast coast.

The 5th Division, moving up the west coast, had sealed off the Kitano Point peninsula.

The 4th Division surged forward on the east coast after starting a drive that carried it to the center of the Iwo Point, easternmost tip of Iwo. Meeting only scattered resistance, two airfield strafed Chichi Jima, 150 miles north in the Bonin Islands north of Iwo, today's communique said.

Motor Car Collides With R.R. Engine

It was a tie between a motorcar driven by Harry Henley, 36 1-2 Victoria Street and a Canadian National Railways engine at the Eastern Avenue crossing in Cobourg early today. When the automobile ran into the moving engine from a train, killing the two injuries, although there was considerable damage resulting to the automobile police learned several hours after the accident occurred shortly before seven o'clock in the morning but they said it was not reported until 9.30 a.m. Constable Wilfred Hendrickson attended Henley's car had apparently run into the side of the train as it was freight shed.

Break-up of Moira River Quiet

As was anticipated for several weeks past the Moira River break-up this year was one of the quietest on record. The first phase was on Saturday when the ice from below the footbridge pushed down the river south of the lower bridge without a sign of any of the usual disturbances of a flood. The small remnant of water and the sun-weakened ice made the passing out of the ice almost unnoticeable.

Six weeks ago or so it looked as if the weather might start a flood, as up to that time there had been many snow without a thaw, but the latter part of February and the first week of March with its warm days wore away the snow, the water finding its way into the soil as there is no frost in the ground to shed the water. Weather became less severe and if anyone dreaded heavy rains that person was pleased for no rain fell at a time when heavy rains might have complicated the situation.

Enemy's Many Mistakes

When Adolf Hitler chose to fight the world he reckoned on a number of false premises; he trusted the supremacy of the German fighting machine to win before the United States could get itself against his attacks, in his gluttony for conquest and the reputation of a conqueror, he misread Britain's power alone to guard herself, and the strength of his navy and air power and so hungry for new territory was he that what he saw in Russia was not a warning to him but an inducement to stab at Russia thinking her weak and unready. He succeeded in socializing the German state but they left him when things were not going his way. These and more decisions of his went badly astray and one of his false beliefs was that concerning the spirit of the Allied world. The Germany of the First World War escaped in a way which made possible her preparation under the Nazis for a war that would, they planned, not fail. They were wrong again. They did not realize that the United Nations would develop as they did the titanic power that Germany is feeling today and even at periods during this second war they knew that Allied unity would not stand the test of Hun propaganda. But it has stood the test for every United Nation has realized that Germany must not be given any third chance to do what was done upon the earth. So these nations stand together united to bind aggressive Germany so that she cannot wage war again.

So the tide is seen today. Germany is between two fires, she must either surrender without condition or she must submit to further destruction. The Allies are not going to let the Hun "get away" this time. They are to be stripped of opportunity to strike a military blow and militarily Germany must become impotent.

Hitler in his actions and statements and through his evil crimes which Nazism has been responsible for has helped to forge the weapons which are pounding Germany into ruins or unconditional surrender. Germans have committed atrocities at which the world shudders and this only means that the United Nations will not treat with such an enemy. In short, Hitler and Germany, the aggressors, have filled the role of gangsters so completely that they will be treated as criminals on account of the preparations they made for war and for the conduct of the war. And law and order will not compound with criminals.

As for the Fuehrer, his way may be marked for annihilation. He taught the Germans to commit crimes so that Germany would never surrender to the Allies because he trusted in the fears of the Germans to keep them fighting. Hitler has a strange mind and his fanaticism may lead him to the idea that if Germany cannot win the war he can make Germany commit suicide by refusing to surrender unconditionally.

Help to Produce Secret Weapon

Parts of "Crocodile" flame-throwers—the British tank-engine secret weapon which played so big a part in the liberation of Europe—were produced by one of Britain's leading makers of high-quality footwear.

The work was all done in the company's workshops by its own mechanics and girl workers from the shoe factories. They began early in the war with a sub-contract for mine-caps and later were given contracts for 25-pounder shells and gun mountings used by the Eighth Army to defeat Rommel, and 20 millimetre armor-piercing nose-cap for Bofors guns. Finally, they were given the job of machining and assembling an essential part of the "Crocodile."

Simultaneously the company produced, in one of its factories, almost a million pairs of service boots and shoes, many of them quite different from normal production. This also meant installing new plant as well as equipment with Army, Naval, Air Force and American representatives.

Civilian production was maintained by means of a program of utility which, we are in no way inferior to normal production.

Sugar Maple
(New York Times)

Sugar maples are the elder statesmen among the trees of the Northeast. They are examples of dignity, strength and confidence. One sees them along the winding back-country roads. They stand at the corner of story-and-a-half-with-ell farmhouses that nestle against hillsides.

An old sugar maple is more than a symbol of ruggedness. It is a friendly, reassuring tree. Some of the huge-branched ones are standing in the Northwest were slender, smooth-barked saplings last century when covered wagons were rolling across the plains. Acer saccharum is a slow-growing tree. It does not demand the rich soil of river valleys of hill-surrounded meadows.

In addition to craggy strength the sugar maple has a beauty that distinguishes it all seasons of the year. In winter the branches are tipped with sharply pointed conical buds. In spring the yellow-green blossoms hang in beautiful pendent clusters, In summer the broad leaves with rounded-pointed ends are a cool identity in the landscape. The seeds which develop are themselves things of beauty. The double pod and two flaring wings may be symbolic of the planes of the future which will ride the air currents. The maples' seeds on a brisk wind. When frost time comes the tree is a gorgeous bouquet of flaming reds, yellows, tans and browns.

Soon there will be bustling activity in Northern New York. Years ago the Red Men learned that the sap made sweet syrup and sugar. Frosty nights and warm days are the combination for which the sugar maple waits, and when Nature is kind the trees give forth generously, and the fire in the farmhouse is kept stoked day and night. Sugar maples mean much to him who considers trees his friends.

Refuge in Britain

Although in most countries in Europe, outside of Germany itself, it is no longer necessary to leave to escape the Gestapo, Britain is still receiving refugees.

Five hundred children have just arrived in Coventry. They are the first of some 20,000 lost children who will be given homes in England for the duration. This first 500 came from the parts of Holland, and many were picked up from the hedges, cellars and bombed buildings; others were found in army camps scavenging among the refuse.

Red Cross camps in Holland and Belgium had to care for them for two months before they were strong enough to stand the short sea trip to England.

German gasoline production has been reduced by R.A.F., R.C.A.F., and U.S.A.A.F. and the Russian advance to less than 20% of the rate at which it was running before the air offensive against oil began last April. This has limited German mobility on all fronts, not only in the west but also on the Italian front and in defence against the Russian offensive.

SHOWING OFF

If the place is clean and shiny and a gloss is on the stair,
And she's covered up the places where the
  rug's begun to wear;
If the curtains at the windows have been washed and stretched anew,
Then I know she's planned a party for a very special few.

If the toys are in the closet and my books are put away,
If her prettiest fancy towels are once more
  upon display;
If her banquet cloth, embroidered, is brought out for them to view,
Then I know she's planned a dinner for a very special few.

I can tell it as I enter from the turmoil of the street,
If a cry comes down the stairway: "Please,
  be sure to wipe your feet!"
If I'm told to hang my things up, which I very seldom do,
Then I'm sure she's planned a party for a most exclusive few.

Cultivates Army's Very Best People, Finds Men Usually Working in Kitchen

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Marianas Islands (Delayed) In my long career with the United Press I've known every kind of hobby or cultivating the very best people in it. And for some strange reason the very best people usually turn out to work in the kitchen. Isn't that odd?

My latest acquisition are a Mutt and Jeff duo known as Mickey and Bill. They serve the food in our mess hall. They have to work like dogs and they get no thanks for such intent haste that you think they are mad at everybody all the time.

But they aren't. That's just a look of concentration on their faces. Whenever we give them time to relax, they're the best-natured people you ever saw.

These two boys are Sergt. Thos. Bill, of (3247 Bell-ave.), St. Louis, and Corpl. Mickey Novinsky, of (40 Short-St.) Edwardsville, Pa. They're as different as day and night, but they've been together like cops in a gazebvlei.

Sergeant Bill is tall and thin and white-skinned and has curly black hair and a sensitive face, and he doesn't say much. Mickey is so short he could stand under Bill's arm, and his skin is dark. His eyes are almost shut and he talks all the time—and such talk.

Mickey is unquotable, because you couldn't possibly remember things the way he says them. His colloquialisms are not sectional, they're pure Brooklyn.

Mickey is outspoken about his likes and dislikes. He fusses back at the officers who ask for extra service, but he's Mickey and you don't get sore about it. He's a saucy wise-cracking little heart-of-gold fellow. He never laughs, but he's pretty happy. He keeps his cap turned up in front, which gives him a cocky air.

The boys' special favorite among all the fliers is their friend Capt. Bill Gifford. He's always giving them things, and sits up and talks with them in the mealhall after supper, and as a result they'd slay for him. Now, I mean they've suggested it.

Bill and Fortune, I fell in with this trio, and every night Cliff and I would stay away from supper until 8:30 o'clock, when Bill arrived and the two boys had their tables all cleared away and set for breakfast.

Then we'd wander over through the galley and get some tea and then have a banquet—such as steak and French fried potatoes. The boys never eat much at such times, but they do down and eat, and the talk would be fun to hear.

The first Tokyo mission was a great thrill to Mickey. He and all pilots are always tense the night before a mission, and Mickey has his methods.

"They took off six times for Tokyo," he explained. "I mean they was scheduled to go every day for six days, and they'd all be short-tempered and wanting things just so at night, and then next morning when the mission would be cancelled.

"It was their first mission up there and they heard a rumor they was to be 1300 Jap fighters lined up across the sky just like a wall, and they was nervous and grumpy.

"So Captain Gifford here, I can always tell when he's going the next day. He eats very much at supper like he usually does. He just wants that sharp attention and keep your mouth shut and leave him be, like alone.

"Well, them pilots was tense and worried and they didn't drink any coffee at supper, but they drunk it around, and then next morning they really did take off. Boy they didn't feel good either.

"It's a good thing they finally went or I was gonna mutiny. I got sick and tired of puttin' grub in them mealhall dishes. I was gonna refuse the seventh time.

"And I'll bet a dozen eggs before I'd put grub in them planes a seventh time. But they went that

INDIA NOW A BIG FIGHTING NATION

Expanded Volunteer Service Has Served on Many Battlefronts

Washington, March 12 (CP)—More than 300,000 members of the Indian armed forces are now in operation strong—have served outside India, says a booklet entitled "India at War."

The booklet, issued and distributed by the office of the Indian Information Services here, says Indian soldiers have fought in the defence of East Africa and the Sudan, in Eritrea, Malaya, the Western Desert, Tunisia, Italy, Syria, Iran, Iraq, Malaya, and the East Indies, Burma, Hongkong Kong.

One of the units of the all-volunteer army which has travelled the farthest, says the booklet, is the 4th. Indian Division. It was part of Field Marshal Lord Wavell's small army in the Middle East in 1940, fought in the Ethiopian campaign, fought in the Syrian campaign, fought in the Syrian campaign, fought in the Western Desert, fought in Tunisia, Italy, Syria, Iran, Iraq, Malaya, and the East Indies, Burma, Hongkong Kong.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS
By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

MY ADVICE IS THIS: BE COMFORTABLE

There who no heat in the house, and in the early morning the breeze was not so balmy. Neither am I. So I got up, closed door and window on the windward side of the shanty and crawled back as far under the covers as I could burrow and shivered. It was too cold to run out in the hall in my—pardon—birthday suit to turn on the heat, and it happened to be the butler's day off—of course we can't ask the gardeners of the chauffeur or the pantryman or the cook to get up practically in the middle of the night to turn on the heat so things will be comfortable for the master to do his morning rolls. So I just lay there hitching the sheet and alleged light blanket alternately over my good ear and my left toes —seems they control my vasomotor system. When the left toes get cold I'm interested in nothing except getting warm. If the left toes are warm I'm interested in everything except cocktails and mashed potatoes.

Next thing I knew it was broad daylight. The entire staff was up and bustling and she came as soon as she heard me stirring to ask me what maybe it is just as well that I read it say and not hear it.

Now wait a minute. Have I ever advised any one on subject himself to real discomfort for the sake of health?

I hereby offer a prize of a $25 War Bond to any reader who can produce evidence that I have advised any one to expose himself to cold to that degree.

Even in the severe air treatment of pneumonia in the coldest month of the year (February) we recommend—I recommend and would wish to relate it had pneumonia—a room where it is impossible that the patient be kept comfortably warm and not for a moment allowed to suffer real discomfort from the cold.

The test of the efficiency of such treatment of pneumonia is the hand test. Feel of the patient's feet, if they are warm and dry and the hands are warm enough. This same test is best for parents' advice with regard to the children's sleeping conditions. In fact it is the best all round test of the adequacy of covers, clothing or heating—if the tinders feel hot, dry and warm to the touch there is no lack of cover, clothing or heat.

Some one sends a clipping which purports to be a physician specializing in the treatment of tuberculosis in the belief that some patients with pulmonary tuberculosis do better if they are kept confined in heated rooms or wards, implying that the open air treatment involves some degree of hardship in the sanatoria healing process. As the old lady remarked, that is all my eye.

This would be a dull world if doctors never disagreed.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS
Vitamins Not Fattening

Is vitamin B-complex fattening? I gained some weight while taking it, I want to lose weight. (E.R.)

Answer—No. Read stamped envelope bearing your address, ask for pamphlet "How to Lose Weight."

Bash!

Til bet you are a dirty old goat. Any one who would go around with moss on their teeth because they are too lazy to brush them would go with dirty neck and ears...But I'll bet you read your columns and I hope you won't let me discourage you; date R. D. 1.

Bash—Right unseen I bet you $100—winnings to go to the Red Cross fund. I have better teeth than you have.

The Danger of Fresh Air

According to this clipping a Dr. Hyman Warmer of Chicago Medical Jas-Presbyterian Medical Center says the American habit of sleeping with windows open is an important cause of "grippe and respiratory infections by chilling the body when asleep." As for sleeping in a stuffy bedroom with windows closed—ugh! (Mrs. H. L. M.)

Answer—If the night air really is warmer than room air, Dr. Warmer or us warmer covers. Exclude cold wind by using a close screen of unbleached muslin. There is no scientific evidence that chilling causes attacks of colds or the development of any respiratory infection. Some of my best friends are Presbyterians, but ..., after all you should wash behind the ears too.

Recurrent is Not Chronic

Disagree with your statement that there is no such thing as chronic appendicitis. I had it for 6 months, finally had a severe attack, blood poisoning set out, and have been all right since. (E. Mca.)

Correct—Your description it seems likely that you had one or more attacks of acute appendicitis which were relieved by surgical operation.

POP GOES THE WEASEL

What does "weasel" mean in "pop goes the weasel?"

"Pop goes the weasel" is a curious old phrase that survives only in the refrain of a 19th-century comic song, which runs:

Up and down the City Road,
In and out the Eagle,
That's the way the money goes—
Pop goes the weasel!

The authorship of this song is generally attributed to "Tom Hill-dale," about whom no information has been found. His name may or may not be a mythical person.

The "weasel" in the song was a tavern or "pub" on the street called City Road in London.

"Pop goes the weasel" is of obscure origin and meaning. It may have been merely a catch-line to the song. The Oxford dictionary says that the phrase originally applied to a country dance in which these words were sung while one of the dancers lifted the arms of two of the others.

Most people associate the saying with the quick, jerky, nervous movements of the small animal weasel.

But the weasel is also known as the weasel. This nimble little animal is noted for its furtiveness and for its cruel cut of crowds and holes with lightning-like swiftness in front of an enemy.

Some authorities think "weasel" in "pop goes the weasel" is not originally allude to the animal of that name, but is a slang term for some tradesman's tool known as a weasel. "Pop" was 18-century Britain's slang for "pawn" or "pledge." According to this theory, the song refers to the time when poor farmers were in the habit of popping their tools at the pawnshop in the article on Saturday night to pay for their drinks at the tavern.

Others say that the weasel, with bulging sides and small neck and head, is used as a term of endearment. It may have been this sort of thought that first sang the song and made the money go.

It seems more probable, however, that the Oxford dictionary is correct in saying that "pop goes the weasel" was originally applied to a country dance and that it comprised the actions of the song as the characteristic movements of the small weasel.

Treble Four: Story of a Plane

By Flt./Lt. Jim Edwards, D.F.C. (R.C.A.F. Press Service)

This is really the life story and the death story of an aeroplane. I have been on transport aircraft since January 1944, but it was not until about the end of March of that year that I was allotted my own aircraft, a new one that had only just been flown across the Atlantic. Her number was KG-444 and we called her Treble Four. She came into my hands with comparatively few flying hours in her log-book, and a beautiful, selection of all the latest gadgets in the cockpit. It's a lovely aeroplane to fly, too, easy on the controls, steady, and with a perfect automatic pilot, and two sweet-running engines. From my first trip to her until one tragic day last September I never once had occasion to find fault with her. Dear old Treble Four, gone now, a twisted wreck in a Dutch forest near Arnhem, and let's not anticipate.

After a long and at times tedious period of training we were at last briefed for the first operation. And on that first night of the Invasion of France, Treble Four and I towed a heavily-loaded Horse Glider over to a spot near the mouth of the river Orne. It was a very dark night, and we had to come down to about eight hundred feet to avoid a bank of cloud. The visibility was bad, but that on the first run-in we overshot the field over which our glider was going to be put off, and that while we were stooging around looking for the right spot that a ferry ground runner had a bang at us. He was so close to us that I could actually hear his gun firing. Tracer bullets hurtled up just in front of us, and I instinctively took violent evasive action. But somehow our glider hung on, and we eventually dropped him in the right place. It was dark, all we saw halfway back was the channel that I realised we had been hit, the automatic pilot would not work, and we reached base we found we had to hand-pump the wheels down. The brakes had been damaged, too, so after touching down I had to keep her off the runway and cut the engines without hitting anything, and I jumped out to have a look with a torch for the damage. There was a jagged hole in the port wing, and on the starboard side an explosive bullet had hit the exhaust pipe. Both bullets missed vital spots by inches.

Taking the Glider in.

Suddenly, one day in September, all these schedule runs were cancelled, and we knew that there was something special in the offing, and when they fitted long-range tanks into the fuselage we guessed that we were going to tug our gliders an unusually long way. We all trooped into the briefing room and our hearts fell on the operational map of Europe on which our route was marked in red tape, we realised with a sudden and not altogether pleasing thrill that we were going to need every bit of that, every gallon of it. The last hundred miles, without hitting anything, and I jumped out to have a look with a torch for the damage. There was a jagged hole in the port wing, and on the starboard side an explosive bullet had hit the exhaust pipe. Both bullets missed vital spots by inches.

Suddenly, one day in September, all these schedule runs were cancelled, and we knew that there was something special in the offing, and when they fitted long-range tanks into the fuselage we guessed that we were going to tug our gliders an unusually long way. We all trooped into the briefing room and our hearts fell on the operational map of Europe on which our route was marked in red tape, we realised with a sudden and not altogether pleasing thrill that we were going to need every bit of that, every gallon of it. The last hundred miles of our route, the enemy territory in Holland which our troops had not yet reached! . . . Treble Four in her place about third from the leader and we staggered into the air. Over the North Sea, where all the individual streams of aircraft and their aerodromes met together in one terrific mass, we had our work cut out to keep out of other people's slipstreams. At last we drew near Arnhem, and my second pilot began what we called "slating the glider in," in other words, pointing out to the glider pilot the landmarks he was going to use to make it difficult to see the landing field: it was already packed with gliders, and the sky above it was full of them. I gave Joe Mills, the glider pilot, a "Good luck," and away we went. We returned without incident, and I was well through the procedure again with as little trouble.

On the third day Treble Four went into the hangar for a major overhaul, and I spent the day with another aircraft taking a lot of petrol to Brussels, while other crews dropped supplies to the troops at Arnhem. They returned with some rather disquieting stories about the flak which the Jerries were using to bring it into the area, and on the fourth day, in spite of rapidly deteriorating weather, we had to take more supplies over. We knew that our boys over there were already in a tight spot, and we also knew by now that the supplies dropped the day before had almost all landed in the Jerry lines. This time the journey over was fairly thick in flak. But we managed to keep in a fairly concentrated area and we dropped our loads (I was carrying compo rations) over the area in which we knew our boys were, Pzak, both medium and light, came up at us through that hectic minute, or so which we spent over the dropping zone, and I could already see that our troops were beginning to be pushed back. Perhaps I should explain that this supply-dropping business is done at a height of about eight hundred feet above the ground and with aircraft packed with gliders, and once you have started your run-in you have the soldiers you carry with you have started to push the stuff through the door, you must on no account take evasive action until the panniers have gone. Well, on the Wednesday, the fourth day of the Arnhem affair, I managed to get through only two small holes in the tail; but I saw at least one Dakota burst into flames and crash.

Treble Four Loaded Up.

Next morning I found Treble Four already loaded up with panniers, this time full of hand grenades and other ammunition, and with the grass beside her the poor soldiers who were to fly with me by, waiting for the word to come and parachute home and get in-to the aircraft. Up the Nijmegen salient visibility was very bad again, and there were still a few wisps of low cloud hanging around, but we managed to keep in very fairly concentrated by the time

Refreshments were served by Mrs. R. Wotten and her helpers.

Netherlands East Indies Subject of Study Made By Jubilee Auxiliary

At the March meeting of the Jubilee Evening Auxiliary of the W.M.S. of Bridge St. U. C. held recently a study was made of the Netherlands East Indies (now Japanese), or as the Dutch call them Insulinde. Many are more familiar with some of the individual names like Sumatra, Java, Borneo, Celebes and the Spice Islands, figuring so prominently in war despatches day by day.

These were not a colony but an integral part of the Kingdom of the Netherlands with a Governor-General representing the Queen.

Seventy million people live in this part of the world. As well as there being crowded cities like Batavia, the rural population is the densest in the world. Villages and towns can rarely be seen from a distance, the jungle is too thick. They are to be found beside every rice plain, consisting of a school, a church and neatly woven bamboo houses. Nature is very prolific and a living is easily made.

Though there are elephants and tigers, the mosquito is a greater enemy for by it is carried the fatal malaria.

Although a score of other languages are spoken, Malayan still serve anywhere for trade and travel.

Many varieties of religious faiths exist among these people, from primitive belief in spirits to the Moslem faith, and among them are some groups which have been Christian for four hundred years.

This is the bond which links all, despite wars and separations. When the second World War broke out many countries with strong missionary forces, Norway, The Netherlands, Germany, Britain, Denmark and others had no way of sending money or making plans for their workers abroad. The International Missionary Council was the only organization that could help and arrange were some of the details. Late in 1941 a cable came from Japanese-held Batavia indicating that Christian work could be continued under the sponsorship of Japanese Christians.

The Batahs have 450,000 Christians with their own independent church. There are nearly 1,400,000 Protestant Christians in The Netherland East Indies. Among the missionary problems today the most serious problem is like point of view of the Western World, that the white man is automatically superior to the native.

The study, in which several members took part, was under the leadership of Mrs. Robbins and Mrs. Ferguson, Mrs. R. D. Morden was in charge of the business meeting, while Miss Gertrude Lasley convened the supper group.

A Routine for Good Looks

Jinx Falkenburg recommends a thorough soap and water scrubbing as an aid to beauty.

By HELEN FOLLETT

NO. WOMAN can afford to let up on her good looks chores. For her own self-respect and for the love of her family she must keep wrestling, endure to stay within finger touch of her youth.

Nothing each day is needed to be done to keep hair, complexion and fingernails in order is overlooked. Then there is the matter of the figure.

Jinx Falkenburg recommends a "routine" for good looks. Here is a condensation of her routine at work. Mrs. R. Wotten, School Correspondent, stated that the meeting would take the form of a pot luck supper at 6.30 p.m. followed by the social meeting, which Mrs. A. Campbell, program convener, informed the members would be in charge of the supervision of the "Pathfinders". Mr. Ross Bonter, leader of "Fathers", promising a good program.

Mr. C. I. Frederick was the guest speaker for the evening and gave a very enlightening resume of the new course of study "Religious Education in the Public Schools". A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Frederick was given by the meeting for their co-operation in making this and all meetings so successful and for the interesting talks to pupils of Queen Mary School. Refreshments were served by Mrs. R. Wotten and her helpers.

If a woman doesn't march along with the beauty parade, she slips back; she doesn't stand still, stay put. It's fun to keep in touch with fashions. It is horse sense to have one's hair arranged according to the shape of one's face, that sort of thing keeps one from getting that feeling old, looking old. Goodness knows there are plenty of means of finding out what should be done to make oneself appealing to the eye.

The daily bath, with vigorous friction of a brush and soap suds is not only a good looks rite, but a mental stimulus. Clean, fresh, refreshed, you're ready to tackle the job, no matter how tough it is.

Outdoor exercise puts one on one's toes. Whatever contributes toward a feeling of refreshment, vitality, is beautifying. That energy is a beautifying agent. It is the woman who is fully alive that we love to be with. . . We catch some of her magic. She is an influence for good.

Nobody is going to urge you to be cheaply sexy; but don't look out. Nobody is going to brag you to the beauty shop to have your hair done. The war against birthdays must go on.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

FOOT LOOSE AND FANCY FREE.

When a chiropodist starts to talk about high heels, his face gets red, he shakes up, and you think he is going to have a stroke. Give him half a chance and he'll go into a rage, tell you that women who wear them are fools. They are responsible for a large portion of his bank deposits. The medical profession has put in its car, giving a long list of physical ills that are directly due to the unnatural pose of the body that comes when a woman goes stumping around on stilts.

Women who have listened to warnings, who have put their feet in comfortable cases, know what a comfort it is to walk without having their heels elevated. Others sneer, keep on sneering. You see them slipping through slush and snow in the Winter season, their poor feet chilled because of thin soles, their shoulders humped because of the heavy, tired pelvis they hold. The anti-high-heelers have been regarded in the past as a bit of tiresome old fuddy, but they won't be any more. Spiked heels are no longer fashionable. There's still all right for the merry evening and the pretty formal, but ladies of fashion who know what's what select lower heels with large bases for daily use.

With the heel of the foot elevated beyond a certain point, the spinal column is thrown out of gear. Instead of the straight back from neck to waist, the upper portion of the back is rounded because the torso is thrown forward.

There are other unpleasant results. The forward pose of the body causes the chest to contract. The fibres of the breasts soften, lose their youthful contour. The high-heeler is numbered among the victims little abdomen that appears protrude; with lower heels and good posture these bulges will be tucked away where they belong. As the chest sinks in, the abdomen protrudes. A woman has discarded high heels when they flung their stern-stretched corsets into the furnaces, got rid of their rib prisons and took to normal breathing. some of the elderly girls can have better figures now.

However, we have good news from shoe manufacturers. Girls in uniform have been popularized the ex-ford.

It gives the foot proper support which is lacking in the pump and the T-strapped sandal. New styles show the oxford with five eyelets, a design that holds the feet neatly, prevents the shoe from getting out of shape or rubbing at the heel to wreck stockings in a run. Oxfords are not the only smart in bad weather, it is the only sensible model.

If the foregoing does not put ideas of shoe reform in the mind of the girl who likes to be airborne, let us remind her that high heels cause the muscles of the thighs to be under strain and the ankles to thicken. Let her observe orbys of her ilk. Their ankles swing from side to side, which is all wrong. The ankle is a one-way hinge, designed to move forward and backward, no other way. A foot survey made in Iowa State colleges some years ago showed that only three girl students in forty-five had normal feet. Fancy that!

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She Finds Her Soldier-Husband Different Since He Went Overseas.

Dear Miss Fairfax—

I am 18 years old and married. My husband is in the army, serving overseas. We loved each other very much when we married, but lately my love seems to be weakening. Last time he came home on furlough he acted so strangely cold me he was sorry he married me, and said he was glad he could get back to camp.

I've always been true to him, sent him money and anything he wanted. He have saved some money, write him regularly, etc. His writes me about once a month, but his letters are never loving, and he says things like I'm sure he believes he would like me to leave him.

I feel so discouraged at times. Please give me your advice. Shall I keep on writing to him?

—"B"

The papers have been full of medical reports begging women to have patience, more and more and yet more patience with husbands who have returned from overseas service. It's the exceptional man who comes back unchanged and is able to take up his old routine.

If your husband hasn't fallen in love with someone else and you are not in love with another man, the situation is likely to become normal again. But you must show far too much of a soldier to return the same old happy-go-lucky fellow he was before he experienced combat duty overseas. If you love him enough, giving him another chance, bright note.

Illustrated Talk Given at St. John's

On Thursday evening last, a very pleasant program of colorful slides was presented at St. John's Church. The large audience followed with interest a variety of pictures depicting the beauty of the Northwest Territories and the acts of self-sacrifice endured by home missionaries among the Eskimos and Indians of the north and the Chinese on the west coast.

Miss B. Jones introduced the theme of the following slides—"Publishers of Peace". The important items of Miss Jones' address dealt with the background of a certain publishing company, the Missions of the Eskimos by the Indians near the Coppermine River, which afterwards earned it the name of "Bloody Falls". On the present site has been erected St. Paul's Mission to spread the word of God to the Indians and also a hospital and means for Christian Education at that these Canadian citizens may share Christianity with other Canadians.

The speaker went on to describe the modern airport manned by the U.S. Airforce is located on this same river. This airport will serve as a centre in post-war days for Trans-Polar flights and Asia via the North Pole. Due to the extreme cold the airmen wear special electrically heated suits. Next was the Peace Shirt Company here.

With this missionary atmosphere created by the speaker, Mr. E. J. Grant, Church Secretary, read the "Publishers of Peace", with Miss Jones giving appropriate comments on the life and activity suggested by each picture.

A brief program then followed. Miss Jenny Redner gave a laughing-song "Grandmother's Cat and the Mice" and "The Cow", a guitar solo by Mrs. Ryan in which she accompanied. The pupils of Mr. and Mrs. Darling's sang "Jesus Loves Me" also accompanied by Mrs. Ryan at the piano. Miss J. Redner followed with another in her favorite recitations which concluded the program.

The government had determined to embark on the policy of relieving real estate of part of the cost of education without waiting for a

Dominion-Provincial conference which would have "considered it in such an entirely different manner."

The Conservative government had decided on taking any long term action, however, and had accordingly decided that in 1946 the provincial Dominion-Provincial conference that it be "unbearable to add to its tax structure which we believe to be already high."

Listing the school grants on the basis of electoral ridings, Mr. Frost indicated Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, $1,499,976, compared with $462,904 last year.

Figures for other counties, with 1946 grants in brackets, follow:

Brantford $262,886 ($76,393); London $792,952 ($234,716); Hamilton $1,000,000 ($290,000); Kingston $127,255 ($61,686); Peterborough $254,000 ($73,000); North Bay, March $213,000 ($62,000); Ottawa $213,215 ($63,000); Windsor $1,000,000 ($290,000); Port Arthur $212,933 ($68,163); Fort William $26,000 ($7,453); Woodstock $62,659 ($20,000); Walkerville $62,659 ($20,000).

Air Force Program Given by Minister

By JACK BEALSY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, March 12 (CP)— Rear Col. Colin Gibson, M. just sworn in as new Air Minister, paused long enough today as he bundled papers for his new department of the Ministry to air force headquarters to tell a reporter something of the big job ahead of him.

He broke down his immediate air force program into:—

1. Winding up the big commonwealth air training plan.

2. Arranging operation of air crew schools for the R.A.F.

3. Completing plans for the air force Pacific effort which will follow the war in Europe.

4. Preparing for a possible occasional air force.

5. Knocking the last remaining wrinkles out of the demobilization organization.

6. Keeping an eye on the health of a strong post-war air force.

There will be no changes in the chiefs of the air force, Col. Gibson predecessor Mrs. G. G. Power left behind.

Had he a message to give the men who will be affected by the demobbing?

"Well, I think not at this time," he said. "I have not yet had the chance to learn yet about the services and the people there. The policy is to cut short any thoughts I might unwisely express."

Toronto Maple Leafs Hottest Team at Present in N.H.L. With Playoffs Week Away

Day's Men Swamp Boston Bruins on Saturday and Take Detroit on Sunday

By EDDIE LEE
(CP Staff Writer)

The third-place Toronto Maple Leafs inherited the National Hockey League schedule into its final complete week with conclusive demonstration that at the moment they are the hottest group of puck manipulators in the circuit.

Not that Montreal Canadiens failed to impress when they eliminated New York Rangers from the playoff picture by successive 7-3 and 11-5 victories against the men of Manhattan at Montreal Saturday and New York Sunday.

Nor did Boston Bruins lack flash when they shattered a six-game losing streak and brought Chicago Black Hawks' startling upward climb an abrupt halt with a 7-3 victory over the Birds at Boston on Sunday.

But Bruins tested Leaf power at Toronto Saturday — and disintegrated under the pressure losing 5-2. Canadiens had fallen 3-2 a week previously.

Leafs rounded out their week-end picture with a 3-2 triumph against Red Wings at Detroit Sunday, their initial win against the club in nine meetings this season.

Canadiens clinched their second straight N.H.L. championship today. Little Joseph Ottawa led the way with three goals and an assist and the others scoring were Toe Blake, Bouchard, Dutch Hiller, Ray Getliffe and Elmer Lach.

Demarco Scores Brace

Ab Demarco scored a brace for Rangers in the second period after Montreal had notched four and Hank Goldup completed the scoring with a late third period counter.

On Sunday, Elmer Lach ran his season's assist total to 51 to crack the N.H.L. record of 49 set last year by Clint Smith of Chicago. Lach accounted for a goal and four assists. Maurice Rocket Richard enlarged his individual goal record for a season to 48 by potting two.

Toe Blake, Hiller and Getliffe were also two-goal producers for Montreal and Grant Warwick scored two for Rangers. Bob Pilion and Fernand Gauthier accounted for the other Canadien markers and Demarco, Goldup and Bob Dill tallied for Rangers.

Leafs broke out for five second-period goals at Toronto as Sgt. Bob Davidson, Mel Hill, Wally Stanowski and Ted Kennedy clicked in rapid succession after Paul Ronty had scored the only goal of the opening stanza. Armand Gendreault accounted for the other Boston tally in the second.

Kennedy and Davidson notched their second goals of the night in the third period and Sweeney Schriner, scorer in the first and 2nd periods, were the other Leaf scorers.

The victory left Bruins two points ahead of Hawks and each team has three games to play including the final of their 10-game season series at Chicago Thursday.

Leafs won their first contest on Detroit ice since March 14, 1943, when Ted Kennedy scored in overtime to sink Jack Stewart and Red Wings 3-2 at Detroit Sunday, their initial win against the club in nine meetings this season.

Bill Mosienko Of Hawks Wins Lady Byng Trophy

Awarded Trophy for Best Combining Sportsmanship With Playing Ability

Montreal, March 17. (CP)—By an almost-unanimous vote, Bill Mosienko has been awarded the Lady Byng Trophy of the National Hockey League, to mark the third year in a row that Chicago Back Hawk players have won the trophy for best combining sportsmanship with playing ability.

Black Hawk players had the award clinched from the start, and if Mosienko hadn't taken it the trophy would have gone to linemate Clint Smith who wound up in second spot, ahead of Detroit's durable Syd Howe. Smith took the honors last year and Max Bentley in 1942-43.

The total margin of 14 points prevented Smith from becoming the first man to straddle Bentley's record as the latter was in his prime to take the award three times, for Smith won it in 1938-39 when he played for Rangers as well as last year. Boucher took the honors seven times in the eight-year period between 1927-28 and 1934-35.

Mosienko wound up with 95 points out of a possible 110 Smith had 81 and Howe finished with 73. Voting for the trophy is conducted by the N.H.L. with each club nominating two sports writers from the league's membership to vote. Each nominator picks 10 players, with a 10 point going to a first choice, nine to a second, eight to a third and so on.

The trophy first went up for competition in 1936-37 and was donated by Lady Byng to be awarded annually to the player "judged to have exhibited the best type of sportsmanship and gentlemanly conduct, combined with high standard of playing ability during the season".

They'll Do It Every Time

By Jimmy Hatlo

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Proof.

A Yorkshire mill-hand charged with having set fire to a large haystack, was defended on the ground that he was not altogether responsible for his actions. One of the witnesses, a typical Yorkshireman, declared that the prisoner "was a bit daft."

"Can you mention any occasion on which the prisoner behaved in a manner to warrant your statement?" he was asked.

"Yes," answered the witness. "An mind once he got half a crown in much for his wages, an'—"

"Well?" said counsel, as the witness hesitated.

"He took it back to t'manager!"

Flyers Beat Army.

An all-star team from Mountain View and Trenton stepped into Kingston and beat the great Kingston Army team 4 to 3 Saturday night in an exhibition game that originally was scheduled up to be played in Belleville, but had to be played on the artificial ice at the Jack Harty arena. Boasting of such great stars as Edgar Laprade, Adam Brown, Joe Pasho and other former professionals the Army sextette ran into a distinct snag when the Flyers' forward lineup dazzled and sundry with a decided edge over the Kingston crew. Included in the team from Kingston indicate Robertson, Bennett and Hendrie, two of the star of the game with continued sensational serves to beat the Army. Among the fans at the game at the Hume arena earlier in the season would have proved a real treat. Incidentally the Quinte Air Force league is letting all the league players have a banquet at the Quinte Hotel tonight.

Some Scoring Record.

Commenting on the scoring prowess of the Omemee "Black Hawks," of which the majority of players coned a set from the Lindsay, Fred (Peterboro Examiner) Craig has kept the tallying statistics of the Tompkins-Real-Kingston trio. Brown and Ross of Belleville flaya Fred: "The Black Hawks have now reaied off 13 games and we are still waiting for some scribe anywhere in the country to come up with the figures that will show a scoring record by any one line, anywhere, any time in the history of the O.H.A. over a 13 game period that will surpass the performance of the Kingston-Tompkins-Real trio which scored nine of the 10 Omemee goals the other night and has now racked up a score of 132 goals in 13 games, an average of a shade better than 10 goals a game for the entire season. At the same time we would like to hear from somebody who can produce a better goal-scoring effort by any one player in the same number of games than the mark that has been set by Honey Tompkins in the 13 games. The right-winger rapped home five goals against Brougham Wednesday night and that gives him a total of 62 markers for the season, almost five scores a game over a 13-game stretch. That makes the record-breaking achievement of Maurice Richard of the Canadiens look decidedly ordinary. The record-Gadd line has now scored 132 goals, had 98 assists and compiled a total scoring record of 220 points. Kingston starts with 42 goals and 43 assists for 85 points, Tompkins has 62 goals and 52 assists for 84 points and Real 27 goals and 23 assists for 50 points."

Local Cagers Too Good.

Kingston's junior pucksters may have disposed of Belleville at hockey but when it came to basketball the Belleville cagers completely reclassed the Limestone City cagers in the first round juvenile Ontario Basketball Association playdowns as the Belleville kids trounced Kingston 120 to 22 in a two-game series last week. The Belleville athletics beat the Kingston squad 51 to 7 in Kingston and won 69 to 15 here. This speaks exceedingly well of the local defensive play to limit a team to 22 points in two games.

At home it was Spafford, Watkin and Watson who rang the scoring gong for Belleville, at every member of Ed Shortt's local team scored at least four points to outclass Kingston in every department. They now have qualified to meet Trenton in the next round.

Remember When.

Nowie Morenz, then 31, Stratford, Ont., centre man with the Montreal Canadiens, was voted by sports writers as the fastest player in the National Hockey League 11 years ago today. Morenz was numbered as one of hockey's all time greats before he died of a heart block in January, 1937, at the age of 35.

Shares Slugging Record.

A major league slugging record not previously denoted in the official averages was equalled last season by Manager Mel Ott of the Giants. Joe Manuel Alvarez, baseball statistician, from Cienfuegos, Cuba, has discovered.

By collecting 208 bases on long hits in 1946—the fourteenth time Master Mel cleared the century figure in this department—Ott tied the major league record held jointly by the Yankees' erstwhile home run twins, Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 625
By SAM GORDON
The Knitter

There is something comforting about your bridge partner's jump response. From there on during the rest of that deal you feel as if you can sort of swing shirt the responsibility.

Park yourself in the south seat with this partnership pair:

SOUTH
♦5 3 2
♣A 8 4 3 2

♣Q J 10 7 5

The bidding should go like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 C	2 D
2 NT	→ 3 C
3 NT	4 C
5 C	Pass

At an earlier stage of the bidding, your partner in the north could have gone to five clubs. But his one-jump of two diamonds was a forcing-game signal. So, here was no hurry.

Meantime, he was not yet sure there was no slam. Perhaps a few exchanges of information might disclose whether it would be the sensible way of approaching the final contract.

Your bid of two no trumps and three no trump were repeated bids that got you no more tricks. In other words, you were admitting that the first tricks promised by your opening were all you had.

Therefore, partner could have bid five clubs instead of four clubs and saved you anxiety. But there is always the hope that you may be holding back some slight additional values.

After his four club bid, you could invite ace and king, showing by a bid of four no trump. But that would be dangerous when you have not been able to discover as many as 12 tricks in your pair.

The forcing-game signal told you not to stop short or game. So, with no honest bid available, five clubs was your safest bet.

Between two evils you choose the one less likely to lose.

FALCONS SWEPT FROM O.H.A. RACE BY ST. MICHAELS

Young Rangers Tie Galt in Games in Semi-Final Round

By The Canadian Press
St. Michaels ran wild to sweep St. Catharines Falcons from O.H.A. junior "A" semi-final elimination with a 14-1 victory Saturday afternoon in Toronto to take the fifth and deciding fixture of their best-of-seven series and qualify to face the survivor of the Galt - Young Rangers race in the championship finals which open Wednesday night at Toronto.

In the senior division, Hamilton Majors assumed a 3-1 lead in the championship argument by trimming the Saints at St. Catharines 7-1 at the Garden City Saturday night. The fifth and possibly deciding set-to of this series is scheduled to be played Tuesday night at Hamilton ice.

Sherry Hits Comfort

The senior tussle was marred by an incident in which defenceman Bill Sherry of Hamilton sent Murray Comfort of Saints to the surgery for four stitches by striking him with his stick, Sherry drawing a five minute major penalty for the incident. Comfort received first aid treatment at the O.H.A. Clinic and is the second such attack by Sherry in successive games, the previous victim being playing coach Jimmy Foster.

Doug Romiens, Dillon Brady, Johnny Woolick and Jimmy Gale provided the scoring honors for Majors and "Cannonball" Joe Conway for Saints. Hamilton led off with a 2-0 edge in the first period and extended the lead to 5-0 before Saints, St. Catharines getting the lone counter in the third minute of play which Majors played a man short because of the sherry penalty.

Oshawa Bees Put Out Vics

Oshawa, March 13. (Special)—Oshawa Bees advanced to the third round of the O.H.A. Junior "B" championship playdowns when they defeated and eliminated Kingston Victoria Aces 4-0 in two straight, on the Oshawa Arena here tonight, winning by a score of 3-1 on the game and 7-4 on the round.

Going into the game facing a 1-goal deficit, by virtue of Oshawa's 7-3 victory in the Limestone City on Thursday night, Kingston Vics started off in a lordly clip, but they just didn't seem to have the necessary punch to work into scoring position. Up to the Oshawa blue line the visitors showed to advantage, but that was about all in the centre-ice area that they enjoyed an edge. Once the Oshawa territory they did set to show scoring punch, and their defence accounted for every Kingston goal came from one of a dozen or more attempts staged by the Vics on Goalie MacMillan's doorstep. In the straight up-and-down play the Oshawa defence stood firm and excelled with a steady display that kept Goalie Ken Read from working and he starred all by himself. The homesters broke away for a couple of goals near the end of the first period and following a close-check-ing second stanza that produced no scoring the issue was settled in the net until barely four minutes left to play that Kingston finally scared themselves from a shutout and then Bathe, who had figured in Oshawa's previous goals, got this one back, after four attempts, with just a little over a minute left to go.

CORNWALL FLYERS NOW IN FINALS

Lachine, Que., March 12—(CP)—Cornwall Flyers nosed out Lachine Rapides 5-4 in overtime here yesterday, and captured their intermediate provincial League senior semi-final 4 games to two.

The Flyers now wait for the winners of the Valleyfield-Shawinigan series for the league final. They came from behind to take the honors, after dropping the first two games of the best-of-seven series.

Bernie Lagacee and Bobby Carragher led the Cornwall attack with 2 goals each, with Lamson bagging the overtime counter that turned out to be the winner. The other Cornwall goal went to Gerry Gravel at the start of the overtime session.

Jacques Theriault got two for Lachine, including an overtime counter that failed to overcome the two-goal edge the Flyers had gained earlier in the period. Eric Poissois and Jean Armand bagged the other Lachine goals.

EXPLOITS FIELD FOR BALLET IN WESTERN CANADA

Club Formed by Englishwoman Seven Years Ago Has Become Popular Centre for Winnipeg Dance Devotees

By ENID HENRY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Winnipeg, March 12 (CP) — A petite blue-eyed Englishwoman is the driving force behind ballet in Western Canada.

Gwenith Lloyd came to Canada in 1926 and in seven years she has made ballet as familiar as "Hiebagging is thousands of young Canadians.

Born in Lancashire, England and a member of the Royal Academy of Dancing, she is an honour graduate of the Dinsmore-Mawer school of dancing.

Miss Lloyd came to Winnipeg because it was the only city in Canada where she knew anyone. "I felt I was getting in a rut and it was time to conquer new worlds." A visit in 1926 had shown there was a great field for ballet in the west. However, she added ruefully, "I don't think I'd do it over again."

With her from England came one of her star pupils, Betty Heyworth. Miss Pernelly, a former dancer they organized the Winnipeg Ballet Club and during the visit of the King and Queen to Canada, in 1939, put on their first show — two short ballets.

Miss Lloyd's work with the Winnipeg ballet includes the choreography for 13 complete ballets. The club rests on its own merits. "We have no financial support and until recently we had no moral support. Even the standard against which Majors played a man short because of the sherry penalty.

Eight in Row

Eight in Row. Eight players figured in the junior scoring spree at Thorold Saturday night when Falcons and Saints, Ted Sloan rang up three goals while assisting on three others and Costello was in the limelight with a pair of scores and no less than five assists. Turik, Sadler and Orsulesville each scored twice and singles were added by Ross, Thompson and Gray. The lonely Falcons counter was registered by Doug McMurchy.

Background Necessary

Dancers cannot be untrained, says Miss Lloyd, they must have some sort of background. If you don't know anything you can't interpret it. So the ballet club should be equivalent to a university course, she believes.

Many of Winnipeg's most talented young people have given their time and talent to the club with no return. Paddy Stone, a lithe and versatile performer, is the club's greatest success. He has been offered a contract with a professional ballet company and will make that his profession after the war, Jeanne McKenzie now a ballet teacher in Vancouver, was another club star. John Russell, head of the University of Manitoba, designs the setting for all the ballets while his wife, Betty, designs many of the costumes. David Yeddeau, a veteran of Little Theatre work, acts as stage director, publicity manager and make-up artist.

One of the momentous moments in the club's history came recently when they visited Ottawa as guest artists on the Canadian Odeon Thursday night, Kingston Vics started off in a lordly clip, but they just didn't seem to have the necessary punch to work into scoring position. Up to the Oshawa blue line the visitors showed to advantage, but that was about all in the centre-ice area that they enjoyed an edge. Once the Oshawa territory they did set to show scoring punch, and their defence accounted for every Kingston goal came from one of a dozen or more attempts staged by the Vics on Goalie MacMillan's doorstep. AT THE BELLE

"Mrs. Parkington," the new MGM Goldwyn - Mayer picture which opened Saturday at the Belle Theatre, is the story of the life of the previous Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon productions this season. Others are: "Pride and Prejudice" and "Mrs. Miniver" and "Madame Curie."

These two, and an outstanding performance cast, bring the best-selling Louis Bromfield novel to cinematic life with zest and great realism. Greer Garson, Mark Parkington, Miss Garson makes a complete change from she studious and conservative women she played in those previous successes. In "Mrs. Parkington" she is dashing and dominating, a worldly woman with the world at her feet.

Pidgeon, in this film, portrays a reckless, ambitious and flamboyant man, a far cry from his Mr. Miniver or Pierre Curie. Together, they prove—if further proof were needed—that they are at once the greatest and most versatile film starring team in many years.

The story takes us from 1872, when Susie Graham (Miss Garson) is the daughter of a boarding-house keeper in Leaping Rock, Nev., marries Major Augustus Parkington (Pidgeon). They open a home in New York and there begins the life of the Parkingtons and the ruthless Major's manoeuvres, of the way they affect Susie's life and Pidgeon and her children's.

The story takes us into the late 1930's with Mrs. Parkington still the family's dominating character and a supporting cast, headed by Edward Arnold, Agnes Moorehead and Cecil Kellaway and including Gladys Cooper, Tom Conway, Frances Rafferty and Peter Lawford, among others, is seen in support of the stars.

You will not want to miss "Mrs. Parkington," a picture which is bound to enthrall you every minute of the time.

The Canadian Belle Global Newsreel, and a funny M-G-M cartoon in color, "Barney Bear's Polar Fest" completes the program.

THE SECRET OF THE MARSHBANKS

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

CHAPTER 15

"I wanted Linda's career to me them. But she's left school, graduated down in Norwood City, has also worked with me in the Marshbanks house.

Cherry Lodge was eighteen and I was thirty. I was sewing in my room one night. We were all in-room—comfortable strain in the house, for at last Fred's wife was going to have a baby, and they were terribly anxious for fear something go wrong again.

"It was eleven o'clock, and I was thinking of going to bed when suddenly my door opened and Lottie was there. She gave me a terrible start.

"The minute I saw her I knew we were lost somehow, but I didn't know why. She looked pale and changed and she didn't smile or kiss me, she just crossed the room and knelt down at my knee, and said, 'Oh, I'm in trouble.'

"I guess my life—the real living —ended right there. Emma went on, after a moment when only Cherry's dilated eyes and half-parted lips and quickly moving breast showed how absorbed she was, "I asked her what kind of trouble, and she cried, and gradually it came to me—that I knew.

"I kept patting her hands, and swallowing, and looking away, and by and by I heard myself telling her, 'All right, darling, I'll take care of you. We'll get out of this somehow.' When she stopped sobbing and was leaning against me, tossing her hair against my cheek, I asked her who it was, if I knew the man.

"Then she told me.

"For a few minutes the whole world seemed to rock and roar with it," Emma went on, talking in a low tone now, looking into space with narrowed eyes, seeming to be only thinking aloud. "It was as if a gun had gun off. My throat was thick and my head hurt. But I had to keep holding tight to her, telling her it was all right, that we'd get through—we'd get through somehow. Had she told anyone? No, nobody—nobody. She carried that secret for five months.

"To think, Cherry of the values they were, that I'd planned for the Marshbanks baby, and of the way the world was tried. Lizzie's unwanted little scrap, seemed to work like some terrible, shrieking storm in me. I put her to bed, she'd stayed at the house often enough; there was no comment to anyone; and it Fred Marshbanks ever had thought of her, he had probably put it all out of his mind, as a moment's foolish mistake before marriage.

"Lottie went off to sleep, and the next morning she was her quiet little self. Bonifacio, the Filipino servant, we had then, brought up breakfast, and I sent him down for another tray that went placidly enough. And I began to think if I could possibly keep Lottie safe up there, on the third floor of a big house. Where else would she be so hidden and so safe? I always had breakfast in my room for breakfast; my trays always had too much food on them, and Filipinos aren't talkers. I said to Bonifacio that my sister would be with me a good deal. It was none of his business he didn't care. Lottie could come and go in the quiet hours of the day, and in the evenings. If we'd arranged for years to have this happen we couldn't have arranged it more safely for her.

"I don't remember that we talked of it much. Weeks went by. Lottie expected her baby in January. She and I went on very quietly, reading together evenings, sewing, talking. I had arranged for her to go to a good hospital in January....."

"January!" Cherry interrupted. "But we were both born in November, Amy and I!"

"Yes, but one of you came two months too early," Emma went on with the story. "I was going to Fred, and if necessary bring in his brother, for the judge had moved out here then, and have them acknowledge his child. But it all came out differently.

"When I came upstairs one wet November afternoon I found her in bed. Her trouble had come upon her, Bonifacio told me soon. I slipped down and telephoned old Doctor Percival. He is the friend of mine I rule when I took the nurses' training course in the hospital, and I knew he would be discreet, secret.

"The old Madame was out, Fred was 'working', and Fred's wife was dozing in her room. The doctor came in quietly the side way—I looked out that one but fifteen minutes before he arrived Lottie's little girl, very tiny but healthy enough, was born. There was nothing for him to do, he went away and left her to me. And then I had some thinking to do again, for there was Lizzie's sibling a new baby very long."

"Four nights later," Emma continued, "we heard a good deal of laughing and calling downstairs, as I made some errand to go down to Mrs. Fred's room, and then came up and reported to Lottie. Mrs. Fred's father had arrived, and had brought the baby everything—his pram and chair and crib, his silver bowl and plate, and they'd been opening them up and ruffling a great fuss.

"Well, old Mr. Wellington went away, and the Madame went to her room, and things settled down. As soon as she could be moved I was going to get Lottie to a boarding-house I knew of. So I was breathing easier,

"I settled Lottie and the baby off for the night, and went to my room. This was maybe eleven o'clock. I was undressed, and just getting into bed when I heard the baby cry and went into Lottie's room.

"Her bed was tumbled and she was gone. I ran to the stairhead and saw lights in the hallway below and Lottie coming. Then I heard Lottie's voice in Mrs. Fred's room, and then Fred shouting. I don't know how I got down there. Mrs. Fred had stumbled back toward her bed and was saying to Lottie, 'There was a terrible accident when I got there, and then Amelia said he'd gone for help.'

"'I don't lie,' Lottie said. She was so weak she was leaning against a chair. Her hair was down her back and was too. 'Ask him!' she said. And then she said, 'It's true! It's your child still have everything—bowls and bowls and bowls and bowls—and all I get is diapers!'

"'Fred's dead!' Mrs. Fred said to my mother. How about this? Abe looked at him, and her face was like death. 'Fred's dead!' she said.

"Yes, he said very calmly, 'it's true.'

"That was all I heard. I got Lottie back to bed. She was afraid if she had killed her. She was crying wildly but after awhile she calmed down now and then, and I was creeping back to bed again when the old Madame called me, Amelia was having hysterics and for a few minutes it seemed as if we couldn't bring her around. From screaming with laughter she went into real screaming, and in a few minutes I detid Fred to call the hospital and tell her doctor we were taking her there—that this baby was coming. But we didn't have to move her, and when the poor tiny baby came into this world it didn't look as if it could last an hour.

"The doctor was there and had brought a nurse; they had the ambulance at the door and they said Amelia was shaking with fever as a matter of minutes unless they could get her to the hospital for a transfusion. Fred had rushed on ahead to have his blood tested, and Amelia followed. The doctor called Amelia. 'I'm afraid the baby won't live,' the doctor said to me, for you were as blue as an iceberg and about as cold.'

"I was!" Cherry exclaimed in a whisper.

"Yes. It was you. I did what I could with hot water and an eye-dropper, fired the crib, tearing open the packages of blankets and new beautiful monogrammed sheets, laid you in them with a hot-water bottle at your feet and ran upstairs to tell Lottie and get my night wrapper.

"Mrs. Fred's had her poor little baby,' I said to Lottie. 'It's a valvular case, I think. It can't live the night through. I'm going down to sit by it and wait until the old Madame comes back.'"

"Then I went downstairs and began a long vigil. Once Mrs. Marshbanks telephoned Fred's wife was very low. How was the baby? I had to say something cheerful; I said she looked much better. It was about five o'clock when Fred came in. I'd been within hearing of the child all the time, but I'd gone into the dressing room to drink a cup of coffee and twice I'd been out to telephone to Mrs. Marshbanks' room.

"He looked deathly; they'd taken a pint of blood from him, saving Amelia's life, he said. He came in to fling himself down for some sleep. But first he took a look at the baby.

"'Why, Emma, she's small but she'll make the grade. She looks like a different baby!' he said. I went over and looked down expectingly to see you, breathing your very last, maybe—but instead I recognized Lottie's child.'

"Emma's breath had been coming shallow and fast as she reached the last phrases. Now she was perfectly still, and the room was still.

"She's changed them—changed us!" Cherry said in a whisper.

"Lottie. She'd slipped downstairs while I was out of the room, put her own baby into the crib, carried you upstairs. I don't know," Emma said, "whether—if I'd come to think I'd had my wits about me—I might've have told him, then and there. But I was like a person struck senseless. What it meant to me, what it meant to Lottie, what it would give Lottie's baby if the other baby died, and if Lottie mightn't be in danger of—oh, I don't know what, prison maybe—if they found out. Anything!

"I stood there, struck silent, and before we turned away Mrs. Marshbanks and Old Mr. Wellington were in the room. 'Not living, Emma!' she said, coming to the crib, 'Living!' Fred said, 'and she looks all right! 'Why, little girl,' the old man said, in that baby voice he, 'you may stay with us yet. This is good news for Amelia!' he added, 'and we'll get it to her right away. Yes,' he said, 'you catch onto my finger and if you had a good deal of spunk, baby, Emma I thank God for this!' The doctor told us that it was one chance in a hundred. My little granddaughter looks pretty well to me!'

"That finished me. I couldn't say a word then. I thought of the thing upstairs, perhaps dead already, I think I thought it all out, Cherry. But anyway, I acted as if I had. I heard my own voice saying, 'She's had a bath and some sleep, and she does look stronger.' Immediately Fred burst into tears; he was a tender-hearted fellow, and he'd grown up some that night. The judge and old Mr. Wellington said they'd go back to the hospital when they'd until Amelia was awake, and give her the good news.

Fred followed me into the hall. 'Emma,' he said, 'you know what your sister said last night, after my wife fainted?'

"I was so tired—so frightened, all I could do was nod.

"'Was it true?' he asked me, "I've been married six years, and Amelia and I have always wanted a baby.'

"Tell me that Lottie was sharing me."

"She's not going to have a baby,' I said, looking him right in the eye.

"Oh, thank God!' he said. 'Then she heard anything or guessed anything—I can tell my wife that!' he said. 'Well her I'm sorry.'

"He went into his room. I went upstairs to Lottie's room. Sharissa lying in bed, wide awake, with a tensed tripod expression in her eyes.

"My little girl," she said in a whisper, 'will have what she's entitled to. This one shall be no more off. Look at her. Emma she can't live. Who's hurt? Little Charlotte's with her father, and a mamma's dear little baby gets buried.'

"I couldn't speak about it. The world seemed to have gone to pieces on me. I went over and looked at you. It would have killed Amelia Marshbanks to give up the healthy child that was asleep downstairs and put the lifeless little thing that was you in her place. You scarcely hardly breathing; for days you flickered between life and death. And if you had gone, Lottie's baby was safe and you were no worse off.

HorseRuns Away, Wagon Damaged

Becoming frightened when the bouncing cow broke as it was proceeding down Church Street this morning, a delivery horse owned by the Roblin Dairy ran away with the delivery wagon of the milk wagon, which was partially wrecked.

Running to the curbside in front of the Martin Funeral Home the horse crashed into a parked car at this point as collision with a non-parking car forced the driver of the horse continued his flight down Church Street until he was eventually stopped by Jack Dundas Street to all appearances unhurt.

Damage to the wagon was slight. In collision with the metal sign post wrecked the shafts and upset the wagon to strew empties and full milk bottles along the street. Practically all the bottles contained in the wagon were broken, while four in the case of milk were left. Although the collision with the sign post damaged the vehicle, police officials of the Roblin Dairy indicated it was repairable. The horse suffered bruises from the wagon as otherwise possibly greater damage may have resulted.

Arctic Rescue Brings Award To Eskimo Boy

Royal Canadian Humane Association Also Lists Many Ontario and Quebec Persons Honored for Brave Deeds

Hamilton, Ont., March 12 (CP)—Tommy, a 20-year-old Eskimo youth, was awarded the Royal Canadian Humane Association bronze medal in the awards list announced for the rescue Aug. 30, 1943, of Mrs. R. H. Kilgour, off Baffin Island in the Northwest Territories.

Mr. and Mrs. Kilgour, Tommy and a second Eskimo, Jimmy, were travelling in a motor boat in the outer entrance to Pond Harbor when the small craft was upset in a rip tide and Mr. Kilgour and Jimmy were drowned.

Tommy managed to scramble onto the bottom of the overturned boat and Mrs. Kilgour following his instructions, was able to do likewise. With a small slab of driftwood, Tommy paddled the disabled craft ashore and then half carried Mrs. Kilgour 10 miles to the nearest settlement which they reached the next afternoon.

Bronze medals were also awarded to George Bukator and Allen Sedore, both of Chippawa, Ont., for the rescue May 19, 1944, of John Probash. Joseph Scotch and Stanley Swiatkowski when the trio lost control of a raft on which they were sailing in the Niagara River. Bukator and Sedore rowed out to the rescue of the three men just as their raft was being swept rapidly into the current toward the Falls.

Tokyo Radio Makes Exaggerated Statement

San Francisco, March 12 (AP)—In a curious mixture of the current war situation Tokyo radio today made the exaggerated statement that American forces are "attempting to make a landing on Japan proper."

Content of the Tokyo report, as recorded by the Blue Network, made it clear that the propaganda broadcast was not reporting an actual invasion already underway. Either the radio was again stressing that American forces which have been operating in Japanese waters for weeks are preparing to invade Japan, or the Japanese broadcaster had trouble expressing himself in English.

Situation Serious

London, March 12 (CP)— The Japanese War Minister was quoted in a Tokyo broadcast today as declaring that Japan's situation was "very serious" and that "the enemy is going to force an all-out decision as soon as possible and will land in Japan in the near future."

Queer Armadillo

By DOROTHY L. SMITH

In "Our Dumb Animals" Quadrupeds That's right, folks! Not one, not two, not three, but four—that's the number of offspring the female armadillo may expect every time the stork makes a call. Four babies every time. Not only that, but the sex of all four will always be the same. If male, all of them will be male. If female, all will be female. It's just another one of Nature's strange whims that makes this true, regardless of the mother armadillo's feelings about the matter.

It's a queer animal—the armadillo. Queer in the way it is made, queer in its habits, and even queer in its choice of food. Ants, it likes, and carrion food (dead stuff that has long since lost its freshness). This gives its flesh a taste not much relished by those who like their bird dinners hot, and their cold dinners cold. For in South America where the armadillo makes its home, the natives really eat its flesh. That is, if they can catch the elusive animal. Its legs and claws are made for burrowing. And if it is pursued it can burrow in the ground quicker than any pursuer can follow. Besides that, it is a timid animal, and seldom goes out except at night.

And the clothes that it wears! Ever see suits of armor in a museum? Suits of armor that the knights of old wore, for protection in battle? That gives a rough idea of how the strange animal is protected. An armor of bony, movable plates covers the back and entire sides of its body. These bony plates allow it plenty of freedom to move, and yet they protect the flesh beneath. Even the head is protected by a bonnet of bony structure, entirely separate from the shoulder plates. And in some species, the tail (if it has one, for they all do not) is also covered. If attacked, the armadillo can roll itself into a ball. When it does that, only the bony outside plates show, and all the tender flesh underneath is protected.

One of the queerest of the armadillo family is found in Argentina. It is called the pichiciago. That's a queer name, isn't it? It is only five or six inches long, which is very small compared with the giant armadillo, which may measure up to four feet long. Anyway, instead of ending in a tail, as any respectable armadillo would, the hind part of the pichiciago gives the appearance of being squarely cut off. It makes him look mighty queer, like the rear end of a scow.

BRITISH FARMING

By L. F. EASTERBROOK

(BBC. From Service).

"What struck me most about British farming when you first came to it," asked a Dutch farmer, a refugee over in this country.

"Its size," I suggested, rather thoughtfully. "I'd read about England before I came, and I always thought it's pretty good place. But I found everything rather better than I expected. The scenery, the soil, the standards of farming, and the good spirit I found among the people on the land. I arrived in the winter. It was astonishing to see the grass so green. And it seemed quite like home, seeing so many Friesian cattle about."

I told him they were rather in the fashion just now, and I told him how a great drive was on to raise the standards of our commercial herds, especially the dairy herds. For we have had criticism as well as praise from some of our visitors, and although we can boast some of the finest pedigree livestock in the world, there are too many, of inferior quality on some of our farms.

"Yes," said my friend, "That encourages me to say something. You have great natural possibilities. You've found in this city to appoint two farmers from the group to settle their countries as wonderful as Holland. My Polish friend thought this a most extraordinary thing. It is true, he said, I solve half the problems of Polish agriculture, it could be applied there when the war was over. But why," he asked, "did the group not form to sell into a co-operative society and buy and own its machinery cooperatively? Why, indeed, could not him the answer to that one."

I could only tell him that the making up of the British farmer is such that he would rather hire machinery, at so much a day, to and from his neighbours than join in some scheme by which a lot of people appear to own the same implement. But there's no reason why the same plan could not be worked on a co-operative basis.

Several people from Jugo-Slavia have been particularly interested in our system of mixed farming, which involves frequent ploughing of much of our grassland, taking a grain crop or two, then putting it back to grass again. This means in practice a high production per acre, both in crops and stock, and seems to improve the health of both. It is particularly well suited to the small farmer, because it gives him a high output of such things as milk, eggs and meat, which are in demand in the towns and bring in more cash per acre than a system of Jugo-Slavia is a country of small farms and many people would say—and it buying power could be created in the more populated districts of Jugo-Slavia, here would be the chance for the peasant to raise his very low per-war standard of living.

What appealed to the Frenchman was the way we have mechanized our agriculture, and used machinery not so much to save labour as to do the job better. He saw a demonstration farm in the West where modern machinery has been used to get wheat into the heavy land (which quickly becomes wet and cold) in the autumn, and before the ripening grain crop has been harvested. The yield, in the ensuing harvest, has been just about double that of counties round where the wheat may not be sown until a good two months later.

But men of all nations, I believe must here pay tribute to the spirit behind the farming effort. One often said to me, "You have a national plan for farming that is so drastic that a farmer can't alter the cropping of a field without the permission of his County War Agricultural Committee. And, yet it could never have been carried out without each farmer showing the utmost resources and individual initiative in making the best or his own particular conditions. These conditions, of course, vary with every farm. The execution of the plan seems to depend upon district committees working under the county committee. These committees are made up of ordinary, every day farmers, helped by the advice of technical experts. These farmers are overworked on their own farms. Yet they find time to carry out innumerable visits to guide and help their neighbours. And they don't receive a penny for the job. Sometimes it's a very unpleasant job, as when they have to recommend that a fellow farmer, who may have been their friend for years, should be turned out of his farm because he can't make the grade. Yet they do it. I've never heard a whisper of graft levelled against them, and even the accusation of favouritism is almost unknown. It looks to me as if Britain has given a new lead to democracy in this respect, and that your war time set-up for agriculture has gone further than anything else in showing a way to combine national control with individual initiative."

Perhaps we are doing that on the land of Britain today. Perhaps in the coming years, when the peace-loving nations must pool many things, including scientific knowledge and ideas, something on these lines may be Britain's particular contribution. For maybe we have a gift for grafting the old on to the new and for devising things that work out in practice better than they look on paper. Anyhow it is the practical results visible in Britain today that are appealing to these farmer visitors from overseas and encouraging them to turn once more to Britain for guidance along quite a number of roads of agricultural progress.

He gave his life FOR THE RIGHT TO INVESTIGATE

Roger Bacon, great scientist of the Middle Ages, carried on scientific research in metals, in agriculture, medicine, chemistry. He studied the laws of optics suggested the use of eyeglasses; carried on experiments in magnetism, and produced gunpowder. Imprisoned for fourteen years as a magician of evil, his health finally broke down, and he died in 1292 soon after his release.

LIKE Roger Bacon of old, scientists of today seek to solve many problems through scientific research. In the Nickel industry they have explored many fields in their search for new uses for Canadian Nickel, today practically all industries have improved their products or their manufacturing methods by using Nickel.

When the war is over the Nickel research laboratories will again turn their efforts to developing the known uses for Nickel and discovering new ones.

Canadian engineers, designers and metallurgists have free access to the scientific and technical data gathered together by International Nickel. A request for information is all that is necessary.

Still wider knowledge of the ways in which Nickel may be usefully employed will further increase the demand for Canadian Nickel, and Canada will benefit accordingly.

GAINS WIDEN BRIDGEHEAD TO SIX MILES

Russians Mass at Captured Kuestrin

Artillery Barrage Across Oder Hint Of New Offensive

Bridgeheads Are Merged In Attack on Broad Front

Moscow, March 13. (AP) —Russian heavy guns firing from the ruins of conquered Kuestrin hurled a prophetic barrage across the Oder river today as the Soviet Command worked out the tactical situation for a Berlin offensive in which three Red Army groups may soon take part.

At least five days of furious street fighting preceded yesterday's capture of Kuestrin, scene of the most important German bridgehead on the east bank of the Oder, but the fortress city lies 36 miles northeast of the German capital on the main line of the Russian-Berlin line.

The Germans obviously are pitching their defenses to Marshal Gregory K. Zzukov may choose Kuestrin as the site to send his 2nd White Russian Army group across the Oder in strength.

The enemy radio, in fact, declares the Russians already are across the stream in this area. One German broadcaster said yesterday that several crossings over the Kuestrin halt been merged "into a single attack on a broad front".

The possibility of a junction with the Berlin populace was indicated by one German broadcast, declaring that Soviet airborne troops had landed near the capital.

Field dispatches make it plain that the Russians have accumulated a great concentration of fighting power west of the Oder. Mine fields stretch for miles up and down the river on the Berlin side.

A commander's battle to his victory in Kuestrin still is being waged by Zhukov against another vital enemy bridgehead that embraces the eastern outskirts of Stettin.

Preparing for Attack.

What Zzukov is doing along the Oder is viewed here as plainly preparatory to the launching of a push in the Soviet offensive, but the timing of that blow, in which it is expected he will be joined by army groups commanded by Marshal Ivan S. Konev and Konstantin K. Rokossovsky, has the enemy guessing.

Konev's forces are drawn up in strong force along the Neisse river east of Berlin.

Rokossovsky's group is rapidly closing in on the great port of Danzig from as close as nine miles after emptying the German Pomeranian bulwark Danzig territory. His troops also were eight miles by sea from Gdynia.

Remaining to the Germans at last report was a strip of Baltic coast nearly eight miles wide between Rodreid-Kolberg, on the coast northeast of Stettin, was being heavily shelled by Russian guns, the dead after a skirmish in that area. Yesterday's front line of Lt.-Gen. Rokel, commander of the German infantry division.

Thousands of Film Actors, Laborers Idle Due to Strike

By ROBERT MYERS
(AP Staff Writer)

Hollywood, March 13 — (AP) — Thousands of film workers, from actors to carpenters, overcame labor-management idle today as a multi-million dollar movie studio strike threatened to spread in scope while leaders of the rival producer-union factions grappled in a tight deadlock.

Sharply-worded statements from opposing sides gave no indication of an early settlement of the dispute, which does not involve wages or hours but is based on a three-cornered jurisdictional controversy.

The National Labor Relations Board, which has been examining the case, may be the final arbiter, but when its decision can be expected remained problematical.

Production stoppages in half the major studios yesterday during the picketing rounds seemed certain to spread to other lots as Union spokesmen summoned reinforcements from various unaffiliated groups.

Pickets, Patrol Studio Gates

Pickets continued to patrol studio gates, and sound-trucks and banners were ordered into service.

Hollywood's name-players, meanwhile, remained on the fence pending formal action by the entire membership of the Screen Actors Guild, which is not affiliated with the contesting unions. The 8,000 membership will meet for a strike vote, probably Friday.

The producers' movement was inaugurated by the screen actors, directors and writers Guilds in last night. A committee, consisting of President George Murphy, Dorothy Tree and Gilbert Kurland, met to confer with Union and produced that the "fair and impartial" settlement the hope of settling the strike.

A "peace movement" was started, including Lana Turner, Turhan Bey and Arturo De Cordova turned up yesterday at the picket lines, but many others crossed the lines and worked if they could.

DORTMUND CITY WRITTEN OFF BY ALLIED BOMBERS

5,000 Tons Explosives Dropped on Eastern Gateway to Ruhr In 29 Minutes

London, March 13 (CP)—An other German city in the path of the Allied armies of the western front was written off as dead today following an attack by 1,000 Britain heavy bombers which dropped about 5,000 tons of explosives on that east-west gateway to the Ruhr in 29 minutes yesterday.

It was the biggest daylight attack ever staged by the R.A.F., which also kept the mighty Allied offensive rolling through the mud and slush by sending its fighters and fighter-bombers far into the Nazi economic heartland.

Soon after daybreak today waves of Allied planes again swept over Germany, continuing clock-around bombing which Gen. Eisenhower said is having a "tremendous crushing effect on the enemy."

Dortmund is the second largest city in the industrial Ruhr valley, and Britain's attack yesterday was just about knocked it out as a functioning communities. It was also serving as a major transportation hub. Nearly all troops and supplies coming for the western front passed through the city.

More than 1,500 fully three everything into the attack—using practically every bomber in Bomber Command except those on the smallest incendiary to the largest 13,000-pound earthquake bomb.

The aiming point for the beginning of the attack was the southern part of the city, but each successive wave of bombers dropped its cargo a little ahead of the last one until as the end a pall of destruction was spread right through the centre of the city.

Some pilots also clouds 8,000 feet above to ground were lifted 100 feet by the force of the explosions. Other fliers reported smoke rising 8,000 feet.

Arrival of Big Three On Feb. 3-4 for Parleys At Yalta Described

Washington, March 13 — (AP) A plane bearing United States "stars and bars" landed on a Russian airstrip at 12:15 p.m., Feb. 3.

Franklin D. Roosevelt's 7,000 miles and 13 days away from the White House coast adds a cigaret and stretched out a hand as Soviet Foreign Commissary V. M. Molotov came aboard. They met in easy chairs and chatted.

Twenty minutes later an aide interrupted to tell Mr. Molotov that another plane was landing. Its red, white and blue concentric circles identified it as British.

The Foreign Commissar hurried over as out marched Winston Churchill, chunky-faced, cigar-smoking well-chewed cigar. After a friendly handclasp and exchange of pleasantries, the Britons walked over to the Roosevelt plane. Then all three piled into a jeep.

A guard of honor came to attention. A band played God Save the King, the Star-Spangled Banner and the Russian National Air.

The Prime Minister of Great Britain and the President of the United States walked across the airstrip for eight days of talks—held in the Crimean resort of Yalta—that were to shape the world the war and preserving the peace.

Messrs. Churchill and Roosevelt reached Malta aboard Mr. Stalin. It was not until the next day that the President reached Livadia Palace, scene of all the conferences.

The first session of the second conference of the Big Three buckled down to business at 4 p.m. Feb. 4—the first of eight.

Franklin D. Roosevelt

Washington, March 13 — (AP) — The following is the text of the statement issued by Secretary of State Stettinius on the Crimea conference:

"The following statement has been agreed upon by the heads of the three governments:

"Now that the defeat of Germany is imminent, it is our common duty to concert and coordinate the measures to be taken by the United Nations to secure the unconditional surrender of Germany and to ensure that she will never again be able to disturb the peace of the world.

"We have agreed on the complete disarmament and demilitarization of Germany in such a way as to prevent her ever again disturbing the peace of the world. We have agreed that these measures will include the complete destruction of the German military machine, the elimination or control of all German industry that could be used for military production, the destruction or control of all military equipment, the punishment of war criminals in such a manner as to deny them any opportunity for evasion, the wiping out of the Nazi party, Nazi laws, organizations and institutions, the removal of all Nazi and militarist influences from public offices and from the cultural and economic life of the German people and such other measures as may be necessary to the future peace and safety of the world. We do not intend to destroy the people of Germany, but only when there is no other way to save the world from their barbarism.

"We have agreed that Germany must make compensation for the damage she has caused to the United Nations in this war and we have taken steps to give effect to this principle at the present conference.

"We have agreed that Germany shall be occupied by the armies of the three powers, each responsible for taking in the area assigned to it the measures required for the purpose. We have agreed that a control commission shall be established to carry out the necessary measures of control and that it shall consist of the three commanders in chief with headquarters in Berlin and with such functions as may be assigned to it by the United Nations which will include the zones of occupation and the administration of Greater Berlin.

"We have agreed that France should be invited by the three governments to occupy a zone and to participate as a member of the control commission.

"We have agreed that the boundaries of the German state and the boundaries of Poland in the west should be finally settled at the peace conference. We have in principle agreed that Poland should receive substantial accessions of territory in the north and west. We think that the Polish people should have the right to obtain reparation in kind from Germany. We have agreed that the three governments will examine sympathetically the claim of Poland to extensive reparations in kind for the losses inflicted on her economy by the Germans.

"We have agreed that the three governments will consult together in regard to reparation as soon as practicable. We have agreed that the three governments will examine sympathetically the claim of Poland to extensive reparations in kind for the losses inflicted on her economy by the Germans.

FARMERS FEARFUL OF HARD FROSTS

With the month having melted from open field so early in the season and with the ground thoroughly warmed, many district farmers are now keeping their fingers crossed for the next two or three weeks will pass without a hard frost which would mean the maples and fall grains.

Covered with a good depth of snow insulating the fall grains wintered splendidly and with no frost in the ground the fields are showing green with promise of splendid growth. Alternate freezing and thawing however would retard growth with grievous loss of maple sitting out to be stated by farmers.

USES BUILDING FOR LEANING POST

Today in police court he paid the customary ten and costs for his having used another person's domicile for a leaning post.

$35 IS LIFTED FROM CASH REGISTER

Sneak thieves reached across the counter at the Quinte Billiard room late last Monday night and with the aid of a long-handled gentry lifted $35 from the store cash register, that had been inadvertently left open. The robbery was reported to city police by James Yeates, co-operator of the billiard business.

Weather over the weekend was ideal for those engaged in tapping Maple trees. The days were bright and mild with frosts at night. Sap is reported to have run well on several days. No syrup has as yet been offered for sale. Due to labor shortage, several farmers are not tapping their sugar bushes this season.

Hear from England.

Some impressions of England, was the topic of an interesting talk at the Laymen's Association of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene last night. The speaker was Dr. D. C. S. Black, who recently returned from England after three years' army service. J. deB. Arnaud, president, was in charge of the meeting. Refreshments were served by A. L. Berry, W. Kenning-ton, A. A. Maher and Capt. H. Jon. Clarke.

One of the activities of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Picton Post Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L., was the sales of clothing to Britain. Last week, Mrs. Ellis went to the Lord Mayor of Dover and to Sydenham, Kent, where the clothing shipped. Included in the bales were quilts, layettes and clothing for men, women and children. These articles are distributed among bombed-out victims and the Lord Mayor sent letters of thanks for previous gifts as soon on file and show that the bales are greatly appreciated, and create a feeling of good will between the countries.

Picton Post Canadian Legion sponsored a successful euchre party in their hall Friday night and a dance in the Armouries on Tuesday.

The Salvation Army this week started a canvass of the town to raise funds to assist in rebuilding the interior of their citadel which was recently damaged by fire. There has been a good response. There has been a good response. There has been a good response

Life in Nazi Prisoner of War Camp Described in Letter to Local Family

Description of life in Stalag 3, a German prisoner-of-war camp located in the vicinity of Berlin and in which Flying Officer Jill Steph-enson is incarcerated, is given in a letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Stephenson, Crest Dr., James Street, by a young air force officer recently repatriated from the camp, but whose name, for obvious reasons must be withheld.

The young officer who has the names and addresses of 150 of his chums, who were in camp with him, has written to their parents, telling them of the life they have been leading under Nazi prisoner-of-war domination.

The letter says, in part:

"I left Stalag 3 last January and while many things have happened there since, I can tell you of conditions prior to that time. The Red Cross parcels were very few, of course, the food situation. The Red Cross parcels were a God-send. I'm quite sure that without these many of us would not be returning. The ration consisted of a loaf of black bread per week, about four or five potatoes per day, sugar, margarine, barley and sausages of blood sausage. I suppose it would have been possible to exist on that but certainly nothing more than exist. The addition of Red Cross parcels filled up the gaps. For the past six months we were rationed to 1-3 parcels per man per week due to poor transportation facilities. However, we always maintained good reserves for emergencies such as the boys are experiencing now. We were very thankful there was no shortage of cigarettes as these helped to appease the hunger of the lean days.

Clothing Scarce.

"There was a scarcity of clothing although everyone was well covered and, in the latter part of last year, a shipment of clothing arrived which relieved the situation. Everyone in camp could use a pair of good stout boots as sandy soil played havoc with leather.

"Cooking utensils were very overlooked, camp life was a grin enough affair, but nevertheless, a very interesting one. Prisoner-of-war life is a never-to-be-forgotten experience and proves the ingenuity and intelligence of those inside the camp. For instance, our theatre in the north compound was an amazing piece of work. The row of seats made from the plywood of Red Cross boxes, was as solid and comfortable as in any theatre. The stage and furniture also made from Red Cross boxes, the lights made of milk tins, the suits and dresses made of bed sheeting, and all from out items that were sent us perfect.

Fine Talent Available.

We had three orchestras in camp, one swing, one concert and one amazing symphony. The talent was amazing, most or on the golf course. We

HEADS NEW ARMY

Lieut.-Gen. Leonard T. Gerow is commanding general of the new U.S. 15th Army whose existence was revealed in Washington. The announcement said that the new army already has gone into action on the Western Front. This brings to eight the total of Allied armies now facing the Germans in the west. Gen. Gerow was promoted to his present rank on May 1 of this year. He formerly served as commander of the Fifth Corps of the First Army under Lieut.-Gen. Courtney Hodges.

Like the theatrical group, many of the boys had a chance to write, work on and produce their own plays, books, and newspapers. Our theatre held about 350 and every performance was a capacity.

The sportsmen also had their fling and with the equipment supplied by the Red Cross and Y.M.C.A. the boys filled their time and kept in condition. The quality of the sport was of the highest.

In more serious line, the hospital was the best possible under the conditions. Many essentials were lacking but the prison doctors were absolutely untiring in their efforts and the results proved their intelligence. We were very careful of sanitary conditions and although these were very primitive there was no disease in camp.

Some "Do's" and "Don'ts."

Here are some "do's" and "don'ts" for those on this side which I would like to point out.

(1) Don't neglect writing him. Letters mean so much in camp. Include dehydrated fruits, splurge chocolate, onions and eggs in your parcels. (2) Don't say in your letters that you think he must be having a good time in the swimming pool or on the golf course. We

ALLIES BAG THOUSANDS OF PRISONERS

Racing northward at a clip averaging a mile an hour at the start, Gen. Patton's Third Army formed a junction with the U. S. 1st Army forces, rushing southward from the Ahr river. The shaded area shows how many thousands of Germans were trapped west of the Rhine, and prisoners taken have included batches which numbered up in the thousands. Only a few tiny pockets are now left as the Allied bridgehead across the line ever widens.

Matt Currie Hits 'The Headlines' in 'HollywoodBugle'

If one can believe a news sheet called the "Hollywood Bugle," Matt, (The Lone Ranger) Currie, account of the Bank of Montreal branch here is wowing the movie stars in the centre of glamor, gals, and motion pictures.

Glaring headlines across a copy of the "Bugle", which arrived at the editorial rooms of this newspaper today, state, "Currie in Hollywood; Stars rush for Loans." Bank associates who anticipate the return of their holidaying accountant, are all ready to see the erstwhile prexy of the Kingston Club report for duty dressed in the habiliments of Roy Rogers, Gene Autry, or perhaps like "Shadow" and who knows, they say he might drop in town with Dorothy Lamour, Lana Turner or Betty Grable hanging over one arm.

400 Agricultural Workers Ordered Back on Farms

After being engaged in temporary industrial and other vocational jobs for the winter months, approximately 400 farmers and farmers' sons in this district are being returned to their agricultural pursuits by March 31st, it was stated here today by Mr. H. Reed, local manager of the National Selective Service.

Maximum number of farmers engaged in industrial activities here in Hastings was 602, according to Mr. Reed. By Saturday this list number had been reduced to 218 and these are now under order to return to farms by the end of the present month.

In reference to farmers and farmers' sons taking industrial jobs in more serious time, the hospital was the best possible under the conditions. Many essentials were lacking but the prison doctors were absolutely untiring in their efforts and the results proved their intelligence. We were very careful of sanitary conditions and although these were very primitive there was no disease in camp.

Some "Do's" and "Don'ts."

Here are some "do's" and "don'ts" for those on this side which I would like to point out.

SOUGHT IN MURDER

MRS. NANCY BOYER.

JOSEPH MEDLEY

Joseph Medley, escaped convict, who is the object of a nation-wide hunt following issuance of a warrant charging him with the murder of Mrs. Nancy Boyer (also shown), 45-year-old divorcee, in her apartment in Washington, D.C. Medley is also sought for questioning in connection with the brutal beating-slaying of women in Chicago and New Orleans. He was identified as an acquaintance of Mrs. Boyer. The latter's body was found in the kitchenette of her apartment. She had been shot twice through the head. An expensive mutilated fur she had been wearing was missing.

Muskrat Trappers Here Anticipate Good Season

Despite the fact of abnormally low water in district creeks and rivers this spring, muskrat trappers are expecting a fairly successful season as is intimated here by Eddie Thomas local licence issuer.

To date over one hundred trapping licenses have been issued with the demand being so great that a hurry-up call to the Department was necessary to supply the extra demand for licence forms.

Although with the season opening only on Monday, buyers indicated it was a trifle too early for any indication of success trappers may have in this season, already a few rat hides have been purchased. These seemed to be of good quality, it was stated, and ranged from $2.50 for the best hides.

One well-known local fur buyer said a warm rain and frostless nights would be necessary before muskrats could be expected to run freely. Good quality of the rats caught thus far, were attributed to the fact that they were not frozen out during the winter.

But with the unprecedented demand for trapping licences it seems that district trappers are out to supply the demand of raw materials for Milady's new winter's fur coat. Even so muskrat trapping is truly a business proposition with the more successful trappers. Successful trappers frequently obtain from four to five hundred rat skins, while trappers have been known to secure upwards of a thousand in one season.

EFFECTIVENESS SEEN

London, March 13 — (CP)—Allied armies advancing into the heavily industrialized area of the German Ruhinland "are everywhere confronted with striking evidence of the effectiveness of bombing campaign" by British and American air forces, Gen. Eisenhower declared in a message to Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur T. Harris, Chief of the R.A.F. Bomber Command. "City after city has been systematically shattered," Gen. Eisenhower said.

Viper in Plane Excites Crew

London, March 12. (CP)—An RCAF Dakota flew high over mountainous territory in Burma with a deadly viper threatening its crew members.

The snake suddenly emerged from behind the instrument panel and was poised to strike the co-pilot, FO. M. H. Spencer, of Midland. The navigator, FO. N. S. Collins of Rossland, B.C., whipped out a Gurkha knife and snicked off the reptile's head.

The story reached London today through the RCAF Public Relations Department which quotes FO. R. E. Hughes of Chaplin, Sask., as saying the snake was discovered earlier by the flight-bit-bad crawled behind the panel. "and no one volunteered to reach in for it."

"The next thing I knew it was partly coiled around the control pedal beneath Spencer's foot, ready to strike at his ankle", Mackie said.

Spencer said he "went straight up in the air at least four feet" when he realized the viper at his feet.

"Collins heard my shout and dashed up with a knife".

Collapse of Main German Army Expected in June

—Canadian fighting men on the Rhine are expected to cross by June and when the war in Europe may finish and a conservative view is that resistance of the main body of the German army should collapse before the end of June.

From a purely military viewpoint, the Canadian operations depend largely on the crossings of the Rhine and the exploitation of those bridgeheads.

But the Allies are fighting a political war as well as a military one and the Nazi party since the attempt on Hitler's life last summer, has controlled the German army more firmly than ever. Even if the Nazi regular army is shattered, the Nazis themselves can be expected to make a stand with S. S. men and paratroops in the mountainous area of Bavaria around Berchtesgaden, in what is known as "The National Redoubt." Allied armies in the west may sweep across Germany for a junction with the Russians but the fighting may continue in southern Germany.

Mustard helps relieve SINUS SUFFERER
"From my girlhood I suffered a lot with sinus trouble," Mrs. B. Adams of Regina, Saskatchewan, stated. "The pain was so bad I could scarcely bear it. Then I discovered a weak, mustard poultice on my forehead helped me secure immediate relief. I use ¼ teaspoon of mustard and 2 teaspoon of flour. Now, at the first sign of pain I rush for the can of mustard. It helps provide relief in a very short time!" Special care should always be taken to make sure a mustard poultice used to relieve sinus pain, does not come in contact with the eyes.

A Well-Deserved Tribute

To have received so heartfelt and heart-inspiring a testimonial to his high sense of citizenship, service and influence for the city's welfare industrially and in other respects, for the continuance of the good will existing between Belleville and the County of Hastings and the whole Quinte district as well as for the position of this city and section in relation to the life of the Province of Ontario and beyond, for his work as a service club member and official, as Mr. C. Heriby recently received the other evening at a testimonial dinner tendered him by friends and associates, is something which he will always treasure in his heart of hearts. This occasion placed the seal of genuine and public appreciation on his work and influence.

Everyone knows the service that Mr. Heriby has been giving the community. His effort goes beyond a strictly measured service, but he is generous with his talents and has wide interests and through their very breadth he has extended his opportunity of serving.

He will never fail to recall the echoes of that event when citizens of this district including the city, public men and representatives of large corporations and national institutions and public services meeting at the festive board did the highest place in expression of appreciation—and told this modest and kindly man how warmly they felt towards him after years of acquaintance.

Mr. Heriby is not one who seeks honors, but he belongs to that class of men whom honor seeks because of their lofty sense of citizenship and their high ideals. He is one of that group of men who do much and perform that much with ease and grace. Mr. Heriby has now been given the tangible evidence of the affection which his friends and associates feel for one who has exerted such a beneficent and kindly influence in all his contacts.

Those who arranged this happy occasion which overflowed with kindly expressions and with tokens of admiration of one so well known to them, did wisely to pay honor to a man honored in the esteem of wholehearted and unselfish service in many fields of effort and interest. Such tribute may well be paid more frequently for it is an inspiration to a man who is honored to others who have like high ideals of serving their community and generation. The men who gathered at the testimonial dinner in Mr. Heriby's honor cannot be accused of failing to appreciate a worthy citizen. They showed and have long since shown that they realize the importance of such a citizen and the value of holding up before the public such service.

It is often said that some men only receive their praise or commendation for their efforts and service and that in consequence they lack encouragement. Mr. Heriby knows now and for long has known that there in this community an appreciative public.

Mr. Heriby by his wide experience, knowledge and interests, his appreciation of the true values in life and his readiness to serve has among wide circles of friends has been having a profound influence upon this community, not only industrially and in material welfare but in the realm of sane and lofty idealism of citizenship as well as in the practical side of life.

The words which were said in his praise have been earned through his example and his thoroughgoing devotion to his tasks. All who know him or have heard of him will join in the tribute so well merited.

Congratulations to L. H. Dingman

Wellknown among newspapermen of Canada from coast to coast, L. H. Dingman, president and publisher of the St. Thomas Times-Journal and the Stratford Beacon-Herald, celebrated his eightieth birthday on Sunday and was the recipient of the congratulations of his fellows in this craft from all parts of Canada and from many other friends. To one who has been engaged in newspaper work all his life, having started as a boy under his father who was a newspaperman and later associated with his brothers in the publication of the Stratford Herald, and who still does the daily round of work, it was natural that he should be at his desk as usual on this anniversary.

He has been fifty-nine years a publisher and to him the St. Thomas Times-Herald owes its prominent and distinctive position among newspapers in Dominion. Through the long years with which he has been engaged in journalism he has championed the high ideals of his calling and has preserved the youthfulness and zest of his kindly outlook upon life and its various phases.

Newspapermen everywhere join in felicitations and best wishes to this octogenarian active worker in the journalistic field.

The Great Thaw

This is the week which heard, alas! in many a British home
The sound of doom from any room where wasteful pipes might moan;
The sudden wheeze or whistle and the drear and damp descent,
The cold cascade from pipes displayed as well and truly rent.
A chilling sound, of gloom profound to chasten and subdue;
But not, perhaps, so chilling as the one
the Germans knew
When someone turned the tap on for that greatly crippled wraith,
The former major pipe-line of flamboyant Nazi faith.
For, lo! they thawed their fuehrer out,
his silence was dispelled,
And up before his sacred lips the microphone was held,
And he told them what a lad he was, by
Providence protected,
In spite of which he seemed at once
disjointed and dejected:
The thaw thus fell on Hitler's spell and dismal was the night;
They must, by God, shift on till dead and all would then come right.
They may have hoped for comfort but there came that sound accurst,
The stutter and the splutter of a pipe completely burst.

Nazis Not All Fighting to 'Bitter End'

(New York Herald Tribune)

Marshal von Rundstedt told his men on the Western Front to fight until the last drop of blood, but not all did.

An American private went into a German house to find a place to sleep; having been told to search all premises, he opened the cellar door and yelled, "Who's there?" The answer came back, in English: "Four Germans. We're in bed now, but we'll be right up."

Another American private was guarding German prisoners outside Erkelens when artillery shells suddenly rained upon them. The private instinctively jumped into a hole. Two Germans jumped on top of him. He thought they were attacking him, but they put up quaking hands. "I didn't know what to do," said the private afterwards, "so I just sort of said, 'Rough war ain't it?'"

Brand New Word "Enplaned"

(Boston Herald)

It had to come, and the war cannot be blamed for it, as the plane antedated hostilities. Somebody or other was reported recently to have "enplaned" at the East Boston airport for New York, meaning that he boarded, went on, or took a plane. Now, individuals and troops have been "entraining" for many years to the distress of the teacher of English. They have also been retiring instead of going to bed, and Mr. and Mrs. Whatawad have been "in residence" at such and such a place, instead of merely living there. There are "scions"—which the late Cardinal O'Connell loathed as much as he disliked "American aristocrat" and fancied "dunk"—and other superfluous or pretentious words which never would be missed. But they continued to creep, intrude, or climb into the fold.

Now he's coming home in a month or two,
But the foreman fancies that I should stay,
Since I've mastered the methods new.

I hear them talking—the women and men—
Conditions have changed since the war began,
And they'll never be quite the same again
For the working woman and working man.

I'm all confused, for little is clear,
But as for myself, my tools I'll keep
And turn in my badge and get out of here
And give him his job when he gets back.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

30 YEARS AGO

March 12th, 1915.

The members of the special committee of the city council appointed to select a suitable site for a tourist camp, accompanied by Mr. J. Owen Herity, Commissioner of Industries, and a few members of the Chamber of Commerce, spent the silly yesterday in search of a suitable site. Finally they decided that the Old Dundas Street Burying Grounds would be a desirable place, and Mr. Herity and Mr. J. F. Graham were authorized to negotiate for the purchase of the property.

Three reliable citizens reported today that the robins have arrived, here, at least three of them have as they were seen and heard by the citizens mentioned. Mrs. A. Fenwick and daughter, Miss Jean, Hillside Street, are spending a few days in Toronto.

Crews of B-29s Require Plenty Of Rest Between Missions

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Marianas Islands, Dec-ember—Slick. That's one of the most-used expressions in the Pacific Ocean theater of operations. They have also been retiring instead of going to bed, and Mr. and Mrs. Whatawad have been "in residence" at such and such a place, instead of merely living there. There are "scions"—which the late Cardinal O'Connell loathed as much as he disliked "American aristocrat" and fancied "dunk"—and other superfluous or pretentious words which never would be missed. But they continued to creep, intrude, or climb into the fold.

Combat fliers everywhere have lots of spare time, because they are under a terrific nervous strain when they work, so they have much recuperative rest.

But on the hero's day is double, even a triple incentive for spending practically all your time on both sides of the International date line. These reasons are:

1—A 14-hour mission is an exhausting thing. The boys say the mission itself is a thrill once, and really don't feel it so keenly until the afternoon of the next day, when their blood has plumb worn out. It takes some of them two or three days to get to feeling normal after a mission.

2—The climate, warm and enervating, seems to make you sleepy all the time. You could fall down and go to sleep on your hot, humid sheets. There is little difference between missions. And since there's no amusement in the evening, except those islands, except homemade ones, they just lie and talk and lie some more.

The result of it all is that you just get later than day, and one pilot said "I've got so jaw I'll never be worth a damn the rest of my life."

It's one of the phases of isolation. It's what leads to "island neurosis," or to getting "island crazy." Troop commanders know the importance of keeping their men busy to overcome this, but it's difficult to do that with combat crewmen.

But new classes have been organized, and the fliers have to go to school part of each day. Those who are especially good are getting for their intensive training as "lead crews" and they go to school from morning till night.

Endless talk and arguments go on about "tactics" and Quonset huts. They can argue about the oddest things. One afternoon several pilots got into an argument over whether or not you do everything in reverse when flying upside down in a plane. They were all veteran fliers, and they finally quit about 5:00 to see whether you do or not.

Another day they got to arguing about what causes planes to leave vapor trails behind them in high altitudes. One pilot thought it was the heat from the exhaust mingling with the moisture in the air at certain temperatures. But one pilot said no, it was moisture being whirled off the tips of the propellers. That started a long discussion on aerodynamics.

They argue about God, and they argue about the merits of escaping during training, and they wonder why the Japs don't die or fight to the death, and play solitaire. Some write letters all the time. One pile had written 14 letters in one day, but he hadn't thought of in years, not because he hadn't remembered, but just to have something to do. Others write long letters to their wives, can't make themselves write at all.

They read magazines, but very few books. At first they spend hours reading comics, but they soon solve out of packing crates. But that's all finished now.

Some of them swim daily, and they all take daily showers. The showers are made with concrete floored baths, which are roofless, but have running a tank set on high stilts nearby. It is not heated, and although the weather is always warm, a cold bath in the morning is very, very happy. The best time is around 3 in the afternoon when the sun has made the water good and warm.

Some fliers send some of their laundry to the Army laundry unit, but it takes about 10 days, so most do their own washing by hand.

Every bath unit has a whitewashed urinal. They washing machine build a bonfire of discarded jumbo and boot wrappers, and then getting to the washing machine, and turn the fire. Between every Quonset hut there is always a clothesline full of wet flying suits.

Some days they play volley ball, some days they take setting-up exercises, and some days they swim. My friend Capt. Bill Clifford spurns the water. He says he doesn't like bed. Every day they say if he isn't careful he'll get webs between his fingers and toes. But Clifford says "Hell no, I'm too old to get out there and jump up and down like a Russian ballet dancer."

Japanese Pushed Closer to Sea On Iwo Jima

Guam, March 12. (AP)— Driving forward foot by foot against bitter resistance, the U.S. 5th Marine Division pushed to the Pacific coast to the sea and destruction in a narrowing triangle around Kitano Point, northern extremity of Iwo, Monday.

There were indications the enemy is weakening steadily even though resistance was fierce.

Today's morning communique, covering activities to 6 p.m. Monday, said the 3rd Marine Division in the center and the 4th on the right are mopping up along the northeast coast.

In the 4th's sector near Tachiiwa Point, where Iwo's bulge makes its greatest extension eastward, a small enemy pocket still held out.

Although the Japanese at Kitano Point are compressed into a triangle of less than 1,000 yards, 5th Fleet warships still were able to support the Marines with shellfire.

The communique told of attacks Sunday against Paramushiro and Shumushiu in the Kuriles by 11th Army Air Force Liberator bombers which started fires sending columns of smoke up to 15,000 feet.

Civilians Face Clothes Crisis

London, March 13 —(CP)— Lack of labor and scarcity of mills for civilian production has brought a crisis in the clothing industry, it was said today in a debate in the house of commons.

Materials for women's stockings, dresses and summer-weight clothing generally are short, and export orders placed recently will not be delivered until autumn at the earliest.

Stocks of men's shirts also will be hard hit, it was said.

Capt. C. Waterhouse, parliamentary secretary to the board of Trade, has said that unless more yarn is produced than now comes, the "present meagre standard" of clothes rationing would be in danger.

The industry is not hopeful that there will be any improvement in the situation.

"Production will just have to use the clothes they have," said one leading woman buyer.

Yank Fliers Learn Lore of the North

Edmonton, March 13 —(CP)— After nearly 40 years in Alaska and Northern Canada, trapping, hunting, fishing, packing, mushing, painting mountains and prospecting, Maj. A. R. Innes-Taylor, veteran Canadian Army officer, is back at the Arctic training school of the R.C.A.F. at Fort Edmonton, just north of Edmonton.

One of the organizers of the school, Mr. Browne is putting all his practical experience into the courses and lectures designed to teach American fliers to survive accidents in the frozen north.

He shows them that a well trained man with little or no equipment might have a better chance of coming in the front door of a Yukon roadhouse than a better equipped flier with "no savvy" at all.

"Survival is half the battle," he says. "If a man has confidence, knows what to do, improvises being and recks squads, we figure he can get back to his base in the shortest time. Of course our luck sometimes is bad."

Mr. Browne now is glad he didn't succumb to the "grass skirt" idea when he was 18. He believes there is no reason why Americans cannot be trained men for cold weather living and Arctic survival.

Mrs. Browne, in Edmonton, was never out of Philadelphia before she married. Both were 20 when they were married she has lived in the Arctic enough to bring up two children in the vast outdoors and loves the open spaces as much as her husband.

"After Uncle Sam kicks me out," says Mr. Browne, "I'm going to build a log cabin in southern Alberta and paint."

Treatment of Burns Requires Much Care

London, March 13—(CP)— Here is the advice of three scientists of the Medical Research Council on how to give first aid for burns:

Burned areas should be covered with a freshly-laundered cotton sheet or cloth. Blisters or burns should not be first-aided at all but the patient must be kept warm and given morphine if necessary and removed to hospital immediately.

"For superficial burns treated at home or when severe burns cannot be fully treated without considerable delay, the burnt area and the parts around should be first of all smeared with a water-soluble cream containing one per cent of acetyl trimethyl ammonium bromide and three per cent sulphanilamide, applied with a sterile knife."

The findings of the council scientists were published in a government booklet. It told how volunteers in the burns unit of the Glasgow Royal Infirmary submitted to slow burning in an experiment.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

SULPHUR AND MOLASSES

Mother thinks that flowers of sulphur is good to clean out the intestines and will not hurt one internally. Your advice about this will be appreciated by many.

Come spring and sulphur and molasses is usually heard about the country and cleaning out the system" or "purifying the blood" begin to be frevent in the mail nearly a month before the biggest liar in the neighborhood sees the first robin. Up north, that is. Down south where it is always spring there are no robins.

Sulphur is a mild laxative. It is commonly used for that purpose in the form of "compound licorice powder"—a mixture of washed sulphur (flowers of sulphur), licorice powder, powdered senna leaves, fennel and sugar—this is now more correctly called compound senna powder, for it is chiefly the senna that gives the laxative effect.

Other than the mild laxative effect of sulphur it has no medicinal effect when given internally, so far as we know. It is as nearly harmless as a laxative can be.

The notion that sulphur "purifies the blood" comes from a misuse of the observation that sulphur physicks—the ancients imagined that anything that physicked them somehow removed "impurities" from the blood—what "impurities" they were but the quacks knew and, for protection of the trade the quacks never told.

If you are fond of fussing there is no harm at all in mixing up a mess of flowers of sulphur or washed sulphur and molasses—proportion for pound or ounce for ounce—and taking a teaspoonful or a tablespoonful once a day on empty stomach—say at bedtime—for a few weeks in the spring. By doing so the big thaw comes you'll be ready to take advantage of the improved conditions out yonder.

Sulphur in itself is slightly laxative, and it adds a pleasant flavor to the otherwise uninteresting molasses.

Mind, now, ol' timers, I do not advise any one to take sulphur—merely assure you that it is comparatively harmless if you want to take it. Prune juice is good and so with any of the youngsters by telling them that they can get hold of the big thaw comes you'll be ready to take advantage of the improved conditions out yonder.

Is this a sign of something lacking in her diet?

Answer — No. Many normal babies are fond of well planned cakes, sand, garden soil and the like. Such appetite is called "pica." No significance. Sometimes the appetite may be satisfied with tomato ketchup. Children with an wheat, bran, raw oatmeal, raw carrot, turnip, potato, baked potato skin.

AGE OF RATTLESNAKES

It is generally believed that a rattlesnake acquires a new ring on its rattle each year and that hence the number of rings composing the rattle indicates the age of the reptile.

That is not so.

Like other snakes, the rattlesnake sheds its skin from time to time. The reptile crawls through a small opening between rocks or other objects until the loose skin at the head catches and then crawls out of the outer skin, leaving the sloughed skin is turned inside out in the process.

Because of its peculiar shape that part of the old skin that covers the tail does not slip off so easily. When the snake sloughs, however, it loosened and dislodged from its place and moved backward to become an additional ring on the rattle.

"Owing to the natural urge on the part of the patient or his friends to do something (however ill-advised), it has been found that in over 90 per cent of civilian gunfire air strike at hospital with some kind of application to the burned area as received covered with a clinic or at least a non-sterile piece of cloth. First aid remedies of this kind, especially if they are applied, as they usually are, without aseptic precautions, may well do more harm than good."

Armies Fighting On Western Front Very Flexible

Ottawa, March 13, (CP)—Flexibility of the composition of the armies fighting in Western Europe was emphasized by Defence Minister McNaughton in his press conference today when asked to comment on criticism in the effect that a preponderance of the troops in the 1st Canadian Army were British troops.

"We are the last people who would wish to take any army away from the great credit that is due to the troops organized in the United Kingdom," said Gen. McNaughton.

He added, however, that the actual makeup of an "army" as an operating formation and of the "corps" within the army varies from time to time as the Supreme Allied Head-quarters shifts power and weight from one section of the front to another.

On a recent date, as an example of this, Gen. McNaughton authorized use of the statement that there were divisions on the western front, the 2nd, 3rd and 4th, were in the 1st Canadian Army which along with the 1st Canadian Army fight under the command of Field Marshal Montgomery in the 21st Army Group.

Asked if a statement to the effect that 50 per cent of the troops in the 1st Canadian Army were Canadian was true, Gen. McNaughton said:—

"I have no doubt it was at the time the statement was made. But it might not have been true six hours later".

The plan for the formation of a Canadian Army Headquarters was in progress when he decided to detach the 1st Canadian Corps from the rest of the Canadian forces in the United Kingdom and send it to Italy, he said.

It was decided to go ahead because another army was needed, no one else had an army headquarters and the Canadian formation was in being.

Illustrations by Charts

With a series of charts the Minister illustrated the changing national composition of the 1st Canadian and 2nd British armies from the day on and also of the British 8th Army in its progress from El Alamein into Italy.

On D-Day the 1st Canadian Army under Gen. H. D. G. Crerar was in England. The 3rd Canadian Division was in France fighting with another army. The 2nd and 4th Divisions later went to France, but did not fight first with the 1st Canadian Army.

When the 1st Canadian Army under Gen. Crerar landed in France it had little more than its headquarters. Then as operations proceeded Canadian and British Corps were placed under it. The composition of the army changed and so did the composition of the corps.

"An army is a headquarters into which corps can be fitted and into the corps divisions and other formations can be fitted", he said.

Canada's Part In Pacific War Will Not Be Small

Toronto, March 13—(CP)—Angus L. Macdonald, Minister of National Defence for Naval Services said today that the part Canada would play in the Pacific War will not be small. The Canadian fleet to be sent to the Pacific "will be a great deal more than a token force."

Speaking at the Canadian Club here the Navy Minister gave high praise to the part played by Canadians in developing a navy whose power was felt by the enemy in the Battle of the Atlantic.

"The Atlantic campaign is the greatest campaign of this war, greater, I think, even than the Pacific campaign. No other campaign has ranged over so wide an area."

Within a short time a new Canadian cruiser, to be christened the Ontario, will join the Uganda and other Canadian ships in the Pacific, Mr. MacDonald said. The cruiser Uganda, commanded by Capt. H. Grant, D.S.O., R.C.N., a veteran of the British Navy, has 8,000 in Permanent Navy.

Of the post-war navy the Navy Minister said it will comprise some 9,000 men — five times as large as Canada's navy in 1939. This figure will need approval of the government at that time, but Mr. Macdonald said it was his belief that "until permanent peace is assured the world, the defences of this country of the kept at a "reasonably good strength and that means something considerably above their strength before this war."

The Japan 1934 war in our naval state of unpreparedness and we had to face an enemy who had been sharpening his for a long time. In 1940, 1941 and 1942, the enemy was able to sink more merchant ships than we could replace.

"In 1943 the tide turned. Our losses of merchant men in that year were about half of what they were in 1942. In 1944 they were about one-third of what they were in 1943".

New York, March 12 — (AP) — Riots and street fighting occurred Sunday in Munich, birthplace of the Nazi party, the Tidningen of Stockholm said today in a dispatch reported to the Office of War Information. The disturbances were in connection with the observance of Heroes' Day.

The newspaper gave this account:

A "marked revolutionary spirit" reigned in the city." Railway traffic, post and telegraph no longer functioned. German tanks drove through the streets in an effort to quell the disturbances, which continued late last night.

General Hodges Crosses Bridge Under Shell Fire

By HOWARD COWAN
Associated Press War Correspondent

East of the Rhine, March 13— (AP)—2 A.M. (Tuesday)—Courtney Hodges crossed into the east Rhine bridgehead Sunday amid a rain of enemy shellfire. On that land lashed with 50 feet of the United States 1st army commander.

The general spent an hour inspecting the bridgehead while his soldiers were extending on the flanks while the enemy launched a pressure in the middle. No one was injured when the shell exploded.

The Germans have been giving up the idea that they can knock out the Remagen bridge. Now they are shelling the entire countryside in an effort to hit it.

One good clear day to enable Allied fighter-bombers to batter the perimeter of the bridgehead would make all the difference in the world.

Meanwhile one of the most serious problems is what to do with German civilians—or at least those in civilian clothes. It is strange the number of empty Wermacht uniforms the Americans keep finding in the area.

Ronis are busy ferrying material across the river, having the bridge to infantry, tanks, jeeps and other vehicles.

Paris Purge Court Guarded by Police With Concealed Guns

Paris, March 13 (Reuters) — Policemen with Tommy guns concealed under their cloaks guarded the approaches of the Paris purge court today as hundreds of people lined up to attend the trial of Admiral Jean Pierre Esteve, French resident general in Tunis at the time of Allied landings in north Africa. He is charged with treason.

The accusation, against this sailor, who but for the war would have gone down in tragic inofascy, allege that in 1943 he supplied Field Marshal Rommel's German Africa Korps with large quantities of food.

It is further alleged that he discouraged the French army in Bizerte from opposing German landing in that port a week after the Allied landing in North Africa, that he travelled there and by flight with the Germans in North Africa, that he recruited labor to work and fight with the Germans in North Africa, and that he assisted to Free French soldiers to desert and surrender to the Germans.

This trial may prove in it a political sense the most important test case of the whole purge because it is expected to become a decisive precedent to determine whether obedience to Marshal Petain's orders constitutes a new regulatory authority, charges of "intelligence with the enemy."

The prosecutor is Isandre Mornet, the man who prosecuted Mata Hari, the most famous woman spy of the First Great War.

TWICE DECORATED SPAHARD WORRIED

London, March 12 — (CP) — Marino Vicciti, 24, who holds the D.C.M. and bar and was one of those who returned from Arnhem, is a worried man in a few weeks he will be discharged from a hospital in Southern England until further service in the British Army.

What worries him is that he is a Spaniard and fought on the Republican side in the Civil War. He wants to stay in England and look for work.

"I have been told officially that on my discharge I must be sent home," he told a newspaper. "But I'll be home in Spain. Nothing awaits me there but prison as a political prisoner."

A policyholder reports on his life insurance company

THIS YEAR, in making its Annual Report to 31,000,000 policyholders, Metropolitan decided to try something new.

We asked Bruce Barton, a policyholder, and a well known writer, if he would write the report. He agreed.

So he visited our Home Office, asked a host of questions, looked into the facts and figures. According to his report, the things he learned about the Company confirm what the Examiners of the State Insurance Department found. Following their most recent official examination of the Company they had stated:

"From this examination, it becomes evident that the Company is in strong financial condition; that its affairs are ably managed, and that the business of the Company is being operated in the interests of its policyholders."

One out of every five persons in Canada and the United States is a Metropolitan policyholder. If, like Mr. Barton, you are one of this group, you'll be more than interested in the things he learned. Even if you're not a policyholder, you cannot help but enjoy reading Mr. Barton's account of what Metropolitan did in 1944 for the benefit of policyholders and public.

WEDDINGS

DOZOIS—FUNNELL

A very lovely early Spring wedding was solemnized at nine o'clock in the morning on Saturday, March 10, in the Church of St. Michael The Archangel, when Norah Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Funnell, was united in marriage to Gilles Dozois, attached to the R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Dozois, of Westmount, Quebec. Rev. Monsignor J. E. Nicholson united the young couple in marriage, and Rev. Leo O'Donnell celebrated Nuptial Mass.

Spring flowers were arranged on the altar on the occasion and formed a very impressive floral background. Mrs. J. Grant presided at the organ and played the wedding music softly throughout the ceremony and as the nuptial party left the church.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was particularly striking in a floor length gown of white moon gown. She wore a dainty cap of flowers misted with tulle in matching hue, and carried a nosegay of Cecile Brunner and forget-me-nots.

Miss Mary Jean Allore, as bridesmaid, was wearing a charming ensemble of dove grey crepe and basscourse satin with hat of the bride only in lavender tones. She carried a nosegay of Sweet Rose roses and lavender sweetpeas.

Mr. John F. Funnell, brother of the bride, was groomsman, and Robert D. Allore attended as usher.

A wedding breakfast was held at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. L. P. Hall, following the ceremony. The mother of the bride chose a black and gold crepe dress, complemented with harmonizing accessories and corsage of Talisman roses. The groom's mother wore a black gown accentuated with sequin trim. Her accessories were black and her corsage was of red roses. Mrs. Lorne Ruth Beale, Eileen Belair, Anna Mober and Isabel McAvoy.

On the wedding trip to Quebec City, the bride selected a chocolate brown suit, brown and tan coat and brown accessories.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mrs. A. E. Dozois, Miss Gillaine, Quebec; Mr. and Mrs. Funnell, Mr. George Funnell, Mrs. Rose Donovan, Montreal; Mrs. and Mr. Fred Reigobord, College, Kingston; Miss Mary Hughes, Marmora; Miss Ruth Toronto Institute and Jean Allore, Toronto University.

Andrew Lamerus, D.F.C., R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lamberos, of Wiarton, Ontario. Rev. Dr. A. J. W. Myers was the officiating clergyman.

Trenton, March 12—In the same house in which she has lived for the past eighty years, Mrs. Elizabeth Ann Massey is on Tuesday, March 13th attaining her 100th birthday amidst a host of friends and relatives.

Daughter of the late John Clarke and Sarah Maudin, she was born in Prince Edward County on March 13th, 1851. Eighteen years later in the Methodist Church, Ontario, on March 12th she was married by Rev. Mr. Brewer, to James Albert Massey and three years later she and her husband built the two storey frame residence, which is still home to this grand old centenarian. Her husband predeceased her in 1921. Had he lived, he would have been 102.

The Massey's had seven children, three of whom died in infancy. A daughter, Mrs. Peterson of Prince Edward County, died recently; and one daughter, Mrs. Tyler still resides in the county, while another daughter, Mrs. Manley attends to duties in the west. Putting Shoulders in Place

Ann Sheridan has excellent posture.

By HELEN FOLLETT

EVERY HEAR about Delsarte? It was a system of physical culture when Grannie was a girl. It taught her to throw her shoulders back and give her chest full play, pretty lines and curves of a ramrod.

The correct pose is to extend and keep lifted the positive of your svelte anatomy that is between the breasts. The shoulder blades, of a natural, easy pose.

Throw your shoulders forward and your chest with them. Mustn't do, my pretties. The smartest stuff will lose that lift character when the chest is flattened. The lifted chest produces a buoyant, spirited expression of the feminine shape. Youre getting places; youre stepping. The spinal column stays strong. The appearance of the back is pleasing—no protrusion the upper portion of the next little nip in at the waist line.

Weakness of the abdomen is because rounded shoulders, that is why the body should have plenty of vigorous exercise.

Here is an exercise for shoulder control: Stand erect, heels about feet four inches apart, chest high, tummy flat. Clasp the hands on the top of the head. Send the elbows forward, then as far back as they can. These movements bring into action numerous muscles of the body.

Second exercise. Keep the body and the legs rigid.

Place your thumb tips on your shoulders, send the elbows in circles. Keep the shoulders high when

Eyeglasses for Special Work

"Did I learn something today? I certainly did!" remarked a pretty lady who was having tea with a group of her friends. "I told you she something was the matter with my eyes, so I went to a specialist for an examination. He asked me what kind of work I did. I told him that I was a musician. He said that it was no wonder my eyes bothered me. Then prescription my old doctor had given me was only for reading, and I was over forty twelve inches. My music is twenty inches as a rule. I must have a stronger lens or suffer from eyestrain. He says every doctor should give me what kind of work a patient does, and glasses should be prescribed accordingly. I am thrilled about my glasses, and I'm really going to learn, says I".

When a woman sews, she usually holds her work nine or ten inches from her eyes, which is closer than it should be for optic ease and well being.

Somebody once said that the muscles of the eyes do not strengthen with age, they only do the job every waking moment, poor things. When the eyes burn and water and they are crying out for time off. When that happens to you, lay down on the book or the sewing, stand at a window and look far away. Sometimes a trip on a distant point will give relief.

The old-fashioned idea that spectacles make a girl look austere has been thoroughly exploded. If eye defects.

Accused Her Fiance of Giving Her Address to Another Fellow

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For two and a half years I've been going steady with a boy just 21 years old. I am 18. He's now in the Pacific, and we haven't seen each other for almost two years. Although I don't have an engagement ring, we had planned to marry when he returns.

We have had our faults. He's jealous and I have a bad temper. That's what caused our first fight. About two months ago I received a letter from a soldier also in the Pacific, who lives in this same city, who was a stranger to me. Thinking that Bob had given him my address, I became angry and wrote Bob my type of letter, a scathing letter, and asked him to return my photograph.

And then I found out that some other girl had picked out my dress, but in the meantime my letter went on to Bob. I was sorry about it and wrote him apologizing, but haven't heard from him since he wrote to tell me he had given this boy my address. I think he should say he's forgiven me, because I forgave him a good many times when he did it to me. Shall I write again and apologize or forget all about it?

I. F. O.

It's up to you to eat plenty of humble pie right away, Miss Fairfax. Forgive and forget, unless he's found another girl who treats him with more consideration. You acused him of doing a most ungentlemanly thing, giving his fiance's address to a stranger, and I don't wonder at his indignation.

she needs them, and refuses to wear them, she may have a bad effect on the girl's constant wrinkles. Because the eyes are under strain and there is tendency to scowl and squinting creates turkey tracks. Constant squinting of objects and Tired eyes make the nervous system jittery; they have a bad effect on the disposition. Unless relief comes in the form of glasses, eyes become more and more weakened and vision is impaired.

The make-up problem to be carefully thought out, since the eyes are a magnificent asset in commercial tints. The arrangement of the color scheme must be carefully considered. The old rule about applying rouge to the eyes, keeps eyes open and sparkling, is entirely out of date.

Charming purple lounging robe.

AFTER a busy or hectic day, a robe like the one shown here would certainly be nice to come home to! Designed for the tall, slim figure, it is of purple jersey with a shaped band of lime color set in at the slim waistline, which, while it is rather high in front, dips in back. The skirt is slightly flared and clinging. The bodice blouses in back and has a bow tie at the neck, and the sleeves are draped from a deep armhole.

Presto Music Club

The monthly meeting of the Presto Music Club was held at the home of Mrs. (Dr.) Myers Monday evening.

The program as arranged by Mr. V. F. Hunt was partly in honor of Mrs. Myers' natal day. Mrs. Harold Foster, A sketch of the life and achievements given at the end whose melodies and songs are endeared to millions of people have been sung around the world, one of them—"Old Folks at Home" also called the greatest American folk-song. Stephen Foster's native city, Pittsburgh, Pa., after ten years of planning, financing and construction has honored him by erecting one of the finest memorials to a composer to be built. In Gothic lines and designed in harmonie with the University of Pittsburgh, containing a concert auditorium and a shrine of twelve 45ft with delivered stone and stained and lighted by stained glass windows, it depicts themes of Foster's best known melodies. It contains more than ten thousand separate items of original manuscripts, letters and first editions to Foster's music, pictures and photographs. It is open daily to the public and free of charge.

The following numbers made up the musical program: Piano solos by Mrs. LaRocque, Mrs. Ivan Hubbs and songs by Miss Helen Cook and Miss Margaret Bonisteel.

Dr. Myers gave readings from modern poets.

Champions and Runners-Up Of Quinte RCAF Hockey Loop Presented With Windbreakers

Banquet Held at Quinte Hotel Most Enjoyable Social Evening

They buried those hockey differences that made the Quinte RCAF hockey league's fraternity smoother, the banquet table at the Quinte Hotel Monday night, when the district Air Force body gathered to honor their players for a successful season, now in the hands of Hume Arena. Those varieties were well forgotten, the players and officials gathered around the festive board in harmony to enjoy a full evening of the highest type of entertainment, that even saw players take a decided part.

"The proficiency gained in your league has added much to the service. It was team work that made your league to heights in the service and added much to the actual game. It was with satisfaction we along side-turn continued to see such good hockey as provided by you boys in our league," stated Group Captain Laurie, A.O.C., from Trenton after being introduced by S/L. Al Findlay, the proficient evening's chairman.

Congratulated Teams

After a very humorous introduction, Group Captain Bell-Irving, officer commanding Trenton, congratulated the lading teams of the league as he assured them their efforts were of the utmost and with such made the league the success it enjoyed. "Not being able to state with any degree of accuracy I appreciate the splendid efforts of the entire personnel of you players, but I do hope that our team can continue as champions another year," concluded Group Captain Bell-Irving, as he added continued humorous anecdotes to his conclusion.

Thanks Civilians

Group Captain Gibb of Mountain View paid especial tribute to the management of the league and added thanks for the civilian patronage and especially the fine work of Referees "Tooly" Hulsey and "Spogey" St. Louis for their efficient work throughout the season.

"We still think we had the best team in the league, but undoubtedly there were better. I must congratulate Laird, C.O. of No. 6 Repair Depot, who added the fact his boys would be back in the league another year with full force and virtue. Our service league hockey has done much for the morale of the boys and we look to the future for such recreation," concluded C/Sgt. Laird.

Presentations to Champs

The highlight of the evening came when P/L. James McCha presented Paul Bongard, captain of the league champion Trenton "Flyers," with a windbreaker as one of the civic accomplishments as league champions, while the same honors were presented to Sgt. Ernie Bear, runners-up. P/L. McCha, president of the league, introduced Sgt. Bear as "Bear-dreat, captain of the Mountain View "Bombers", as

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Chalk this up on something other than ice: Whenever there is a finesse to take, first look for a strip-and-ruff play. It may save you the necessity of taking a losing finesse.

In the strip-and-ruff play, you eliminate as many suits as you can. At the end of that, you throw an opponent into the lead. He has but one last something. It may avoid the need for the finesse. In many cases, the result is a cinch that you can foresee.

You are declarer in the south at five clubs in this deal:

West leads the heart queen. When you look at dummy, what do you see? It is possible to lose a trump trick and two diamond tricks with three finesses. You must save one.

Take the first trick with dummy's heart ace. Lead a dummy trump and take with the ace, hoping the king will drop. Lead the last spade, heart and trump it in dummy. This strips your hearts.

Lead three rounds of spades. This strips your spades. Lead a trump and the opponent is thus the lead. That strips opponents of trumps. Now, with any opponent lead you are safe.

When East wins, will he return a heart? If he does, trump in dummy and stuff a south diamond. Then you will lose only one trick in diamonds no matter what happens.

Instead of a heart, suppose west leads a diamond. Play the ten or queen from dummy and let east win. Any return from east will give you the rest of the tricks.

Because if east returns a diamond, it is up to your remaining dummy trump. And if east returns a spade or heart, you simply stuff a south diamond and trump in dummy.

The Strip play is to make an opponent come to no good end.

French Mayer took over from there to notch Galt's two counters in the second frame while Krompin and Mossman collected one each in the final session. Six Galt pucksheiers figured in the "marks" column, Gilz and Adamo getting two and Mayer, Krompin, Pobin and Kasarian barring credit for one apiece.

Young Rangers' lone game in the first and third periods, Payne and Elliott being the marksmen. Payne also set up the play for Elliott's late tally.

Galt led 3-1 in the initial canter, made it 5-1 in the middle frame and outscored the visitors 21 in the last to hold a 7-3 decision.

Says Time for a Change In the Rural Church

From an article by Rev. Douglas Bryden, of Jerseyville, Ont., in "Food for Thought," monthly publication of the Association for Adult Education.

The horse and buggy days are gone forever from the rural community. Yet church organization, in the area where I live, has changed little since the period of colonization and settlement. Within a radius of seven miles from each point in this region, there are 22 churches. Two of the three churches on my own concession have neither a basement, nor a hall. The minister gets a definite figure in his pocket and rushes from one service to the next.

Choirs are weak, Sunday schools are too small to grade except into beginners, boys and girls. Recreation or training classes are impossible. Every pastor must struggle single-handed.

Surely the church as a whole must see that it can no longer thrive when it insists on trying to do things the way they were done in the horse and buggy days. The church seeks to proclaim the necessity of a united Christendom. Yet it is breaking down the barrier and pull toward a larger and larger community.

Most of the ministers in the area, I speak of, are regarded as good pastors, but they cannot make an effort to get the church out into the community. They are so busy keeping three churches and all their organizations going, they have no time. Then too, there is much confusion in their minds, about whether a minister should do anything to do with matters that are not strictly church affairs.

All this does not mean that the rural church is on the way out. It will change, perhaps not without pain and a few tears and hurt feelings, but it will struggle to the light. Let no one who plans to change the community dare by the church. It has tremendous possibilities.

A few church leaders and many community leaders see the door of opportunity opening for the rural church to foster a growing sense of community. The Christian message can be taught on Sunday clothes and pik away on Sunday night as it is by the daily dynamic force. Christianity can't be practiced in a vacuum. It must be lived out in every phase of life. The church must get out into the community. It is the generator which produces the spark that fires the latent power in the community.

Two years ago our community started to see the light. It is coming right. Though our farm people are desperately busy, and the farm undermanned, they have moved forward steadily. Farm radio forums was the instrument that got them together. It started in the homes of the best church people. They were agreatly surprised that they could discuss a farm for an hour and a half and enjoy it. Even the women came and had a good time.

Two boys from a neighboring church community visited us to see what was going on. Next week they started a farm forum in their neighborhood. From that one beginning others have sprung up until there are four groups, each in different church communities. Once a month they all come together in a recently built community hall.

Amazing leadership has been developed in this short time. At least thirty people can now lead discussions. They have also learned how to come to group decisions, act on them, and get results. Out of these four groups a strong local co-operative has been developed. Plans are maturing for the formation of a county federation came from a Dramatic Group. Groups are now studying credit unions and larger rural school administration.

The initiative and leadership for these undertakings has come from the best church members. The minister takes an active part at all times. They have succeeded in persuading other people to take responsibility when they are present. Now even the shy ones are not afraid of speaking their mind when the minister is there.

The next step in significance, to Community worship was held on Rural Life Sunday, with eight different churches taking part, rejoicing in uniting two denominations. The peculiar feature of this ceremony is presented all the community organizations in the area.

The present location of churches has been largely determined by the communication and transportation lines of a former century. Now Several plans have now been put forward to meet the needs of the enlarged communities made possible by modern means of transportation. One plan has been introduced without careful leadership and has failed to receive any interesting possibilities.

The Consolidary plan is a method of co-operation among the churches of the same denomination. Where two or three parishes or pastoral charges lie side by side in a natural community area, it is possible for them to do many things together.

The next step in church organization is the parish unit. This has been very successful in many places in the United States, although there is very little trial of it efficiently in Canada to justify unqualified recommendation. We know or only one permanent largerunit parish and experimental ones in this country.

The larger parish makes together or two parishes in a natural area. A superintendent minister is appointed to act as city in this area. A women's worker carries on some education in the schools and meets with ladies' groups. A young people's worker who can take his share of responsibility for the conduct of public worship and the young people's clubs and perhaps general community work.

The parish operates as a unit with a budget and finances. Each with church schools and other organizations. By this basis, that the church can meet all the people in the area. It is, of course, democratically controlled by representatives from each church, but the leaders and council plan to work out co-operatively. This plan does not deliberately set out to destroy the individual churches and bring them to a central town church. It attempts to build each church unit effective from the point of view of spiritual worship and religious education.

But whatever type of parish is the last, the rural community demands vigorous, aggressive leadership that will develop unity, control of the country as a field of great opportunity and responsibility. Perhaps the rural minister should have special training for service in the rural areas, through Summer courses or optional courses at the theological colleges. Scarcely a seminary or college at present offers regular or elective lectures to acquaint the students with the needs of rural thought and organization. This would not be at sacrifice if most of the students were leaving from the colleges to their first charges.

Small Dutch Orphan Arrives in England

London, March 15 —(CP)— The little Dutch girl who can't remember old and her only introduction' to England was a piece of paper in her hand on which was scrawled the name and address of PO. Owen Price, first everything Dutch orphan all right for this orphaned waif, and this is how it began.

PO, Frau was a navigator in a bomber squadron of the Netherlands Air Force. He hailed out, was injured, but managed to elude the Germans.

A Dutchman found him and took him into their home, gave food and shelter and hid him from the searching Gestapo. There he made friends with the couple's baby girl.

Then came the day when, after careful preparations by his hosts, PO, Frau left for the underground. PO, Frau left his hide-out and a secret journey to England began. Since reaching here he has been in hospital.

But when word came that a little girl with his name and address had come to England under a scheme which is bringing Netherlands children, for convalescent holidays, he left hospital and hurried to London.

He found her to be the baby he had played with while hiding from the Gestapo—and he also found that her parents had been shot by the Nazis. Then he decided that she had been taken in by another couple and finally came to England.

The note the child brought answered his query. Frau, has adopted her and is sending her to his wife, also a Dutch girl, now in New Zealand.

Lach Has First Place in Scoring Race Clinched

Montreal, March 13 — (CP) — Clinching first place in the National Hockey League scoring race virtually clinched and he can concentrate from now on in an effort to establish a new point record for the season.

The weekly N.H.L. scoring lists issued today confirmed that Lach has set a new assist record at 51, two above the figure set by Clint Smith of Chicago a year ago, and has run his point total to 78, just six off the mark set last year by Herbie Cain of Boston. Lach, has a six-point edge on nine-mate Maurice Richard. Richard's record is 46 goals, and a 12-point margin on Toe Blake and Bill Dowler of Montreal.

Ted Kennedy of Toronto and Ab Demaio of Rangers passed Syd Howe during the week to take joint possession of fifth place with 32 points, 11 back of Blake and Cowley, with Howe another point behind them.

Lach and Richard have three more games in which to try for additional fortification for their records.

Pat Egan of Bruins has just about clinched the leagues bad-man title for the season with 74 minutes in majors and minors.

OFFSIDE PASSING RULE DUE FOR CHANGE IN N.H.L.

Most of the Coaches and Managers Not Satisfied With Present Set-up

By EDDIE LEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

National Hockey League critics have had a picnic this season at the expense of the offside passing rule—the one that authorities the present colorful ice-surface paint scheme.

Now, if the considered opinions of league coaches carry any weight that paint scheme—and the rule—is due for considerable revision in the next session of League moguls.

The rule provides that attacking players may pass the puck from behind their own blueline to a teammate at the red centre line without being caught an offside penalty. The pass must be completed before the puck reaches the centre line.

Dissatisfaction with the set-up has been general but here are a few of the outstanding suggested improvements:

Coach Frank Boucher of New York Rangers: "Eliminate the blue lines. We tried hockey with just a red centre line as long ago as 1941 and it worked fine. It is an asset to the five-man ganging attack and eliminates pitching the puck across the blueline as many teams do now."

Coach Hap Day of Toronto Maple Leafs: "Take out the red line. It was inserted two years ago to stop the forward pass and has failed to do that. I suggest we return to what we had before the war."

Coach Dick Irvin of Montreal Canadiens "Keep all the lines we have but relax the rules. Under present set-up a pass to a player centre behind the blueline has to be received on his own side of the centre line. We should allow the puck to cross the line ahead of the player without being offside and I tried it in exhibitions and it speeds up the game."

Johnny Gottselig of Chicago Black Hawks: "My idea is to wipe all the markings off the ice. Get rid of the two linesmen, have two referees instead of one and let the boys go to it".

"Mrs. Parkington"

"Mrs. Parkington," the best-seller novel by Louis Bromfield, has been brought to the screen by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in a glittering production of Susie and Augustus Parkington and their long line of descendants. It is now playing at the Belle and audiences who followed their careers with rapt attention for the film's entire running time.

Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon, for whom "Mrs. Parkington" marks their fourth co-starring appearance match their previous outstanding performances in "Blossoms in The Dust," "Mrs. Miniver," and "Madame Curie." It is the story of Sarah Graham, of Leaping Rock, New, a small town girl who is swept off her feet by the flamboyant Major Parkington, sophisticate, ambitious and daring, with plans of his own for social and financial power.

They are married and come to New York to live. How Susie, and the Major start their life in the big city, their romance and its ups and downs and joys and tragedies — all these make for one of the finest stories the screen has enjoyed in many a month.

There are a couple of young players in "Mrs. Parkington" about whom you have been hearing very nice things — and will continue to hear even more. We refer to Frances Rafferty and Tom Drake, who are featured in "Dragon Seed" and "Barbary Coast Gent," and Tom in "Two Girls and a Sailor," and "Maisie Goes to Reno." Both are headed for stardom with their pleasing personalities and natural acting talents.

It is altogether a grand cast that includes the stars of "Mrs. Parkington," among them Edward Arnold and Gladys Cooper.

MAJOR LEAGUE MOGULS TO GET RULING FROM ODT

Chicago, March 13 (AP)—Major League baseball's presidents are going to Washington this week to confer with office of Defence Transportation officials to determine if their voluntary agreement with the O.D.T. governing playing of training camp exhibition games.

President Will Harridge of the American League, who announced last night he and President Ford Frick of the National League would meet with O.D.T. officials this week, said he was of the opinion that schedules could be played. He added a meeting is necessary, however, to clarify "certain points" in the voluntary agreement reached at a meeting with the O.D.T. last month.

One of those points, Harridge said, involves games on "neutral" fields.

"When we reached the agreement with the O.D.T. governing travel of teams by 25 per cent, it was understood we would play no exhibitions during the period on 'neutral' fields except at army or navy bases, where they are under the transportation," Harridge said.

"Whether the O.D.T. would construe the 'neutral field' clause to mean a team's training camp also could not be termed a "home" site is the main point to be clarified in the talks with the O.D.T. officials," the O.D.T. source in Washington last night defined a "neutral field" as being any ground that is not the home field or training site of either participating team.

THE SECRET OF THE MARSHBANKS

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

CHAPTER 16.

"They moved their baby to the hospital last night," Mary told Nan. "You know all the rest. You didn't die. Every hour seemed the last hour. Days went by, and Uncle and I took you to the country. He told Fred, after that night, that of course I'd go; he needn't say a word. And we did go, again. But later he sent for him, and when I confessed that my duties had laid a child—his child—he then made provision that you should go, you grew sturdy and rosy, much stronger, than . . . Amy, . . . and I, tried . . . The speaker's voice thickened, and there was a pause.

"I tried to like you, Cherry. When you came to Mrs. Porter's I tried to remember poor Lottie's triumph and her request, that it wasn't any use. You nursed me, you brought me Cappy, . . .

Emma stopped abruptly, stroking the cat which had jumped into her lap.

"That's all," she said, and there was another silence.

"Who knows, Aunt Emma?" Cherry said then, hoarsely.

"Nobody now. Lottie died of pneumonia when you were seven. No one else 'knew.' She planned . . . 'In a few weeks, if you like, you can tell the judge this.' For I think he knows something," Emma said. "It is only my idea; there may be no foundation for it."

Cherry sat opposite the judge in his home library some weeks later, and poured forth the story. Amy had wived Cherry that she had invited Fred Thorndyke, Jimmy MacDonald — engaged for dinner and bridge, and asked Cherry, and Cherry accepting had telephoned to Fred to ask him if she might talk to him a few minutes before he left with Fran to go a large dinner at Burlingame.

It was six o'clock on a November evening; three days before Cherry's twenty-first birthday, and a year since she left Saint Dorothea's. She had shared Emma's secret for more than a month now, and knew that in the midst of the grief of it Emma was concerned to confide it to the judge. Emma's identity and location were completely buried: her name had changed; a past card bearing that word "Dead" living somerow, always my best wishes, sincerely, K." And assured Cherry of Emma's protection in that direction.

The judge listened attentively, his face grave. "Emma was to be married?" he asked finally. "Who was the man?"

"She didn't tell me. Not what her new name is, or 'Where they are going to live. I think," Cherry who was actuated by the case and, whose cheeks were wet with tears, added shyly, "that she's been living under the fear that all this might come out, that she would be punished, her sister's name dragged into it and disgraced."

"When will you be twenty-one, Cherry?"

"Next Wednesday."

"You would have known it then, anyway," the man said quietly.

Cherry's color rushed up; she half rose from her seat.

"Then it's true?" she whispered. "Yes, it's true. It is true. It is true."

"And you've known it!"

"I've suspected it—about the possibility, for a long time. Not that Emma told me."

"She said she had never breathed it to anyone! Did my mother—I mean did Aunt Emma's sister—did Lottie tell you?"

"I never saw Lottie. Everyone else in the household had seen her, for she used to come and stay with Emma. But I had been living in Washington, and I . . . I was busy. Once a week or two when this tragedy occurred, and both you babies were born, I was busy."

"But if Aunt Emma didn't tell you?"

"My brother did. Fred did. He knew."

"You see, Cherry," Judge Marshbanks continued, Lottie was so lonely in the house, and she had become downstairs that night to—in her despair and weakness and sorrow—to reproach Fred. She had been so ill—she had so bitterly resented his freedom to enjoy his position, the welcome that was awaiting her other child, that I suppose she hardly knew what she was doing. He didn't know she was going, for only a few days after that Lottie, when Estelle and the baby had been taken to the hospital, he was at home in mid-afternoon when Lottie's nurse rang him, he heard a baby fretting; He went out into the hall and listened and then went upstairs.

"Lottie was lying in bed asleep; Emma was on call, Fred told me afterward that the floor seemed to rock beneath his feet when he saw Lottie that he realized in that second what must be the case. He opened the door of the second and other door, and there in a bassinet was the tiny child that was his own. Fine, and gasping for air, he thought it was dying then.

"There was an old nurse sitting there, a thin old woman who seemed to speak no English. Emma had brought her in to watch the child, Fred told me, in pantomime to Fred that it was only a matter of moments—an hour or two perhaps—before the poor baby would slip away, and he went downstairs again, numb, not knowing what to do or what to think.

"He'd seen the blue little gadgets and heard the nurse wasn't any mistaking it! But to change back his name under Amelia's life, for she was still hovering between life and death . . .

Fred was older than I, but usually when he got in trouble it was to me he came. He didn't or dare tell anyone this. When at last Emma came, Emma knew, came to us, and we made arrangements for your support, Judge Marshbanks said in the time I reached my property, and she must be told the whole truth, and that you were living, and make a complete confession. Those things was also dead then, and you were as fatherless as I. He said—poor Fred!—that both of his daughters, and that as the years had gone by he had come to feel that Amy was Amelia's daughter too, but he hoped that you girls could come to an understanding, out of court, that you would both keep the name you had always had, and that this will be just one more of the many that all families hide, generation after generation, it will be for you, I think, to make the decision. Your little Amy has only a few more days to believe herself to be Fran Burlingame heiress."

"Then it is true!" Cherry whispered. "But Emma said that there was no proof."

"There was no proof that Emma knew of it. But I'm not sure we have proof now," Judson Marshbanks said. He opened a lower desk drawer, and took from it first a shining revolver.

"Don't be frightened," he assured the girl, who was staring at it with wide-eyed fear. "I'm forgetting that it was here; it belongs upstairs. Now look," he added, taking a long envelope from the drawer, and laying it on the desk between them, "is Fred's or Lottie's statement? From your mother—or rather from Lottie Hastings—and his own affidavit, that the children, you and Amy, were exchanged in the first hours of their lives. It is marked to be opened on November thirteenth of this year, which will be Amy's twenty-first birthday.

"I brought this home a few days ago from safe deposit, and on Sunday next I think we must break the news. I suppose you know," the man went on in a changed tone, "that Amy's mother has been twice married before, both times to rich women, has got her into his rich town? She is in a delirium of love and confidence; she wants to tell Amy about it as long as we'll listen!"

"Amy?"

"Oh, yes. They've known each other only a few weeks, but it is Count Mario Constantino or no body for Amy now."

"Not the man that Sandra Baker divorced?"

"That's the man. He plays polo like a devil, speaks five or six languages, uses his own special perfume, dances divinely, and Amy is only anxious for fear he won't want her."

"Oh, Amy can't be such a fool! Didn't the second wife commit suicide?"

"The first. The second is paying him five hundred a month to keep away from her.

"But you're talked to Amy?"

"We all have. My mother's frantic about it. But don't worry. When she tells him, at dinner, I'll have to tell him, that her fortune belongs to another woman—Mother!"

The last word was a shocked whisper. For did Mrs. Marshbanks, with a face of chalk and a rustle of silk, had risen from a great chair which faced the others, and had come to the desk. She spoke by the panelled silence.

"You don't think for one instant that you can do this to Amy?" she hissed. "You don't think for one instant that this fantastic story of Emma's, dragged with Fred, convince anyone of anything? You and Emma and this girl here cooking up all this nonsense!"

"You were listening," the judge said, dazedly. "I'm sorry, Mother," he went on after a moment of silence. "But it isn't my doing or Emma's. It's Fred's and Lottie's before them. And you can't—we can't stop it now."

"Could we stop it now," Cherry demanded, frightened. "Couldn't we tell Amy something, anything that wouldn't make it so hard for her? Couldn't we . . ."

"I can stop it now!" The long envelope was in the old woman's hand before the judge or the others could move she had torn it both ways, and then, with long, regal steps, had scattered the instantly flaming pieces of paper upon the coals. "It's stopped," she said, coming back breathless and sinking into a chair. "Your silence—too Amy and to me—to slander your brother have failed, Jodi! We'll hear no more of nonsense!"

Cherry looked fearfully at the judge and he looked at his mother, who sent alternate defiant glances over one of their faces to the other.

There was no sound in the room until Amy's voice came, high and exultant, from the doorway.

"Cherry, come on—quick, we have to talk! I've just been riding in the park. It's the dirtiest afternoon you ever saw, and the sunset was simply too much!"

"Oh, Amy, darling," said the Judge. Cherry left mother and son together.

"And if anyone tells you differently, they're jealous!" Amy finished, long, rapturous narrative scornfully, with her usual indifference to the rules of grammar.

Cherry might have supposed herself incapable of interest in Amy but her own affairs, but Amy's companionship had been of a nature to put them in abeyance. Cherry was carried by them out of herself. Amy was madly, completely in love with the fascinating Count di Mario, familiarly known as "Gogo," and intended to marry him immediately upon reaching her majority.

"Until I'm twenty-one I'm not supposed to marry anyone without Uncle Jud's full approval," stated Amy, "but I'll be twenty-one next week, the family is due for a surprise!"

"But, Amy, suppose after you marry him, you find that all these things he's been telling you aren't true?"

"But why should I? Am I going to find out some day that I'm not me and you're not you?"

"Amy, I might think, Cherry thought. But you may not now, I thought you might have gone to Sausalito with Gogo," she said aloud.

"Was she in Sausalito today?"

"I believe she was."

"Kitty's crazy about her," Amy said absently. Cherry's heart sank—said, "Say," Amy added suddenly, "did you ask her if she'd come out? Jud are staying down in Burlingame tonight. If they are, I'm going off riding again with 'Gogo' and 'tomorrow.'

"No, they're not staying, I happen to know because the judge told me. He doesn't like to drive about it being too much to have Rousseau wait up late to drive them home, after being all day in Sausalito, but Uncle Jud said it wouldn't hurt him."

"Oh, damn!" said Amy. "Fran said yesterday that they were going to stay at the club. Ask her, will you, Cherry? I'll ride with you, if you're going off riding again with 'Gogo' and 'tomorrow.'"

"No, they're not staying. I happen to know because the judge told me. He doesn't like to drive about it being too much to have Rousseau wait up late to drive them home, after being all day in Sausalito, but Uncle Jud said it wouldn't hurt him."

"Oh, damn!" said Amy. "Fran said yesterday that they were going to stay at the club. Ask her, will you, Cherry? I'll ride with you, if you're going off riding again with 'Gogo' and 'tomorrow.'"

Cherry crossed the hall to Fran's bedroom door, and called slightly ajar. She pushed it open and saw Fran on a flowing gown at the telephone, with her back to the room.

"Ah, don't be silly, darling, that's all jealousy," Fran was saying. "After a lovely day like today, it's so stupid of you to make a fuss. Yes, we're going to Burlingame. He wants me to. Well, he wants to. Yes—I have to. I'll hate that. Every minute of it. Where are you? Downstairs? But that's dangerous, dear. Please be reasonable because you worry me so! Truly you do."

Cherry cleared her throat and Fran turned swiftly. She smiled automatically when she saw Cherry, and ended her conversation.

"I'll have to stop now," she said. "Good-bye, Kelly." And she turned to Cherry with just a little unusual color in her face, a little fear in her face. "We wanted you today," she said, "but it was over in Sausalito."

Confused, troubled thought made Cherry stammer. Until the evening long, made her start when one of the bridegrooms reminded her that it was her turn to deal, made her look now and then at Amy with eyes that seemed to see her for the first time.

There appeared at half past eight with the announcement that there was a gentleman to see Miss Rawlings. That would be the fascinating Gogo, Cherry thought, looking at Amy with a laugh. This was another small instance of Amy's subtlety, Cherry thought; Amy had the caller to ask for Miss Rawlings." But Amy, departing in a flutter, returned immediately in disappointment, to say that it was Kelly Coates, and that he wanted to see Cherry for a minute.

Cherry might have hesitated under any other circumstances, for her heart was sore on the subject of Kelly, but with the two girls resigning themselves to a three-handed game in her absence, and Amy protesting that it was some message for Fran, she could not quite send him away, and so went to the smaller library and found Kelly standing forlornly at the leaves of a magazine on the table.

Kelly sensed at once that Cherry was not happy, and interrupted his greeting with a disturbed "What's the trouble, Marchioness?"

"Nothing. And it's no nice to see you, Kelly. It's been weeks!"

"Are you telling me that?" said Kelly. "It's been more than two months; it's seemed like years!"

She could not help it, this sun came out, when she was in his company; the world seemed safe and right.

"Well, as soon as we get back you must go to Honolulu," she reminded him, deep in a corner of the big davenport, now, with Kelly in a chair near, and their hands linked.

"To paint three adorable children and receive a heat little check for fifteen hundred, plus traveling expenses," Kelly said.

"Oh, Kelly, that was good! Did Fran see it before?"

"No," he answered absently, "Cherry what's been going on? You're thinner, you're grown up, you're a peachy—pretty—lovely woman with your blue eyes and your mixed-up hair and the way you blush! What's been the matter, mean to you?"

"Nobody's been mean to me. And our trip . . ."

She began to tell him about it, feeling that delicious eagerness with which she always talked to Kelly. When she came to the end of the journey, and the long afternoon in the judge's study, she saw his interest intensify, and was presently interrupted.

"So you're Amy Marshbanks? Great Allah!"

"No proof, Kelly."

"What a good wouldn't proof do . . . Oh, I see," he said, at there were proof, you'd come in for considerable property; I forgot that. Well, there may be some proof somewhere."

"No, but there's not. There was. At least we think there was." Then she told him the rest of the story.

"How'd the judge take it? Like in that will or statement, or whatever it was?" he asked.

"He didn't know; he said so. His brother had told him only that he had to do it. He was partly delirious, when he was dying."

"So that it might've been meant anything to you at all?"

He paused for a few minutes, still holding the warm young hand that clung to his so tightly, and then said, in a curious note: "Cod if you were suddenly to have a wealthy uncle, the family is due for a surprise!"

"Did! And I don't especially want it," Cherry said, "I didn't have time to think about all that Wellington money. But I never think in terms of real wealth—I mean jewelry and fur coats and a personal maid, all that. But I did think, ooh, well, being able to travel simply, you know, and some day buying a home somewhere. That sort of thin ."

Basketball

Paced by their elongated centre player, Bodwell, the Kingston "Army" C.O.C. "Army" cagers downed the Belleville "Y" Intermediates 44 to 32 in the first game of the Eastern Ontario O.R.A. playdowns at Kingston Monday night. The return game will be played at the Belleville Y.M.C.A. on Thursday evening at which time the local "Y" intermediates face a 13 point deficit in a two-game series, points to count.

The Kingston "Army" quintette gained a substantial lead in the first half when they led 22 to 15. There was no stopping the six-foot three-inch Bodwell as he racked up 11 points in the first half and continued to play consistent basketball by adding 11 in the second stanza. Bodwell definitely made the difference in the final score.

For the Belleville "Y" the scoring was well divided in a thrilling cage game. Gord Maddox accounted for eight local points to pace the "Y" followed by Jack Dickens with 7, Tom Burnett with six and "Steve" Wood and Glen Robertson with five each. The Belleville quintette feel they can draw down the 13 point advantage gained by the Army when they play the return game here Thursday night. A Kingston CWAC team of girls will oppose the Belleville "Y" girls in the first half of a final bill.

The line-ups — Kingston R.C.O.C. — Mclntyre, Shiel, Bryce, Dawson 4, Stokie, Strom 8, Clayton 4, Bodwell 23 and Painkstal. Belleville Y.M.C.A. — Dickens 7, Maddox 8, Garrow, Dickens 7, Bankier 5, Burnett 6 and Robertson 5.

Referee: S. G. Mockford; umpire, F. D. White.

Sergeant Cosens of Queen's Own Took Heroic Part in Battle at Keppeln

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Army in Germany, March 13 —(CP Cable)— Sergeant Aubrey Cosens of the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, a Toronto boy, killed on the grim battlefield at Keppeln, 11½ miles north of Uedem, in front of the Hochwald Line, fought in all his heroism in one of the finest in the numerous infantry exploits in that struggle, as savage as anything the Canadians have known on the Western Front.

The Sergeant came from Lakefront, Ont., but his wife worked in Timmins, Ont., before joining the Army. He made a sergeant with the Queen's Own and before dawn of Feb. 26 he moved forward over flat farmland with a platoon of D Company, which was the battalion objective, to capture ground east of German-held Keppeln.

Six tanks of the 1st Hussars, of London, Ont., were operating with the battalion. The platoon reached its first objective through withering machine-gun fire but casualties were suffered. The platoon officer was severely wounded and Cosens took over immediately and encouraged the remaining men in a covering fire group.

He knew the position had to be held at all costs and that Germans in the house nearby must be driven out. So he ran 25 yards across the flat ground under intense fire and climbed on top of a 1st Hussars tank. Sitting as the front of the turret he directed the covering fire against enemy positions he had spotted.

The Germans who were tough paratroops, forced to fight in counter-attack but the gallant sergeant was still riding. The Sherman tank, with Cosens blazing, was directed in the middle of the Germans. Those who survived fled.

Then Cosens perched on the tank took over the two-storey houses. He ordered the tank commander to ram the house, which drove the enemy into the open, where they were shot up. He leaped from the turret and ordered the tank to follow him to the next house where the Sherman again smashed down the wall and the sergeant plunged in with a grenade to kill all enemy troopers there. The third and last house he also was manned by the tank and Cosens raced into the wreckage alone to clear the house.

Four of his men then came up to hold the ground won and the tank left. Cosens continued to move back to report to the company commander. He had not gone 50 yards when a sniper hit him in the head. He died a few minutes later on the smoking, roaring battlefields of Keppeln.

Cpl. Harry Smith Returns After 5 Years Overseas

Bancroft, March 13 — Corporal Harry Smith arrived in Bancroft Saturday evening having been overseas for the past five years. Cpl. Smith enlisted with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, whose headquarters were at Picton, in May 1941, at the age of 22 years, going overseas May of the same year. He remained with that regiment until after his return from Brest in France in July 1940 when he asked for a transfer into the R.C.O.C.'s with whom he remained until his return to Canada this week on rotation leave. Four days after D-Day, June 10th., 1945 he landed with troops in France and was among those troops defending Caen and Falaise, of which the Canadians won high praise.

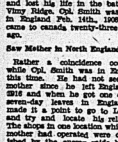
He was slightly wounded in the back from these skirmishes. Later as the enemy was shoved back Cpl. Smith went on with the R.C.O.C.'s into Belgium and Holland as the unit to which he was attached was in charge of ammunitions and guns.

Expects to Go East.

Corporal Smith on his return expects to go to the Far East to continue his service rather than return to the Western Front. Before his enlistment he lived with his wife and son Earl, at Lake St. Peter, but while overseas his family moved to an apartment in Bancroft one and a half years ago. Cpl. Smith has one half-sister, Private Ena Smith, who is in the A.T.S. in the armed services, and one step-brother, Sgt. Charles Smith in the Royal Rifles of Canada, overseas. He followed in the footsteps of his father as the latter fought during World War 1 and had his life in the battle of Vimy Ridge. Cpl. Smith was born in England Feb. 14th., 1919 and came to canada twenty-three years ago.

Saw Mother in North England.

Rather a coincidence occurred while Cpl. Smith was in England this time. He had not seen his mother since he left England in 1916 and when he got one of his seven-day leaves in England he made it a point to go to London and try and locate his relatives. The shops in one location which his mother had operated were demolished by enemy action but on going into the old street on which he used to live a voice called out,



"By your name Harry" and when Cpl. Smith looked about there was a woman who remarked that she had known him from a little lad. From this lady he learned that his sister, Winnie was living some two miles from where he was and on visiting her learned the whereabouts of his mother and other relatives and on this last leave he left for the northern part of England and visited his mother and relatives at Northford, England.

Lumber Supplies On Short Side

Toronto, March 13 — (CP)—Lumber supplies in Canada after flagging causes in Europe will be above peacetime averages but will be insufficient to meet the General Timber Controller A. H. Williamson said today.

Mr. Williamson said his forecast, given in an address prepared for delivery to the Ontario Retail Lumber Dealers' Association, was based on the assumption that Canada would export about 50 per cent of her lumber production. Lumber now is officially regarded by the Canadian and United States governments as "in the 3 shortage" of all war materials needed by the United Nations.

Girl Workers Say Contracts Guaranteed Return Fare Home

Toronto, March 13 — (CP) — A group of women munition workers at one of the British Empire's largest munition plants are wondering about a little problem they have with the Dominion Government. The sooner it's worked out, they say, the better.

The point of contention centres about transportation home. Most of the girls came from Canada's west and were brought to the Ajax Ont., plant of Defence Industries Limited with the promise that their transportation would be paid back home after six months on the job.

The girls and their union—United Electrical workers of America, C.I.O.—contend now that the six months' clause applies with certain stipulations which changes the picture to some extent. Defence Industries officials at Ajax declined making a statement that rail fares to the girls' homes would be paid after six months.

The Labor officials have laid the responsibility onto National Selective Service. Meanwhile Union officials have applied to Selective Service to clarify the situation. Selective Service previously stated the terms regarding return fare apply according to a contract with D.I.L.

In regard to each group of girls brought to work at the shell-filling plants,

At Ottawa, Arthur MacKenzie, Director of National Selective Service, said that a contract under which girls from Western Canada were moved to munitions plant jobs at Ajax, Ont., would be lived up to.

"These girls came east under a contract," Mr. MacKenzie said. "I don't know what the terms are but they must be a matter of record and I'm sure they are they will be lived up to."

GIANT LOBSTER WEIGHS 22 POUNDS

Out of the Atlantic deep comes this 22-pound lobster to get its picture in the papers with waitress Marion Walsh of Dorchester, Mass., who probably is glad they don't all come this heavy. It was one of 80 big fellows snagged far at sea by the crew of a trawler.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, March 13 —(CP)— Something new in accurate shooting records has been achieved by City of Oshawa Typhoon Squadron pilots.

The Canadians saw a strange piece of transport moving in on the Kempen suburbs. It was a camouflaged truck drawn by a big white horse.

"Four of us took passes at the truck and blew it up without hurting the horse," said FO. Prescott Pearson of Canmore, Alta. "By the time I made my second pass at it, it had gone behind a house—so I blew the end of the house to get at the truck."

But while the horse wasn't hurt it certainly was frightened.

"As soon as we blew up the truck it started to run and disappeared over a hill," said FO. William Orbell of Peterborough, Ont.

FO. Stan Fight lieutenants, former operations officers, have been appointed for two scholarships recently offered by Trinity Hall, Cambridge, to permanently staff aircrew who would otherwise be discharged from the service.

They are Flt.-Lt R. G. Frederick of Lindsay, Ont., and Flt.-Lt P. L. MacDonnell of Toronto, both graduates of Kingston, Ont.

Frederick has chosen engineering and MacDonnell will read law.

Flt.-Lt. R. J. (Dick) Audet, D.F.C., Spitfire pilot from (402 Eighth Ave., at Lethbridge, Alta., who has shot down 11¼ planes in less than two months, has set another kind of record—in promptness in reporting for interrogation after balling out.

Audet's Grizzly Bear plane was badly damaged by gunfire over an airfield in the Rhcheds area, and when he got back to base he found he couldn't get speed to land.

So he pulled away from the airfield and parachuted, landing in a muddy field without a scratch. He hitched a ride with a motorcycle rider and made the interrogation while FO. R. C. McCrackern of Lakefield, Ont., with three on the same flight was still being questioned.

Several dozen Canadians flying with R.A.F. Liberator squadrons participated in a concentrated attack on the main Japanese supply base in southern Burma, just outside Rangoon.

Despite heavy flak and fighter opposition, the bombing was described by FO. William Robinson (10726 32nd Ave.) Edmonton, as "the best I've seen yet."

"I watched our squadron's bombs go down," he said. "They made a perfect pattern and big bursts of smoke shot up as we went over."

Robinson flies with Sqdn.-Ldr. J. R. Stewart of Fort Frances, Ont.

Sgt. Harvey Dowerbank of (47 Warden St.) Minico, Ont., ace one Japanese fighter shot down.

Wing-Cmdr. N. H. M. Bealy of Lindsay, Ont., led one squadron against the target.

Legislature To Hold Several Night Sessions To Complete Business Before Easter Week

Debate on Throne Speech Will Be Continued With Opposition Members to be Heard

Toronto, March 12 —(CP)— Its program limited schedule, the Ontario legislature tonight will hold the first of several night sittings in a drive to complete sessional business before the Easter holidays, beginning March 26.

Debate on the Throne Speech will occupy both afternoon and evening with Labor-Progressive Leader A. A. MacLeod and several Opposition members scheduled to speak.

In a dull sitting yesterday the House considered numerous bills and witnessed tabling of a lengthy report of the Agricultural Rehabilitation Commission of Inquiry, detailing findings and recommendations of that body since its formation and dealing with long-term problems of agriculture in the province.

The report stressed raising of standards in rural schools and recommended extension of the large school unit system in all of Ontario's rural areas. Curricula would be modified to give insight in to both agriculture and urban vocations, and the minimum age for leaving public schools placed at 16 years. Increased responsibility by the state in financing and directing rural education was favored.

Emphasis was placed on soil conservation, with recommendations that the government aid municipalities in soil conservation by good control measures, and that a wide programme be established immediately at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph.

Want Provincial Implemented

The report asks that provisions of the Central Mortgage Bank contemplated under the Federal Farm Loan Act be put into operation at an early date, and that special steps be taken by the province to assist young experienced farmers short of capital to establish themselves on farms.

Government assistance is asked for the erection of comfortable dwellings for married farm help.

The Committee was Archibald Leitch, Commission chairman, and M. McIntyre, Hood, chairman, that the report be signed. Final and covering matters on which decisions have been reached, Mr. Porter considers is required on several matters, one of which is agricultural marketing.

Elimination of scrub bulls, extension of artificial breeding units, encouragement of sheep raising, and improvement of the province's beef hog policy were favored in the report on livestock.

Labor Legislation Changes

Arthur Williams (CCF — Ontario) told, the House 1,000 workers were facing layoff on the Oshawa plant of the General Motors Company of Canada. He urged efforts by the Labor and Planning Departments to assist in employment of displaced workers.

Five government bills and three private bills were given first reading. Labor Minister Daley moved to revive the Minimum Wage Act by giving the Industry and War Labor Board the authority to set minimum wages for part-time workers. A measure to permit registration of practical nurses was brought in by Dr. R. P. Vivian, Health Minister.

The House in Committee received considerable discussion on sections of the proposed Election Act, passing for third reading a bill to repeal the Political Contributions Act and a bill to amend the Judicature Act.

Given Second Reading

Second reading was given a bill to repeal a section of the Public Trustees Act. This would permit investment by public trustees of funds in other than Province of Ontario securities.

Two other bills, amending the Evidence Act and the Public Health Act, were given second reading. The first would permit bank and government records recorded on microscopic film for preservation, allowing destruction of bulky records. The second would prescribe standards for cold storage plants and provide health regulations for swimming pools.

RICH B.C. AREA WILL BE OPENED BY NEW HIGHWAY

Government Plans 154-Mile Road at Cost of $6,000,000 Giving Peace River Outlet to Pacific

Victoria, B. C., March 13 —(CP) —Providing the long-sought Peace River outlet to the Pacific Coast, the new highway proposed by the British Columbia government and announced at the present session of the legislature will pass through country of the finest scenery and great potential wealth in natural resources.

At a cost of $6,000,000 the government's plan, to join the end of existing highways at Dawson Creek, 35 miles west of Dawson Creek on the Alaska Highway and Summit Lake, 32 miles north of Prince George.

The 154 miles of new road required will traverse the river valleys with thousands of acres of good land and rich timber areas abounding with big game. A hydrap coal deposits estimated to run into millions of tons.

Starting at Summit Lake, the height of land and headwaters of the Arctic, the route will follow the Crooked River and numerous lakes linked to it. Three rivers over which large bridges will be built, Thence it will swing through the valley of the Misinchinka River to Pine Pass to cross the Rocky Mountain at 3,850 feet elevation.

It will then swing horseshoe-like through the Pass, eastward along Pine River to Commotion Creek, there joining the present road system of the Peace River block and so on to Dawson Creek on the Alaska Highway.

Link With Vancouver.

The Prince George-on the Canadian National Railway line to Prince Rupert, the route will connect with the Cariboo Highway stretching 490 miles southwestward to Vancouver.

At present settlement is sparse along the proposed route. On the part to be built there is only one community—Mcleod—with 100 population, mostly trappers. But the road will provide an outlet for some 500,000 acres of land in Peace River Block and adjacent country.

Government officials predict that the new highway will attract tourists from all the continent and that settlement of the area through which it will pass will be rapid.

Settled residents of the Peace River Block took up picks and shovels and started to build their own highway in 1937 by way of Mackinaw Pass.

Lacking money and equipment most of the 40 workers donated two days' work; others assisted gratis from a fund donated by businessmen. Store-keepers donated groceries and the Alberta government supplied some tents.

More than 80 miles of roadway was built in rough fashion but the project was never completed.

Delegation To Represent More Than One Party

Ottawa, March 13—(CP)—Choice of opposition representatives for the Canadian delegation to the San Francisco World Security Conference will not be confined to one opposition party but may not extend to every group or section of the opposition in the House of Commons. Since time limitations prevent King's announcement last week opposition representation, it is planned there has been lively speculation as to the manner of their selection.

Press reports (not carried by The Canadian Press) that the selection would be confined to the official opposition party or the Progressive Conservative Party were described by persons close to Mr. King as not a true construction of his remarks.

It is believed the government itself will take the responsibility of selecting the persons to go, perhaps after some consultation with leaders of other parties, and that it will not simply ask the opposition as a whole to nominate a number of persons.

If the latter were done, there is a possibility that the Progressive Conservatives, with 40 members to 10 for the Social Credit and 16 for the C.C.F. groups, might pick all opposition representatives from their own ranks.

On the basis of Mr. King's announcement, and subsequent interpretations, it now is clear that the opposition representatives will be chosen from members of Parliament and not persons outside Parliament; they will not be confined to the Progressive Conservative party, and that any opposition members calling themselves a group or party are not automatically entitled to representation, an extreme instance being the Canadian Party with one member, Liguori Lacombe of Laval-Two Mountains.

Town of Honnef Captured by Americans

Rhine Bridgehead Made More Secure In Northern End

U.S. 3rd Army Captures 13 Towns in Trier Area

By JAMES M. LONG
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Paris, March 14 (AP)—U.S. 1st army troops have captured Honnef, providing a firm, dominating base for their bridgehead, into which men and material streamed across two bridges today to reinforce 70,000 shock troops the Germans said still are ready and willing.

Moving forward through the forested hills west of Honnef in a dawn attack, the Americans captured the town of St. Catharinen, four miles northeast of Linz and seven miles directly north of the Remagen bridge over the Rhine and on a pontoon bridge nearby.

The Ludendorff bridge still was reported in a frontline dispatch, however, to be functioning at 8:30 a.m. battlefront time today. The double-tracked 1,000-foot bridge has been pounded by numerous times, but Associated Press war correspondents in the front area said it was repeated swiftly. Pontoon bridges usually are quickly erected.

The Germans said the new U. S. big Army drive south of the Moselle river had thrust into the depth of the main German defense line.

A battle, preceded by a four-hour barrage, was reported raging into the 26th hour in the area west of Saarburg and north of Metlach along the German boundary of the Moselle. The Germans placed a partial security news blackout on the battle.

Five-Pronged Assault

London, March 14 — (CP)—Allied bombers smashed at Germany from three, west and south today following up a five-pronged R.A.F. assault last night at synthetic oil refineries from the west front to Berlin.

The attacks today rounded out 30 days of round-the-clock bombing of Germany — the longest unbroken period of this war.

Before noon the German radio reported Allied formations were approaching the Reich from the west and south.

Four heavy bombers in attacks last night hit benzol plants near Gelsenkirchen and Horne in the Ruhr while Mosquito bombers with Pathfinder duties struck at Berlin, Bremen and Frankfurt on the Main. In a daylight attack yesterday Royal Air Force and Canadian bombers with a fighter escort battered Berlin, a communications centre in the Ruhr.

The attack last night on Berlin was the 22nd in a row.

Deep Thrust Into Main Defences Admitted by Huns

London, March 14 —(CP)— A Berlin broadcast today declared German arms had scored direct hits on the Remagen bridge over the Rhine and on a pontoon bridge nearby.

The Ludendorff bridge still was reported in a frontline dispatch, however, to be functioning at 8:30 a.m. battlefront time today. The double-tracked 1,000-foot bridge has been pounded by numerous times, but Associated Press war correspondents in the front area said it was repaired swiftly. Hollywood Strike May Lead To Shutdown of U.S. Movies

Hollywood, March 14 — (AP) — Hollywood's studio strike will be settled only by the will of President E. Roy Brewell, president of the Conference of Studio Unions, whose attitude is characterization today as "unauthorized" by L. P. Lindelhoff, general president of the International Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America.

Sorrell said the A.F.L. studio Union workers would not return to their jobs, regardless of Lindelhoff's instruction for them to do so.

The strike has mushroomed into a threat that could lead to the shutdown of most of Hollywood's major movie theatres.

As the controversy rocked into its third day, Richard A. Welsh, president of the powerful International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, sounded this warning in a message to his unions, which include motion picture projectionists, machinists and stage hands:

"Stand by for an order to stop handling or exhibiting any motion picture produced by the struck producer."

It could not be learned immediately early today whether similar wires had been dispatched to technicians working in Canadian motion picture studios.

Welsh added further confusion to the complicated picture when he brought idleness to more than 17,000 film employees and a potential slowdown of the industry's film fare.

Hailed by the producers was not immediately forthcoming.

The strike was called in protest from heads of the Conference of Studio Unions, whose affiliates include the Painters Union, touched off the fireworks in its dispute with the producers by picketing studios with 70-odd $130-a-week set decorators.

Behind the picketing lines a committee from the Screen Directors; Writers and Actors Guilds, formed to propose peace terms to the two embattled unions and producers, tonight achieve a long pending final settlement by the National Labor Relations Board.

The studio conference group apparently was gaining headway as additional guarantees pledged support, including 2,500 A.F.L. carpenters who are not allied with the Conference.

FRONT DEFENCES ALONG EAST BANK BADLY CUT UP

Railway Centre of Siegburg 'Fired' And Heavy Toll of Traffic Taken

21st Army Group Headquarters, March 14 — (Reuters)—The glow of hundreds of fires lit up the east bank of the Rhine last night as Mosquitos of the R.A.F. and Tactical Air Force attacked railways and road traffic in the German rear front defences.

The chief target was the railway centre of Siegburg, southeast of Cologne, and low-flying pilots reported back enormous numbers of fires" raging in the town.

Mosquito raiders said the main roads in the same area and took a heavy toll of traffic moving with headlights on.

Long before the weather brought Allied troops to a halt on the Siegfried line defences, they were up with an "enormous explosion."

Reuters said one of the biggest yet in rail cuts in the Netherlands "by-passing" beleaguered, north-western Germany and the Rhineland. Lines were cut in 80 places.

The large vehicle reached its strength to the daylight assault on the Ruhr area and also patrolled the Remagen bridgehead area in what was described here as "an aggressive and offensive manner."

3 GIRLS DEAD, MOTHER CRITICAL FROM GAS FUMES

Gas Company Says Cap on Pipe Fixed on Tightly

Toronto, March 14 (CP)—Three small girls are dead, and their mother, Mrs. William Boothe, wife of a transportation facility, Vancouver, is in serious condition in hospital from the effects of illuminating gas which poured out of an unlighted gas jet in the bedroom of their small cottage in western Toronto early today.

Seven of a three-year-old child, choked by the fumes, awakened a family of five in an adjoining cottage and started an investigation that found the bodies of Betty Boothe, 7, Peggy 5, and Carol 3, in their beds.

Lying on the floor near the uncapped pipe was the mother, 30, unconscious and near death. Firemen and gas company employees worked an hour before reviving her. She was rushed to hospital.

Find Gas Pipe.

The neighbor, Mrs. Arthur McGowan of 415 Dufferin Street, said gas company workers were called 10 days ago and fixed the cap on the pipe. Gas company employees, after investigation today, said the cap was fixed on so tightly "only a wrench could have removed it."

It was Mrs. McGowan, aroused by her child, who called a telephone operator who, in turn, had police firemen and gas company employees on the scene in, as Mrs. McGowan said, "record time."

When awakened, Mr. and Mrs. McGowan immediately smelled gas and made sure there was none escaping in their cottage. That ascertained, Mr. McGowan and another neighbor, William Lenoir smashed open the back door of the Boothe cottage.

They found the victims in a living-bedroom.

TALKS PROMISE POSTWAR CANADA-U.S. CO-OPERATION

Reduction of Trade Barriers One of the Main Topics of Conversation

By C. B. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Washington, March 14,—(CP)—Close co-operation between Canada and the United States in meeting the problems of peace, including the reduction of trade barriers, was promised today as a result of intimate discussions between Prime Minister Mackenzie King and President Roosevelt.

The Prime Minister spent Friday night and Saturday at the White House and returned there yesterday after a weekend at Williamsburg, Va., the guest of private railway car overnight for New York, where he will spend several hours before continuing to Ottawa.

The Prime Minister marked his visit by appearing at the President's regular press conference. Mr. Roosevelt's right arm while the President talked of their long friendship and of the fruitful results of the larger friendship which had made Canadians and Americans intimate neighbors—or counting as Mr. Roosevelt put it, Expansive Lines.

The President read a three-paragraph statement on the discussions which have occupied the two leaders. It said they had agreed on the necessity of "bold and expansive" lines toward removal of trade discriminations and reduction of trading barriers between all countries in the post-war period.

They had also discussed problems which might arise at the forthcoming United Nations conference on world security at San Francisco, and "the place which Canada and China play in the new international organization."

The Prime Minister was not questioned and he remained a silent spectator of what the President said was not merely a means of giving information to the correspondents but of getting information from them.

INDUSTRIAL HEART OF OSAKA BURNED BY SUPERFORTS

Expand Destruction In Three of Japan's Largest Cities to 24 Square Miles

Guam, March 14 — (AP) — Three hundred Superfortresses wiped out five square miles or more of Osaka's industrial heart before dawn today, expanding their fiery destruction in three of Japan's largest cities into a fire-day period of 24 square miles.

At a cost of four Superforts over the targets on Tokyo and Nagoya and one each over Nagoya and Osaka, the B29s have spilled more than 6,000 tons of incendiaries on new low-level tactics which have:

Burned out 17 square miles of Tokyo, in the first dark hours of Saturday;

Levelled two square miles in the aircraft factory centre of Nagoya, raided in daylight Sunday, and Wiped out hundreds of little wooden war-vital workships, known as "hidden factories," in Osaka, the 2,362,000 inhabitant city with which it is second only to Tokyo in size.

Returning fliers from the last places over Osaka said the centre of the city was a "solid fire" when the raid was over.

Three Emergency Landings

Three returning B29s made emergency landings on Iwo Jima.

The target area, where more than 607,000 persons live, embraced the Osaka station, the Tokaido main railroad, the Kanzaki railroad line, industrial factories, household factories, and the civic heart with modern business buildings. But fires were set near enough to have spread to the Osaka Imperial Palace, factory and to industrial plants in suburban Amagasaki and Sakai.

The fires started here at Osaka was described by B29 crewmen in the early morning as "like watching the former Czech headquarters city of Banska Bystrica, and 75 miles north of Budapest.

Tranaeman said the flames in the Osaka fires could be seen 150 miles Koenigsberg's last land communications with the south, and that, through to Brandenburg, on the coast 12 miles northwest of Zinten.

Enemy Capital Ordered Defended At All Costs

Storm Forces Batter Model Gdynia Port From 3 Sides

Moscow, March 14 — (AP)—Russian storm forces battered pre-war Poland's model seaport of Gdynia from three sides today as the German forces on the bay of Danzig steadily dwindled.

Field dispatches indicated Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky was determined to wipe out the Gdynia pocket at top speed, leaving the city of Danzig to be dealt with later. Red Army troops here said to be closing in on Gdynia from the north, west and southwest while aircraft ranged out to sea to choke off enemy efforts to reinforce or evacuate the besieged port.

Gdynia's mop-up would lay Danzig open for complete encirclement. Troops driving the Berlin front from Stettin to Frankfurt was disclosed by official Russian reports as having only "local significance."

But there seemed no doubt Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov was increasing pressure against the enemy capital on the west bank of the Oder, especially near Frankfurt, so he could speed break-through to the armies when the time comes to strike for the German capital.

(By German account, Zhukov already has sent nine divisions, or 135,000 troops, to the west of the Oder between Kuestrin and Frankfurt, but the Russians never have announced any crossing of the river in that area.)

A hard struggle continued in Stettin's eastern suburb, Altdamm, where Zhukov is trying to penetrate a deep belt of mines and anti-tank defences. Altdamm's hills south of the Dammscher See.

Gain High Ground

In the growing battle for Gdynia, Rokossovsky's troops gained high ground overlooking the port from the south and swarmed forward to capture Adlershorst, a coastal settlement 1 1/2 miles from the Gdynia waterfront. Fierce fighting was shelling military installations in the city at will.

The Red Army formation was said to have almost entered the Gdynia suburbs and the airport while a third coming down the coast from the north was within easy shellfire distance.

Within the naval base of Kolberg on the Baltic coast, Soviet and Russians punched farther into a maze of fortified buildings, Moscow said.

Navigator Sacrifices Own Life After Sub Shoots Plane Down

London, March 14 — (CP) — A 27-year-old R.C.A.F. navigator, described by a fellow airman as "about the biggest hero that ever lived," has been posthumously awarded the George Cross for his life-saving action and the sacrifice of his own life after an attack on a Coastal Command plane down into the North Atlantic.

The announcement today changed to struggle through the hatch and into the sea.

Bulley and Gray helped the injured skipper of the plane into the inflated dinghy. Then they found Ford thrashing in the water, unable to swim with a broken arm, and also put him in the dinghy, though it is not known how they did it.

Through the night Bulley and Gray, the latter badly-injured with a broken leg, kept Ford's head up to the side of the dinghy.

"It was a hell of a night," Bulley said. "When dawn finally broke Gray showed no sign of life. We tried to revive him and immediately realized he was dead. There was nothing we could do but let him loose from the dinghy."

Late that day planes from the Wellington's own squadron sighted them and flashed a reassuring message. Help was on the way. Not long after two Sunderland flying boats neared over, one of them landing and picking up the three survivors.

Commenting on Gray's courage, Bulley said the navigator gave up his place in the inflated dinghy to those of the crew he felt were more seriously injured. "Gray's self-sacrifice was just about the biggest hero that ever lived."

American Planes Strike Targets In French Indo-China

London, March 14—(CP)—U. S. 14th Air Force fighters based in China have hit targets in the Langson area of French Indo-China, where continued fighting was reported between French troops and French troops.

The American planes attacked a Japanese Headquarters Garrison and storage area in Langson and a railway bridge yesterday, it was announced at Chungking.

The Berlin radio reported Tokyo dispatches which asserted Japanese forces had killed more than 1,000 French troops and captured 2,500 in Northern Indo-China, and seized 54 provincial capitals and other military supplies.

FIREMEN RESCUE DOGS FROM RIVER ICE

Again assuming the humanitarian role which frequently is asked of them, members of the Trenton fire department this morning rescued two black spaniels from becoming ice in the Moira south of the Lower bridge. The two dogs had been playing along the retaining wall opposite Corbett and Hall and made their way down to the river by way of snow piles dumped over the wall during the winter by Public Works employees when clearing the streets.

The predicament in which the puppies found themselves was not appreciated by the dogs until after a half-hour's play on the ice when they found they were unable to make their way back to terra firma. With the arrival of firemen one puppy submitted meekly and was rewarded by liberation but the other made for the hazy and had to be assisted his freedom the hard way—by swimming back to the bank the while.

Charwise Fire department stories have been quiet this week, only two calls summoning fire alarms being answered.

Buys Teething Rings For Use on Harness

Shoppers in a downtown department store raised furious eyes at the sudden, piercing cry this morning, who carefully selected and purchased two dozen teething rings.

The saleslady, with difficulty of her sex, remarked upon the possible use of the farmer's teething and suggested that the offspring of the purchaser was the envy of select chewing habits.

The farmer walked up in surprise. Then he smiled. "Why, I'm not even married".

"Oh!" exclaimed the startled young woman, "then why do you want teething rings?"

"Oh, these things", grinned the farmer, apparently enjoying the situation, "I'm buying these for horse rings for my harness. We can't get steel ones for love or money".

A stern view of the U.S.S. Midway; 45,000-ton aircraft carrier, by far the largest carrier in the world, ready for launching at the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. in Newport, Va. The Midway will carry more than 80 planes, which may be twin-motored.

RHINE

The Germans were pecking away with the artillery today. The biggest yet reported was only 260 men counted—they had neither stopped Americans in mounted and nothing like a full-force counter-attack in position.

Although Hommel itself was clear-ed, Allied Supreme Headquarters said fighting still was going on in the river basin suburbs along the road north of the city.

American planes kept the Ruhr-Rhineland battle under bombing and strafing attacks and flew day and night, giant four-motor bridge-head where 80 German planes, mostly jet jets, have been shot down through yesterday. A handful tried again last night. Ten enemy craft were downed in the action.

Ground guns were throwing up heavy barrages which have downed 85 and possibly 105 of the 324 planes the Luftwaffe has sighted above the east Rhine salient.

The 1st and 3rd armies between them had carved out the Rhine bridge-hot which a week ago embraced 3,000 square miles of Germany and six or seven under-strength divisions of the German 7th Army.

The 1st Army captured 1,263 prisoners yesterday, bringing its campaign total since crossing the Roer Feb. 23 to 37,671. Patton's 3rd Army, attacking along since Jan. 30, has seized 21,226. The 1st Canadian and U. S. 9th armies in the north took 30,477 in their drive southward to the Rhine through and behind the Siegfried Line.

That total of 151,436 Germans, plus perhaps an equal number killed or seriously wounded showed that Gen. Eisenhower had achieved a large degree of success in his avowed objective of destroying German armies west of the Rhine. Those who escaped lost much of their heavy equipment, and their rest and reorganization which they hardly had time to attain with the Allies on or across the Rhine for 160 miles from Cobleno to Holland.

The 3rd Army bridge-head outflanked the Saar district by its drive to the Rhine at Coblenz. They were tightening their grip, by the way drive south of the Moselle. The value of the Saar has been largely lost to Germany because it depended for its steel on the iron ore of Lorraine, and because Allied bombing of the Reich's railroads and dra[illegible] canals [illegible]

Most of t[illegible]ons which the 3rd Army captured were east and northeast of Bearsoury. Eleven counter-attacks, in strength of 50 infantrymen or less with one or three self-propelled guns, were repulsed without loss of ground.

The area included Frechenrechbach, Bonnrath, Obersath, Lemorchbach, Dreveres, Merscheid, Hintsenburg and Hentern, all between Trier and the area east of Saarlautern.

The last towns on or near the Siegfried Line to be taken in the sector were Aldegung, Eller, Bremm and Lind Bertrich. Bremm and Wedern, both 21 miles northeast of Trier and on the Moselle, were entered yesterday.

Clear skies prevailed o[illegible] the whole western front for the first time in several days and gave storm-of-up Allied air might the go sign again.

The Reuters dispatch said Marshal Gregory Zhukov's 1st White Russian army crossed a main highway main line on an 18-mile Oder front between suburbs of Kustrin and the threatened Frankfurt. Moscow still maintained official silence on this battle front.

German broadcasts said the front was ablaze for 118 miles from Stettin south to Guben and Forst, the Nazis' new positions in Marshal Ivan Konev's First Ukrainian front southeast of Berlin.

Fighting

"Bitter fighting is raging all along this front for Stettin, Frankfurt, Guben, and Forst, as well as from bridgeheads on the Oder aiming for the most attractive target of all—Berlin," said a Transocean broadcast.

The East Prussian assault was opened early Tuesday with a heavy artillery barrage, the German broadcast said, with separate Red Army columns driving forward on either side of Zinten, 20 miles south of Koenigsberg.

An earlier dispatch from Moscow gave some support to the German report. It said Russians were signs the Battle of Koenigsberg was flaring up with new vigor.

Col. Ernst Von Hammer, Nazi commentator, declared that "enormous" local Russian thrusts provided a tip-off that a major assault was impending in East Prussia.

Westward at the tip of the Polish Corridor, fanatic forces there were battering Gdynia from three sides as the German foothold on the Bay of Danzig steadily dwindled.

Starvation and Primitive Living Accommodations Lot of Internees In Manila Camp Says Rotary Speaker

When Tojo, Yankee-hating premier of the then mighty Japan, ordered Filipinos to wave flags of the Rising Sun and "Welcome the Conquerors", during his triumphal march through Manila, he little dreamed that the loyal natives, instead seething in their hearts, shouted two words in the Filipino language that in English meant "Japan Finish", for that is what happened and had the wily Tojo "got wise" many natives would have been shot and other reprisals made.

The Filipinos were intensely anti-Japanese and at times made no effort to conceal this feeling. For instance there was the case of the Filipino farmer whose dairy cattle had been confiscated by the invaders to provide milk for the sick, for internees, and when told that he could expect no pay for them, replied that he had expected that, but he could suspect no pay for them, and that the Japanese were a race of exploiters.

Last Fifty Pounds

The above is part of a dramatic story told of the experiences of Rotarian Jack Morris, one of the other nationalities who were interned in Santo Tomas concentration camp at Manila for three years and a month, by Rev. H. W. Harris, Belle-Ewen missionary and now a RAF.C.A.F. chaplain, when he was touring Canada while awaiting repatriation to England.

Speaking to the Rotary Club here, Dr. Rumse, who lost fifty pounds during his internment, declared that the Nipponese fiend, told of the hardships, starvation and brutality that the women and children who existed were conditions that beggar description.

Prior to the arrival of the Japanese, Dr. Rumse said, residents of the city lived in a continuous round of fun. The cabarets opened at night was the pilot lights in stoves and fires were allowed to blaze "colliphane." It was impossible to see to eat, sew, or play games and all one could do was sit and listen to the radio.

Planes Caught on Ground.

"Manila had two antiquated antiaircraft guns, and a few obsolete planes," Dr. Rumse said. "Within a few days the Japs bombers appeared and destroyed all of them. Over twenty were destroyed on the ground."

"Every night", he said, "the radio promised us the help that did not come, until four years later." Our disappointment was the greater when then if they told us they could not spend us the news.

Manila was declared an open city by the Japanese conceded it quietly. There was no fight for the fortifications and the invaders were under guard. Therefore the enemy set surprise the Japanese got was the fact that they were not welcomed by the Filipinos, who were intensely loyal to the Americans.

Santo Tomas had twenty-five acres of land surrounding it and were provided recreational space as well as garden plots for the 2,300 persons interned there. In addition there were 600 shanties erected to aid the housing conditions.

Limited Living Space.

In the main building were 60 rooms each of which was supposed to accommodate 8 persons. In another building called the annex, were 400 rooms and the city was filled.

"When we went there first there was absolutely nothing for us. There were no beds, no mosquito netting, and the first night we slept on the concrete floor. We were not allowed to eat in the rooms for a single crumb of food would attract hundreds of voracious ants. The flies were another pest and a menace got to the point where we strived people to fly swatters and in the largest number of flies they had killed.

"Personal life was not permitted," the speaker said. Men and women were segregated. There were six bathrooms in the building each of which had a single shower, sufficient date 800 people. In the bathrooms were one wash basin and two toilets. Santo Tomas concentration camp was finally liberated by our son, Mr. William Dextrator, on whom he made his home.

BELCH — In memory of George Belch, who passed away March 14th., 1941.

I used to think that nights were long
And sometimes very blue,
Before my heart awoke to love
And happiness with you.
I used to dread each lonely day
Before you shared its scenes,
But, oh, my dear, with you away
I've learned what "lonely" means.

all other things decay,
Our love for him will still keep

IN MEMORIAM

BELCH — In memory of George Belch, who passed away March 14th., 1941.

I used to think that nights were long
And sometimes very blue,
Before my heart awoke to love
And happiness with you.
I used to dread each lonely day
Before you shared its scenes,
But, oh, my dear, with you away
I've learned what "lonely" means.
—Ever remembered by grandaughter Marjorie, Charlie and family.

BELCH — In loving memory of our dear father, George Belch, who departed this life March 14, 1943.

We often sit and think of him
When we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend that grief can call its own.
Like by on the withered oak when
all other things decay,
Our love for him will still keep green and never fade away.
—Ever remembered by Helen and Edna.

STORM FORCES

remnants of the German army, Volkssturm and Navy faced ultimate destruction.

There were some signs that the Russian Komitadjis were entered a relative lull at the end of the week, presaging the start of new vigor. Soviet infantry has been reinforced in the eastern suburbs of Danzig and have also increased their fire on the burning inner city.

Fighting in the mountainous south-western Hungary failed to slacken, although in the past six days, the Russians and Tito's army have killed out more than 400 enemy tanks and inflicted heavy casualties.

The War Today—
Eternal Vigilance To Guard Peace Against Possible Secret Weapons

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Paradoxical though it seems, it's Hitler who has provided us with one of the most important clues to the peace which the impending world security conference in San Francisco will try to establish.

If we've learned anything worth while from the Hun (with his Blitzkrieg, flying bombs and other savage innovations) it is that peace will depend heavily on external vigilance against "secret weapons." These won't necessarily be things we have no knowledge of, but developments by one country of ideas which are possessed by all.

Watch against "Secret Weapons".

What we've got to watch out for is a "secret weapon" which may permit even a weak aggressor to achieve a lightning knockout.

Some of the basic ideas will be military, but most of them will be non-military knowledge which can be developed for purposes of war. The airplane is a fair example. Essentially a machine of peace it is constantly being readapted to make fearsome weapons. The radio is another.

Then there is the flying-bomb and the more recent rocket-bomb which the Germans have used so effectively against England. Britain, the United States and other major countries knew all about the basic principles of these weapons. The point is that nobody took the trouble to develop them fully for war purposes except the Germans, and they didn't bring them into play until they got jammed into a corner through the crippling of their air force.

Hitler's Blitzkrieg.

No longer being able to bomb their enemies, the Germans turned to bombs which would do their own flying. Necessity is mighty often as the mother of invention, and it's important to remember this in our peace plans.

Another of Hitler's "secret weapons" was the blitzkrieg. This of course was purely military and it was the development of ideas which were in the hands of all the military experts of the world.

The Nazi Dictator's sweeping successes at the outset of his conquest of Europe were mainly due to the blitzkrieg tactics, which utterly confused his enemies. Today the surprise element of the blitzkrieg is dead. But the blitz served a terrible purpose.

Germany and Japan to be Watched.

How are the peace-minded powers to safeguard themselves against attack with "secret weapons," which may be powerful enough to win a war with one quick, terrific blow? There are two countries against which we must guard—Germany and Japan. They are the dangerous aggressors. Mussolini led his people into attacking helpless countries, but it hardly can be considered that Italians as a whole are a warlike folk.

The thing to do when we are going to knock out Germany and Japan, how can they do further harm? It's probable because we are going to render these aggressors impotent militarily that we must provide against the development of secret weapons. This is especially true of the Germans, who rank high in science and are traditionally different in the development of ideas. Because they will have no military machine with which to wage further war, they're likely to turn their minds to the development of a secret weapon or weapons to obtain revenge. In fact it's a safe bet they will.

How to Guard Against Them.

In order to guard against this, as I see it, the World Security Organization must insure—by detective methods if necessary—that all disarmed enemy countries, or whatever nature, in Germany and Japan are known at once to the United Nations. This applies not only to military but to ordinary developments, be they biological, chemical, or what will you. The discovery of a new gas or a quick method of spreading a plague might seem dealt to some innocuous looking country.

Prime Minister Given Pledge Of Support

London, March 14. (CP)—Britain's Conservative Party, meeting in annual conference, gave Prime Minister Churchill a firm pledge of support today and a forecast by Lord Woolton that he would be asked to lead the Party in general election campaign.

Mr. Churchill, as party leader, will address the conference tomorrow, probably dealing chiefly with problems at home such as reconstruction, housing post-war business and trade with the Commonwealth.

More than 2,000 delegates adopted a motion by R. A. Butler, Education Minister and new chairman of the Conservative Council, commending Mr. Churchill for "magnificent leadership" and renewing party support of the war effort "for a complete overthrow of the tyrannical enemies of freedom both in Europe and Asia."

As keynote speaker, Mr. Butler implied that the Conservatives were counting upon Mr. Churchill to carry party business over into peace and over Germany makes possible British first priority on labor, skilled or otherwise, in Germany and Japan are known at once to the United Nations. This applies not only to military but to ordinary developments, be they biological, chemical, or what will you. The discovery of a new gas or a quick method of spreading a plague might seem dealt to some innocuous looking country.

"We look to the master builder and offer him our help in this latest and greatest work—our national reconstruction".

Social Disease Subject of Talk

"The greatest cause of disharmony in sickness and venereal disease is the greatest cause of disharmony", said Dr. Gordon Bates, Toronto, director of the Health Service League of Canada, in speaking to the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday. Dr. Bates has given a great deal of time and ability to this subject and his address on the subject was of vital interest to all who were introduced by Dr. O. S. Cronk and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Robert Pringle, Dr. Bates stated that 90 per cent of crippling was preventable and much of it was caused by people having social diseases without their knowledge. "Before 1912", said Dr. Bates, "no one would talk of this plague in public but a group of health doctors took a survey and submitted a report to the British government and it showed that ten per cent of the population of Britain at that time was suffering from syphilis". He recounted stories of deaths and crippling children from the world that later in life became absolute cripples yet the parents were unaware of the presence of the social disease. He showed that syphilis was passed on from one generation to another and that 80 per cent of the blindness is caused from this scourge.

He requested the service clubs of Canada to put on a campaign that governments will enact legislation requiring pre-marital inspection and organize educational centres and also centres for the treatment of this disease. He showed that the disease was primarily that of youth and periodical examination of the youth of this country would eliminate the scourge and also probably a great deal of the so-called malingering would be avoided. He also urged the service clubs to work among the boys and girls and give them a liberal education on health. The luncheon was closed by St. Patrick's Day, the community singing led by Harold Carruthers consisted of popular Irish airs and Ted Schwab, chosen as the best dressed man on hand and also present at the meeting. Anthony Cekova collected the fines and Bill Navin presided at the piano.

Britain's Plans Swing Forward

By JOHN A. PARRIS, JR.
(AP Staff Writer)

London, March 14.—(AP)— Britain plans to retain a position as one of the world's leading economic powers surged forward today as government experts pushed a program of trade agreements with European countries.

Facts already have been concluded with Sweden and Switzerland. Important talks are under way with Czechoslovakia, reported. Conversations also are understood to be in the preliminary stage with countries freed of German domination or in the process of liberation.

As a further step, Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Secretary Eden are expected to make an attempt to announce to represent-atives of the British Commonwealth when they meet early in April for a pre-San Francisco conference, that they intend to expand Britain's trade policy of Empire preference.

Specific financial arrangements with other countries are part of the program.

115 Caves on Iwo Jima Sealed Off

Guam, March 14—(AP)—Three United States Marine divisions on Iwo Jima slugged it out with remaining Japanese today after sealing two nearby rocks and sealing off numerous caves.

Enemy troops occupying caves and pill-boxes on rugged Kitano Point—the northern tip of the island—continued resisting stubbornly. They were fighting with small arms, machine-guns and mortar fire, a communique issued by Fleet Headquarters here said.

The rocks, designated in the communique as Kama and Kangokuu, were occupied without opposition. They were deserted by the Japanese, who previously had used them as mortar positions. Kama is 1,000 yards off Iwo's west coastal side and Kangoku 2,700 yards off the northwest coast.

Marines yesterday sealed off 114 caves, which the Japanese had used as underground strongholds.

You've often watched the teller stamp your cheque. Every day, in every branch of every bank in Canada, cheques are being scrutinized, stamped and recorded. During the war years, this daily flow of cheques through your bank has swollen to a torrent. Deposit accounts are more numerous and active than ever before. This increase reflects the tremendous activity of Canadian life and business. Production, purchases and payrolls have all reached record levels.

In addition, three-quarters of a million men and women in the armed services must get their pay, and their dependents receive allowances regularly.

The handling of this wartime volume of cheques is quite apart from numerous special services which the banks have undertaken—the delivery of millions of Victory Bonds and the sale of countless War Savings Certificates; ration coupon banking; subsidy payments to producers; foreign exchange operations.

Yet all this extra work has been carried out at a time when new help has had to be trained to take the place of more than 8,500 bank workers now in uniform.

Conflicting System Of Dating Documents Brings House Query

London, March 14 — (CP)—Maj. Randolph Churchill, Member of Parliament and son of Britain's Prime Minister, has forwarded from the Central Mediterranean a question to be put to his father next Tuesday in the House of Commons.

Maj. Churchill, in hospital for a minor operation, requested Lord Hichingbrooke to ask the Prime Minister:

"Whether he is aware of the many conflicting systems by which letters and documents are dated in this country; whether he realizes the figures 1.10.46, which to the English man mean Oct. 1, 1946, indicate to an American Jan. 10, 1946; and if he will instruct all government departments to adopt forthwith the system current in the British Army which avoids all confusion by putting the first day of the month in figures unblemished by any suffix, second the month in letters and last the year."

Soviet News Agency Gives Denial to Report

Moscow, March 14—(AP)—The Soviet News Agency Tass issued an official denial today of a Rome report that the Soviet Government and the Vatican were negotiating for an accord.

(The Vatican Press office issued a similar denial Sunday.)

"Recently the Rome bulletin Servizio Informazioni published a report that, with the collaboration of the United States and with a support of Great Britain, negotiations were alleged to be in progress between the Soviet Union and the Vatican for the purpose of concluding an agreement," Tass said. "Tass is authorized to state that the report is without foundation."

Montgomery Method

At Caen, in the early days of liberation, Field Marshal Montgomery's 21st Army Group, consisting of the Canadian First and British Second armies, was the pivot which drew to itself the bulk of the German armor; thus facilitating the American break-through on the right at Avranches, says United Kingdom Information.

Something rather like this has been happening on the Rhine front.

When the German First Army started its drive between the Maas and the Rhine, the Germans breached the Roer dams in front of the American forces. They hoped thereby not only to hold up the Americans but also to make Montgomery afraid to persist in the drive in the Maas area, for fear that his forces would get out of step with the Americans.

But Montgomery, characteristically, carried out the military principle of "maintenance of objective," just as he had done at Caen. He continued the drive, and the Germans, confident that the Roer floods were held up by the flood, felt free to send nine more divisions to slow up the Canadians. This is just what Montgomery wanted. As soon as the flood subsided, the Army Group struck, in which the 9th present operations is under Field Marshal Montgomery) made a very successful night crossing of the Roer against a defence greatly weakened by the withdrawal of the German troops to hold the northern part of the line.

The pressure to the north, plus the pressure of General Patton's drive to the south, also forces Germans in the Ninth American First Army area—so American troops were also soon on their way to Cologne.

The Remagen Bridge

When the Germans failed to blow up a double track railway bridge at Remagen across the Rhine, they gave the United Nations an unexpectedly easy access to the eastern bank of the river. What must be the sense of surprise and frenzy of the German command when they found themselves coming by men of the race that set itself up as the only efficient people on earth can be left to the imagination. It was one of the happiest chances many human years. It found brave Americans ready to take immediate advantage of the entrance to the German-held east side of the waterway.

The Allied armies are on the march and will not be halted. They have just about come to the climax of victory. The bridge over the Rhine has speeded up the Allied advance but even without it though there might have been delay in securing bridgeheads on the east bank of the river, such bridgeheads would have been won anyway. The Germans could not have prevented the Allies from crossing.

This bridgehead so quickly secured proves the disorganized condition of the Germans.

Cathedral Stands at Cologne

The Cathedral at Cologne stands amid the ruins of the ancient city which dates back to the first century of the Christian era when a Roman city was built there and given the name "Colonia," from which comes the French name Cologne as well as the German name Koeln.

The majestic structure bears a few marks of damage in the struggle for the city and the Allied fighting bombers and bombers had been instructed to spare the sacred building. They did so. Whatever damage was caused was due to splinters or fragments of shells falling in a very congested area in which were many war targets.

The wonder is that in the intensity of the struggle the church escaped. It indicates the care Allied airmen took to avoid it.

Allied goodwill spared the structure and saw that every precaution was taken. The Allies went to war to crush tyranny and aggression and the military power of the enemies of world peace. The United Nations respect monuments, memorials and sanctuaries but the Germans are otherwise. They, for instance, in their air raids on London in 1940 looked upon the destruction of sanctuaries as accomplishment of their anti-civilization attitude. Wherever the Germans could strike at civilization they have directed their fire and missiles. That is not to be wondered at in view of their vicious and callous attitude on every issue.

Frantic Appeals by Nazis

Driven to desperate straits by the series of Allied victories which are culminating in a huge pincer movement to cluster Germany in two and to unite the East and West Allies in the very heart of Germany, Hitler and Goebbels are offering pale and frantic hopes that something may turn up to stem the just collapse of Nazidom which declared that the Allies are "drunk by their orgy of victory" and planned to destroy the German nation and he "told the Germans to fight as fanatics until the Allies "get tired and will yet be broken."

The Allies are not going to grow tired to help Hitler and let Nazism escape and they are not going to allow Germany to perish peacefully as she did in 1918. Germany must surrender unconditionally.

Hitler speaks of wearing down the Allies though all the evidence points to the utter overthrow of Nazi and Prussianized Germany.

Uttering a forlorn hope the Fuehrer claimed that "even if fate has turned against us now, there can be no doubt that we will overcome" and he called on the Huns to defy all dangers with iron determination and to do everything to bring about a turn for the better.

Hitler's hope seems to be for anything that will delay events so as to allow the Nazi leaders a little more respite before they are called to their account. Hitler's cry is ops of self. He hopes the Germans will save him and he orders them to fight to the last—that is—to save the Nazi gang, himself included.

Goebbels with more imagination than displayed by his master, made a quiet comparison saying the present stage of the Allied successes is exceeding its climax and he said it would lead to a furioso in its final phase, then end suddenly and rashly, like a storm. That would give Germany the final the chance to snatch victory in the final moment of the crisis. Neglecting to say that Hitler planned the war for years, Goebbels claimed that Germany at the moment it's due with the force of a hurricane and usually ends the same way, quite suddenly after its wildest eruption."

No argument of the Nazi leaders can convince the outside world that the argument for the power of the United Nations is the convincing fact and so is their complete co-ordination.

The Germans see their country being overrun by Allied armies, their skies dark with the winged messengers of the world's vengeance flying at will over the broken borders of the Reich which are now under the fire of British, American, Canadian and Russian soldiery. They cannot be convinced that Hitler and Goebbels are messengers of real hope. The Huns with the credibility gone from the guerillas are not by conviction for they cannot think that the frantic appeals and arguments of these tottering leaders can possibly be true. The course of the war in the past year proves the Allied German power and the growing strength of Allied forces and offensives, which can mean one thing—victory for Allied arms.

Benito Mussolini, "guest" of Hitler and of Germany is probably doing some worrying these days, because of his words and deeds when he was Il Duce of Italy, if he is in possession of the German version of "Jap-prang" but as in Africa we always used to say "Avia" instead of "ersatz," as we were taught in school.

Further they carry it into multi-syllables, such as saying "we're going to Jay-pan-can-land tomorrow."

Another slang word over here is "Hay," which undoubtedly means a big-shot. For example:

Every afternoon a soldier brings about 36 bales of alfalfa to the enlisted men, into our hut for the officers to smoke. The officers over in this hut have a rule of doing the dishes right after the meal is over with. They take about six apiece, and they're all through in a few minutes.

The boy who brings the bales around is a Spaniard—PVT. Cristavo Gonsales, of (3630 Avenue K) Galveston, Texas. He talks with an accent, and is quite a character. The flies enjoy kidding back and forth with him.

When Gonsales came back for letters, they were all gone, but apparently the other huts don't do so well by him and he's still there. So far as he left he turned at the door and said to the officers:

"You guys are all right. If I was a gear I'd promote you all."

I've been amazed at the number of men flying these Tokyo missions in the 8th who have already served one hour of combat duty in the European theatre.

Of the ten men in our hut two have finished tours, even though they're very young.

Major William Clark, of Bayhead, N.J., flew his 50 missions out of Tunisia. Capt. Ed Cain, of Walker Kelly, of Manayunk, Pa., in fact Captain Kelly and I were shot down in Africa and Algeria on the edge of the Sahara Desert just one half their days apart.

The way it is now, they are just flying in the dark, so to speak. There's just going on and on until Pearl Harbor, with nothing else to shoot for.

Of course it's probably too early yet, and the war on both sides of the world too desperate, to set up a point mission for wherupon a 25-30 flier goes home for good.

They're going to have to go to Tokyo and Berlin, and some how for more missions a couple of times apiece before they finally go home. That no rest-camp goal has yet been set anywhere. It has to come from Washington, and Washington, is slow about it.

It's no good to create a rest camp out here. The boys would just sit around and hate you, and it's no go to a rest camp out here. What they need is a long, something-to-look-far away-lights and girls and dancing-partners and music, things and swirly. And somebody better hurry.

Combination of 'Jap' and 'Ape' Is Marines' Name for the Enemy

By HENRY FYLE

In the Marianas Islands (delayed)—Over here the Marines have an expressive, all-in-one term for Japs. They call them "Japes," which is a combination of "Jap" and "ape."

Now the fliers are taking it up and there are various versions of it. I notice a lot of people unconsciously putting emphasis on "Jay-pan," just as in Africa we always used to say "Avia" instead of "ersatz," as we were taught in school.

Further they carry it into multi-syllables, such as saying "we're going to Jay-pan-can-land tomorrow."

Disorganized Japs Chased Into Hills On Mindanao Is.

Manila, March 14—(AP)—Resistance was stiffening on South-western Mindanao, Allied headquarters in Manila announced but quarters reported today, as tank-packed troops of Lt. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger's U.S. 8th Army organized Japanese defenders into the mountains north of captured Zamboanga.

On Leyte, meantime, mechanized columns drove down from the north into the vast area south of Manila, sending Japs who turned east into the airdrome, while other troops east of the capital seized the southern end of the strong Shimbu line.

At least eight villages besides Zamboanga were captured in the first 48 hours of the Mindanao invasion. Two airfields were taken, one of them a bomber field just 315 miles from Borneo.

On Leyte the 11th airborne division took the prison camp town of Los Banos, near the southern shore of Laguna De Bay, and the town of Santa Teresa, on the main rail and highway artery into the southern part of the island.

The Allied air forces bombed a steam sized Batangas, on Batangas Bay, and Lucena, a railway town.

Fighter-bombers caused heavy explosions in the Takao Hydro-Electric plant on Formosa's northern Formosa and started large fires in railway installations there.

Heavy bombers hit Borneo with 'fifties and 'sixties, destroying 11 fuel storage tanks at the Miri petroleum Refinery. Large fires were started at four north Borneo airfields.

TALKS PROMISE

Laughed Heartily at Parries.

He laughed heartily at the President's parries when questions by Mrs. Roosevelt persisted questions he did not wish to answer.

The President was questioned on the long-standing Canadian-American plan for a joint St. Lawrence River power and navigation project, and on the visit of Canada's cabinet to confer with the Prime Minister.

But, he said, he did not think he held similar views on the value of that project, and it was not being projected, but that it was being developed, he said.

It was stated the President about a current report that the Prime Minister may be asked to preside over the San Francisco conference, the Conference of Nations.

This will be for the conference itself to decide when the delegations from some 44 United Nations meet on April 25 but the Prime Minister has been consulted as to the natural choice if the United States, as host country, should be asked to preside.

As concrete examples of Canadian-American friendship Mr. Roosevelt referred to the Ogdensburg conference which led to the permanent joint defence committee in 1940, and the Hyde Park declaration shortly after, which provided for heavy American purchases in Canada, enabling the Dominion to acquire critically needed American exchange.

Mr. King is expected to make a report on the conference with the President to parliament, which meets next Monday.

Mr. King spent yesterday morning with the Canadian Ambassador, Dr. Pierre Dupuy, in the Prime Minister House at three o'clock in the afternoon.

ASKS PRICE CEILING ON ICE CREAM

Washington, March 14 (AP)—Chester Bowles, head of the Office of Price Administration, asked Congress today to clamp a ceiling price ceiling on admissions to motion picture shows, athletic events and "all other amusement activities" to prevent any rise in price control so far, he said, because OPA's present powers were no covered by the statutory definition of a commodity.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

FROM A TO D AND D TO A

When old friends meet after a long separation they do not celebrate by drinking some colored ingredient. There is no sense in such nonsense in a lusty chorus the stimulating charms of alcoholism. Men do not brag of the amount of anything they can take without going around the room or stupor ously slipping under the table.

But I digress. That is not my sarcasm. I quote that paragraph from an article by Abraham Myerson, M.D., professor of psychiatry in Harvard Medical School, published in the February Survey Graphic, under the title "Heads to Alcoholism." I commend the article to every reader who likes an "occasional" drink; every occasional drinker who thinks he or she can take it or let it alone and every steady drinker who still feels an occasional qualm about frequent indulgence.

One man writes:

I have acquired the (I. Brady, dare not mention the name of the nostrum here—but I dare say it is an acetanilid mixture) habit. I go without it for a week while I get terrible head pains—real or imagined. Can you recommend a help you can give me in breaking this habit. I started using the stuff after heavy drinking Now I sometimes go for a month or more without a drink. I like a drink, my limit is two or three highballs, and I do not feel the need for (the nostrum). I am unable to control business calls.

That lovable old character Uncle Sam who sanctions, fosters and finances the liquor traffic assumes the business of selling the nostrum indiscriminately to the consuming public should be responsible now for your problem in a sanitarium and for the support of your family while you are away from your job or business. Certainly the old grafter makes enough on the liquor traffic to pay the expense of manufacturer for the privilege of poisoning people who are childish enough to believe that the stuff is harmless or at least not dangerous to take. Government ownership would discriminate safe.

But the help I can suggest for you, brother, is that you get in touch with an Alcoholics Anonymous group in your community (find the address in telephone directory, maybe in a classified column) and attend their meetings. You will find these friendly and understanding—they have all had experience with drinking.

From your letter it is impossible to judge whether you're a case of switching from Alcohol to Drug or dope or from Dope to Alcohol. But you know the dangers of accidental since can and does destroy the health of the frequent or habitual user and bring serious breakdown to the occasional drinker at his present high death. Unfortunately public welfare the sensible control legal death in such a case is generally concealed under the plausible name of "heart failure."

Whether or not you follow my advice as to going to A. A., I do hope you will at least give yourself a break—undergo a careful examination by your physician to determine how much damage the accumulated drug has done your heart, your blood and your nerves or your liver and then let the doctor map do what he can to correct the deficiencies he finds.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED

By GEORGE W. STIMPSON

PITTSBURGH OR PITTSBURG

The name of the second largest city in Pennsylvania is one of the most frequently misspelled place names in America.

It is correctly spelled "Pittsburgh," not "Pittsburg."

In 1907 the U. S. Geographical Board, the highest authority in this city on such matters, was asked by the Post Office Department to rule on the correct spelling of the name and it decided in favor of "Pittsburg."

This decision met with considerable opposition from Pittsburgh and in response to petitions from local officials and numerous citizens, the U. S. Geographic Board reconsidered the case and in 1911 decided in favor of "Pittsburgh."

The French had called the site Fort Duquesne. In 1758, during the French and Indian war, it was taken by the British under Gen. John Forbes and a village grew up around a cluster of traders' and soldiers' huts. The settlement at first was named after William Pitt, then Prime Minister of England.

On November 26, 1758, Gen. Forbes reported to Lieut. Gov. William Denny of Pennsylvania, stating his letter from Duquesne, he now Pitts-burg." The next day he wrote Gen. Stanwix and had the freedom of giving your name to your fort. Gen. Stanwix I hope is now in some measure the being actuated by your spirit than new makes me master of the fort."

In the fall of 1759 Gen. John Forbes died and the name Pittsburgh and named the place "Fort Pitt." By 1764 the name Fort Pitt came as the title point in 1769 and called it Pittsburgh. Gen. Forbes' spelling to suit lots in 1816, George Washington, who visited the area, in 1770, referred to it as the "Town at Fort Pitt."

In 1784 it was incorporated as the "Borough of Pittsburgh," and Pittsburgh" and "Fort Pitt." and then adopted. It was incorporated as a city in 1816, and in the law it John Forbes' spelling of the name, seal, which is still used, it is called "The City of Pittsburgh."

There are places with post offices named "Pittsburg" in at least nine States.

Ontario House in London Under Attack by Members In Debate on Throne Speech

C. H. Millard Says House Used for Conservative Propaganda

Toronto, March 14 — (CP)—C. H. Millard (OCF — York West), one of three speakers in the first night of sitting of the Ontario Legislature last night, combined an attack on Ontario House in London with an expression of regret that "a Canadian public man should give a wrong impression" of the reception accorded defence troops by active service troops overseas.

Recently returned from the World Labor Conference in London, Mr. Millard said he saw 4,000 reinforcement troops overseas and only one took the stand that he wasn't going active.

"These reinforcements are accepted by other soldiers as buddies and labourers living to get the job done. It is a disservice for public men to raise the reinforcement issue.

Generally Good Service

Of Ontario House, he opened a year ago, he said it performs generally good service. Ontario has no Dominion newspaper, but questioned literature available there.

Distribution of publications of the Ontario Conservative Association through the House was "taking undue advantages of the facilities" the House provides for the use of party propaganda and literature encouraged agitation by this privilege as if it were a separate entity was questioned.

Thomas Duff (L — Bruce) asked government encouragement of production factories for farm products in Bruce County and urged reduction of Hydro costs to farmers in that area.

Nelson Allen (Ind. Labor — East Northumberland) member of the Provincial Labor code to include the principles of Union Security.

Calls for Coalition

A call to all opposition groups to join hands to defeat the Progressive Conservative administration and form a coalition government was made during the afternoon session by T. L. Kennedy (CCF — Greystone Leader, speaking in Throne Speech.

In the face of unanimous non-confidence in its policies on the part of the 93 non-government members the "only honorable course" for the administration is to resign, Mr. MacLeod said. Both the C.C.F. and Liberals had moved amendments to the Throne Speech debate amounting to lack of confidence motions, and his party concurred in this attitude.

Defeat of the government need not occasion an election, Mr. MacLeod said, because there is the basis for can alternative government which would permit the Legislature to serve out its time.

14-Point Program Outlined

He advanced a 14-point program which the proposed coalition government should follow:—

(1) Radical unity for the final victory over the enemy, the avoidance of party politics or policy that would arouse racial, religious or sectional controversy.

(2) The fullest use of the powers of the province, within the existing constitution, to prepare Ontario for full employment after the war, and the utmost co-operation with the Dominion Department of, Reconstruction in all its plans to achieve this end.

(3) The establishment of a federal Ontario reconstruction committee representative of government, management and labor to direct the re-employment of veterans and war workers, with power to act to prevent any decline of industrial production as war contracts cease.

(4) The application of the 5-hour day, 5-day week without reduction of pay, to all industry where it is not a mandatory two-week for all employees.

(5) Security of tenure for Ontario farm families, through floor prices, subsidies and assistance to co-operative; a government plan to check the growth of landlordism and tenancy in Ontario agriculture.

(6) Immediate action in studying the commencement of large-scale public works such as the St. Lawrence seaway, reforestation, roads and hospitals, community centres and highways, as war production declines.

Post-war Taxation

(7) The adoption now by the Legislature of Ontario's plan for post-war taxation reform, to be proposed to the coming Dominion-Provincial Conference, and that it should be based on the broad principle that each social function such as family allowances must be Dominion-wide in character to be effective, and the province should now prepare to re-allocate certain taxing powers to municipal, school and planning and housing projects. The province should assume all relief costs borne by the municipalities and should set for the aim of relieving the municipalities of all the direct costs of education within the shortest period.

(8) The establishment of an Ontario Housing Commission as the Ontario Housing Act to organize a great re-housing and clearance slum and planning program, in co-operation with the Dominion, and to co-ordinate the activities of the municipalities.

$40 Monthly Pension

(9) The immediate increase of old-age pensions at the rate of $40 monthly.

(10) One hundred per cent. workmen's compensation;

(12) An Ontario Labor Relations Act to provide Union security and collective bargaining for all Ontario workers;

(13) Full support to the proposed Dominion health insurance scheme; the free hospitalization of maternity patients and similar health reforms pending the enactment of National Health Insurance.

(14) The establishment of a Department of Youth and Recreation to supervise the welfare of young people, to provide physical fitness and recreational facilities and to assist recreational leaders.

Dr. L. P. Tyrion, Health Minister following the Labor-Progressive chief in the Throne Speech debate, said the Health Department had undertaken a study of means to provide cash indemnities for illness among workers.

Dr. Virian Heard

The government also has made complete plans for implementation of a public health program, Dr. Virian said, and his department is studying hospitalization and diagnostic services and is setting up demonstration units to determine the best method of payment for services.

The Health Minister said a proposal advanced by C.C.F. national leader T. R. Jolliffe to test the results of three health centres was impracticable at this time. Mr. Jolliffe advocated that three areas be selected for demonstration of a program of socialized health services, the Hungarian plan of health insurance and the present system. The first two plans, said Dr. Virian, are in a nebulous state of development and the deficiencies of the present system are so well known that further study in a defined area would be a "waste of time."

Bills were introduced providing minor amendments to the Liquor Authority Control Act and the Workmen's Improvement Act, the first sponsored by Attorney-General Gordon Conant, provides that expenses of the L.A.C.B. be paid by the Liquor Control Board instead of by the Provincial Treasurer as at present. Highways Minister George Doucett brought in the second measure, which would authorize counties to appoint suburban roads commissioners.

Clash Briefly

Premier Drew and A. MacLeod clashed briefly in the Legislature when the former asked for dispute between Mr. MacLeod's statement regarding the reinforcement crisis last fall.

Mr. MacLeod said charges by Major Conn Smythe that the "trained Canadian troops were being sent into the line had been pronounced unfounded by Col. C. V. Ralston, then Defence Minister, after he severed Major Smythe's connection.

The Premier rose quickly on a point of privilege.

"I say, in addition to the leader of the Commonwealth group," he said, "that I object to statements made against one of Canada's finest soldiers, and sportsman, Col. Ralston's personal actions proved Major Smythe's statements."

The night's enthusiastic applause from the government benches and even from the galleries, whose occupants drew a warning from Mr. Speaker Stewart for the demonstration.

'We're Always So Grateful For Red Cross,' Says Serviceman

Mrs. Alex. Reddick, English Bride, Describes Rationing in Britain

What Red Cross Does At Front.

Trenton—An interesting paragraph from a letter written by a soldier in the service on the fighting front, to one of the local Red Cross workers was read, during the latter's regular monthly meeting and was greatly appreciated by those who heard it, part of it reading: "I thought you might be interested to know how Red Cross Work for us, individually. I have recently had new sox, woolen gloves, sox-foot sox, and a lovely muffler and I'll tell you how it works.

"Apparently the Red Cross have a good big supply depot conveniently situated to supply, say a whole front. A small unit, such as ours, is notified of a supply of comforts being available so we, individually, make known our needs. I wanted wool gloves and a muffler I put my name in for that, and when the comforts for the whole unit arrived I got what I had requested, and also a lovely pair of socks besides. (There was a pair of socks for every man in the unit.) Then I got a letter telling me frequently get hankies too.

"You can be sure we're always so grateful for our good Canadian Red Cross".

Three Fine Donations

Three very fine donations were received at Tuesday's meeting. Mrs. A. Meyers donated five pairs boys' trousers and a boys' coat, Mrs. F. Abbott, a large donation of thread, buttons and tape, while Mrs. Gilbert donated two lovely tatted doilies. The latter will be sold and brought $1.30, Mrs. E. Cunnell being the lucky winner.

Mrs. Reddick's Address.

Mrs. Alex. Reddick, an English bride, who has recently come to make her home in Trenton, gave a most interesting talk to Red Cross workers on Tuesday afternoon regarding the rationing in England.

"Each adult", Mrs. Reddick pointed out, "is allotted sixty coupons to last a year, with twenty extra for children. A long coat, she said, necessitated surrendering 16 coupons, while 14 were needed for a tweed costume, 11 for a wool dress, 5 for a silk dress and two for a pair of stockings. Each garment for any age child requires one or more coupons. Shoes, she stressed, were very heavily rationed, and coupons being needed for one pair men's shoes, 7 for women's, and from one up.

Regarding food Mrs. Reddick said each adult is allowed two ounces of butter, four of margarine and two of other fats per week, also the one-half pound of sugar. Tinned meats are rationed by point system with so many points being allowed for each product. Fish is not rationed but one must line up for several hours in order to obtain this product. Mrs. Reddick spoke of lining up for one-half pound of tomatoes and paying much more than would be paid in Trenton during the fall season for a large basket.

She told of Red Cross supplies being issued in bombed districts, and how many of the evacuee children were issued clothing from the billeting officer. Even Queen Elizabeth received a great blessing in many bombed areas in England, she said, for during the heaviest of the raids she visited a certain district where she was presented with a bouquet of flowers. The garments.

President B. F. Boyce was in the chair as minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted. Treasurer's report was given by the new Treasurer, Mr. G. McAvoy. Miss Florence Hall was made recording secretary upon the resignation of Miss M. Payne.

Reports of the various committees were read and the shipping report presented by Miss H. Bensley showed a total of 1,000 articles and a total value of $111.30 had been shipped during February, consisting of:

85 pairs army and airforce socks, 19 children's knitted mitts, 2 sleeveless sweaters, For British Civilian Relief: 5 pairs girls' socks, 10 girls' rompers, 1 woman's sweater, 10 boys' tweed jackets and corduroy pants, 1 boys' pants (with breast), 5 boys' undershirts, 1 boy's sweater, 1 boy's shirt, 1 pair boy's golf socks, 5 large quilts.

Holloway St. Y.P.U. Enjoys Social Evening

An enjoyable meeting of Holloway Street Y.P.U. was held on Monday night when the Christian Citizenship group, convened by Shirley Ritchen, deviating from the usual type of program, staged an evening of games.

Following the business period presided over by Norine Frederick, the Citizenship group led in an interesting Worship Service, built around the theme of "Recreation", Shirley Ritchen gave the Call to Worship and announced the hymns. Marion Daniels read the Scripture lesson. Max Maguire led in prayer and Isobel Richardson was pianist. Leader for the evening was Norine, were Hildegarde Hollwell, Norma Artkin and Marion Macdonald with Harry Denton explaining the mechanism of a Remington machine assigned for the post-war period which turned out some very intricate and rather beautiful products. On closer examination the cogs of this machine proved to be members of the group, in disguise. Following the humorous stunt, refreshments were served by the group in charge.

King George School H. and S. Association Hears Supt. Ruston

The regular meeting of the King George Home and School Association was held in the auditorium of the school on March 12, with the President, Mrs. M. C. Ward, in the chair. The meeting opened with the singing of the National Anthem, followed by The Lord's Prayer. Reports were given by the various committees, showing steady progress in the work. Mr. T. S. Aman, vice president of the Association, was appointed delegate to the Central Federation of Home and School Association at Toronto in April. The attendance prize was won by Mrs. N. Weddam's room. She had the highest number of parents present.

Mrs. Ward then introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. T. D. Ruston, superintendent of the Children's Aid Society. He traced the development of the movement for the protection of children from the passing of the Children's Protection Act in 1893. Since the inception of the Society, it has broadened its field of work to include community aid. To many the name, Children's Aid Society, has just been a name. Mr. Ruston made the organization live when he told a thrilling and moving story of the origin and development of the Society in Belleville.

A vote of thanks was moved by Mr. T. S. Aman for the inspiring and instructive address.

Mrs. J. R. Ashbury's group took charge, and put on a "pie singing contest". The winners were presented with large lollipops which created much merriment. Dainty refreshments were served, and everything voted it a most profitable and enjoyable evening.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Dust-Filled Pores Invite Acne

A girl can endure freckles but blackheads are unbearable because they give the appearance of dirt or uncleanliness. Not only that, but they bring a trail of horrid by-products—enlarged pores, inflamed elevations, sometimes scars. They are not a minor beauty ill, by any means. When young daughter sets up lamentations, believing that her social life is wrecked, that Prince Charming will give her the go-by, her sobs should not fall on insensitive ears.

If mama is fulfilling her mission as guardian angel and sympathetic friend, she will take her child to a medical man who specializes in acne diseases. Boys who bear blemishes that have developed into acne are also entitled to professional attention; they are just as aware of appearance as are girls, are made just as miserable if their complexions are spotted with red points. Unless treatment is done, acne may become chronic, continue for years.

CHILD'S SULKY SPELLS WORRIED HER UNTIL . . .

If your child has weeks of sulky, irritable spells for what seems to be no reason, watch out for constipation. Sluggish bowels may be the cause of many children's spells of bad temper. Don't let your child suffer the embarrassment of bad breath, pimples and the feeling of "not being up to par." Give her Fruit-a-tives. Fruit-a-tives will help give the thorough elimination that is necessary to make her active, alert and full of happy pep. Pleasant tasting, easy to swallow, Fruit-a-tives is a gentle laxative. Children 6 to 12 years, take half dose. Over 12 or Dad, take 1 or 2. Only 25¢ at your druggist. Get a box today.

Sebaceous glands are overactive in the early teens; glandular changes are going on throughout the body. The excitations from the oil ducts in the skin bank up into wax-like masses, mixed with atmospheric dust. As these masses become enlarged, the walls of the pores break, bacteria move in, pimples form.

Children are careless face-washers. That is why some skin specialists suggest that shaving soap be used, fluffed up to a rich lather, massaged into the flesh with the fingers. Any bland soap will serve. If the child will use enough to make it foam. A clean wash cloth should be used every day. The soap is rinsed away with tepid water, then hot, moist applications are applied to soften the wax-like plugs.

Most children protest against much heat, but that must not interfere with the treatment. If pimples are forming the hot moist applications will bring them to a head. Pimples are incipient boils and should be treated in the same manner. After drying gently, an acne lotion is applied and is allowed to dry. (Or some uses a solution of ordinary baking soda will prove helpful). Dissolve one teaspoonful of soda in half a cup of water, apply with cotton, let it dry on.

One thing is certain: hands off! Passing the fingertips over the flesh will spread the infection.

The child should not be permitted to press out the contents of the pustules. This practice can so destroy tissue that scars will result, and they are for keeps. If the pimples are large, show a raised yellow point, they can be lanced with a sterilized needle, the contents pressed out gently with the fingers that are covered with gauze. Large blackheads can be removed with the comedone extractor, for the coiffure that is swept back softly, front and sides. It is not necessary that the grandeur that is lifted high, but the rounded one, full at the sides, adds to the mess.

We hear of the heart-shaped face, and what is that, you may ask? It is fairly broad at the brow, tapers to a pointed chin, narrow mouth, eyebrows narrow and arched. A hair line that points downward in a widow's peak completes the type. These good points are played up by brushing the hair away from the forehead with a soft, slightly waved fringe below the pomp.

Oval faces.

Oval and heart-shaped faces are beautifully sculptured by nature, need little artifice. Alas, many of the sisters have defects to combat —prominent cheek bones, hollow cheeks, or puffiness below the chin. They must do a bit of hasty thinking concerning the arrangement of the hair; the wrong hair-do will accentuate a defect; the right one will throw it into the facial background, as it were.

Hollow cheeks can be filled out by using cream freely, spreading out fingers and thumbs, doing a clawing movement to strengthen the muscles, tone the tissues.

Prominent Cheek Bones.

If the cheek bones are prominent, the rouge freely right there. If you place it in the centre of the cheek or below, the cheek bones will appear even more prominent than they are.

GOOD MANNERS

Bridegroom's Wedding Expenses

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am a private in the Army, and am planning to be married quite soon. Will you please tell me what expenses I should pay? Am I supposed to pay? Of course there is the license, and the clergyman's fee, but do I have to give gifts to the bridesmaids, flower girl, soloist, ushers and best man? And do I provide flowers for all of them? If so, would you please suggest appropriate gifts, and tell me about what the flowers will cost? And do I also pay the organist?

Private,

Good news for you, sir, as your actual wedding expenses are not many. You'll be wearing your uniform, so you'll have no attire-expense(!), and many of the items you mention are the responsibilities of the bride's family. You, of course, pay for the marriage license, provide the clergyman's fee, buy the wedding ring, a wedding present for your bride, and her bridal bouquet.

Your bride-to-be's family will provide the wedding cake, for the bride's mother, and one to your mother; and you provide the boutonniere for your best man and ushers (if they are civilians). Also flowers for the bride's attendants are provided by the bride's family, since they are planned to harmonize with the bride's costumes.) To each of your attendants you send a present, which you give a gift, not necessarily expensive; and to each of her attendants, maid of honor, bridesmaids, flower girl, the bride gives a gift. All the other expenses of the wedding including the fee to the soloist, and of the reception are paid for by the bride's family.

Using the Napkin

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am a man reader of your column, and I'm willing to ask you a question that has puzzled me. Among my friends are some well-bred Continental Europeans, moving among the best people. I say this because it is obvious that the custom I shall describe is the correct thing, and the better educated do it. It is this: when they are dining, they leave their napkins laid flat on the table beside their plate, and pick them up, not by the corner, but by the not open their napkins and lay them on their laps as we Americans do. Have you studied this European custom? And do you think I should follow it when I am with them?

J. H. M.

No, I haven't noticed that this is a custom, either with Europeans in Europe or here. As a matter of fact; in my experience and observation, Europeans are more apt to open their table napkins in a more generous fashion than Americans do; that is they often open the napkin completely and lay it across the lap, whereas the American custom is, to unfold it only half its size.

I would certainly say that the procedure you have observed is unattractive; on the hot-canal celebrating side, and I wouldn't, if I were you, follow it even when you are with the European set. It does not make any sense, since the practical idea is to put and to keep the napkin on your lap, using it with the proper circumspectness that would not be possible if it were folded on the table every time you wished to wipe your lips. Also, since it is used like a napkin isn't an attractive object to deliberately shouldn't be kept in sight on the table.

Madoc Hockey League Ends Successful Season Holding Banquet for Teams in Marmora

"Toots" Holway, Principal Speaker and President of League Receives Gift . . .

Marmora, March 14 (Special to the Ontario Intelligencer)—Hockey in the central part of Hastings County is well on its way to the revival of the game that saw the winter pastime rise to heights a decade ago. This was well proven when the executive of the Madoc Hockey League was host to the players at a banquet here Tuesday night when the principal honors were tendered the Madoc team as league champions for 1946.

Giving the lions' share of the credit to the losing team, Col. B. C. Dotman presented his own trophy to Cliff Carswell, captain of the championship Madoc team, "Had it not been for the losing teams you would not have had the success I have tonight. However, I am informed, that it was the untiring work of Jack Smith, president of the Madoc team and your worthy league secretary, Bud Fischer, and their associates that brought about this fine gathering. Your work in sponsoring hockey in the minor series proves well the ideals behind the association," stated Col. Dotman as he presented the league trophy he had donated at the original organization meeting.

Calculated Successful Season.

"We are culminating a successful season. I was told it was practically an impossibility to revive hockey in our district. We did it, thanks to the co-operation of all concerned in our league," stated "Bud" Fischer in the capable and energetic secretary of the league, who also acted as chairman of the evening's banquet.

"Your league completed 17 games and had a profit of $1,000 and something like $1270, which was far beyond our original expectations. However, in that we hope to expand our league and already we have contacted Tweed and there is a possibility there. In closing I would like to add the league's personal thanks to our referees, who helped in a large degree to make the success we enjoy here tonight," concluded Chairman Fischer.

Develop Young Players.

The principal speaker of the night was A. R. "Toots" Holway, coach of the Belleville Juniors and former N.H.L. hockey star. "First and foremost I, too, congratulate the Madoc League in the sponsoring of hockey in the minor ranks. It is there you will develop players for the future," declared Mr. Holway.

Reminiscing over his days of hockey "Toots" told starting his career in Belleville in 1917 and after migrating to Brockville was tendered a professional contract with the Toronto St. Patrick's of the N.H.L. in 1926. Later he joined the Montreal "Maroons" to become a member of the World's Champions in 1936, following which he carried a trail of interesting stories of the ice lanes through Seattle, Pittsburgh, Detroit and finally concluded by saying he was more interested in the development of the youth of today. "In speaking to the young players, I might add that they have much to offer for your future, but you will get out of it just what you put into the game," concluded Mr. Holway.

President Honored.

Somewhat as a surprise, "Toots" presented League President Fischer with an engraved cigarette case, a token of appreciation tendered by the players of the league for the efforts in assisting in the revival of hockey in the Madoc-Marmora area. "I can say, fellows, 'a thank you. This is something that words can't express," admitted Mr. Fischer in acceptance.

The Madoc Hockey League consisted of teams from Eldorado, Cooper, Marmora Junior Farmers and Madoc. The trophy for the leading scorer was presented to Stanley Simpson of the Eldorado team. Before Grace was said by Col. Dotman, a minute's silence was observed in memory of Capt. Chas. Bleecker and Major F. J. Nickle, sons of the district.

The evening's entertainment was provided by Len Fowell, Madoc's well known magician, who delighted the gathering with his usual entertainment of confusion of magic and blinding that left an audience of upwards to 80 wondering homewards still wondering if the confusion of the hand deceived the eye."

Toronto, March 14 — (CP) — Charles Edward Bertrand is as keen a goaltender as can be found in junior hockey today. Chuck, who is 18, plays for his school team and recently won the Hawkesbury, Ont., junior title. The difference between young Charlie and most goalies, though, is the fact that the lad only has one leg.

Several years ago he lost his left leg, but the accident has not crimped his love for sports and with an artificial limb he climbs into the pads regularly and plays a sound game between the pipes. Chuck asks no quarter when the players come to close and is right in there pitching—or rather stopping—when the play gets rough.

With Pete Gray, the former Three Rivers, Que., baseball player now property of St. Louis Browns, as his idol, young Charlie hopes to continue his chores in goaldom. Nor does he confine his activities to hockey. The teen-aged lad is a constant partaker in baseball, softball and track.

Local Boy . . .

Right Monicral boys and another from Shawinigan Falls, Que., get a berth this spring at Bear Mountain, N.Y., where the Montreal Royals, Brooklyn Dodgers et al go for spring training. The Montreal lads got their break through the club's new policy of developing home-grown talent.

The Royals already have three local players on their roster in the persons of Bob Maltais, Jean Pierre Roy and Roland Gladu. The latter trio includes six pitchers, two catchers and an outfielder.

Done Before!

The current research project now underway in Philadelphia, in which sport figures are being tested over a period of six years, is nothing new, heart, is nothing new says Myrtle (Montreal Star) Cook. A number of years ago Percy Williams and Miss Cook, members of Canada's Olympic track team, were given similar tests by Doctor Sandiford at the University of Toronto.

The pair of sprinters ran around the Hart House indoor track while various technical data was being recorded on specially prepared instruments. Heart tests were made before and after the runs. Says Myrtle: "It was rather fun being a guinea pig!"

The Philadelphia tests are seeking "to answer a medical point—whether there is such a thing as athletic heart.

Odds-and-Ending:

Cpl. Peter Phillips, finalist in the welterweight championships in 1938 has been killed in action. His home was in Niagara Falls, Ont. . . . Today now Eleanor O'Meara, Toronto's one-time Canadian figure skating champion and erstwhile trooper with Six Capades, expects to head for California and the silver screen.

9-Game Losing Streak Broken By St. Louis

By The Canadian Press

St. Louis Flyers broke a nine-game losing streak last night and wound up their home schedule for the season with a 3-1 victory over Providence Reds.

Playing without defenseman Johnny Bucyk, who is out of the game due to an injured shoulder, and left for Sudbury yesterday, Flyers took the lead in the second minute of play on a goal by Nick Evanshen.

After a scoreless second period, Art Giroux put Flyers two up early in the third period before Bill Hunter notched Reds' counter. Paul Mergers scored Flyers' third goal while Vic Lynn and Stan Smith were serving penalties, drawing goalie Paul Leclerc out of position after outskating the Red defence.

FLASH HOLLETT IS TOP-SCORING REARGUARDSMAN

Scored Two Goals Against Boston That Helped His Team Tie

By EDDIE LEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Willard Hollett, defenceman of Detroit Red Wings, 27-year-old veteran of 11 National Hockey League campaigns, has justified his reputation as one of the League's greatest rushing defencemen by leading Detroit's top-scoring rearguard.

Skating in front of the 160-pound captain of the Detroit club can likewise be Billy Carlson, Ont., fruit farm when Wings finish the season and look back with particularly pride "on his 1946-45 performances.

Hollett has accounted for 19 goals this season, the third time he has reached that total and 20 assists for 39 points, one more than Max Bentley, Toronto Maple Leaf defensive star. Pratt has 17 points.

Boston Bruins last season traded Hollett to Detroit for Pat Egan and the Flash's record against his old club is particularly impressive. In the 18 times he has appeared against them, he scored 11 goals.

Last night he scored two to give the Wings a 3-3 tie with Bruins at Boston.

Both Hollett's tallies resulted from long shots—one in the opening period after Armand Gaudreault supplied Bruins with a 1-0 lead and the other in the third period. Bill Jennings had put Bruins ahead early in the second.

Detroit's last strengthened Bruins' grip on fourth place and left them three points ahead of Chicago Black Hawks in the duel for the last playoff berth.

Tu edge into the finals, Hawks have to defeat Boston when they play here Sunday after the latter is overcoming Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs have finished they play. Bruins meet Canadiens in the final scheduled game next Sunday.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

President Will Harridge of the American Baseball League tentatively announced the opening schedule for the junior circuit, the season to open April 16 with New York the visitors at Washington. The campaign closes Sept. 30 after each club takes care of 77 road and 77 home games. The dates include 120 night games, compared with 133 last year, with Philadelphia and St. Louis Browns having 43 are-light games. Washington, Chicago, Cleveland and Philadelphia will also have night contests.

In his announcement at Chicago Harridge declared steps had been taken to eliminate all mileage as the brevity of the speakers. The Commanding Officers, Group Captain Bell-Irving of Trenton, Group Captain Laird of No. 6 Repair Depot and Group Captain Gibb of Mountain View spoke appreciatively after thanks to the players for the fine sportsmanlike games provided the visiting veterans. Wilmot, Ind., by words, which meant much to the Sergeant at Arms. Refreshments added similar words in expressing the thanks of the civilian people.

You may not know it, but Paul Raymond, Belleville chief scoring threat along the ice lanes, is an accomplished singer. By special request he sang the song in English and the other in French at the Commanding Officer's dinner. He is equally as good a soloist vocally as he is on the ice. Mailing to Al Findlay made an ideal master of ceremonies and his entertainment was of the highest calibre procurable. It was one of those happy gatherings where officers and men fraternized in a gala amicable gathering of mutual friends.

Oshawa Comment.

After commenting over the Motor City "Bees" beating the Kingston Vics, out, George (Oshawa Times) Campbell straightens Kingston Mike Rodden out on a couple of hockey points. Says sage George: "One thing that "Mike" Rodden points out in his account of the game is that the players of both teams exhibited fine sportsmanship, although they played hard. He points out that this was in direct contrast to the recent Belleville-Kingston series which resulted in 39 penalties in two game. In his column the other day, "Mike" started to talk about the good old days and was recalling the days when Oshawa and Kingston Frontenacs played in the same Intermediate A group. "Mike" has been guilty of several of this type of mistake lately and he should check more closely his information. Kingston and Oshawa Juniors never did play in the same Junior O.H.A. group, in fact the only time we can ever recall Oshawa and Kingston being in the same group was the year the Oshawa Army was opened and a Senior "B" group was formed, with Queen's University, Belleville and Oshawa in a 3-team group. Years ago, Kingston was usually mixed with Belleville, Brockville, even Cornwall, but the Oshawa team was in the Whitby-Bowmanville-Oshawa-Port Hope, Peterborough circuit and never travelled as far as Kingston except in playoffs.

Remember When.

Hamilton Tigers went on strike after winning the National Hockey League championship twenty years ago. The gate receipts refused a bonus to players to meet Victoria Cougars in the Stanley Cup series. Toronto St. Patricks and Montreal Canadiens, second and third place teams in the N.H.L. race for the championship with the Canadiens defeating Cougars defeated the Hamilton Tigers.

High Hoop Game.

Although defeated 46 to 32 by the Kingston "Army" cagers, the Belleville "T" intermediates feel they can overcome the 13-point advantage on their home floor at the Y.M.C.A. here tomorrow night in the O.B.A. play-off game. It seems Bodwell, six-foot-three Kingston Army centreman, accounted for 22 of the Kingston total score. The "T" Bodwell will be knocking his noggin on the low track surrounding the "Y" floor court, where he should be nearly as effective. The local intermediates divided their scoring well, which speaks highly of their scoring prowess. From those interested in the high hoop game don't miss Thursday night's Kingston Army at Belleville "Y" Eastern Ontario final. C.W.A.C. girls' team from Kingston will meet the Belleville "Y" lassies in an exhibition game proceeding the provincial match.

Fitting Tribute.

"Scrambled Eggs"—(brass hats of the R.C.A.F. to you) and "G.I. Joes"—of the Army, had a field day down at the Quinte Hotel, Monday night, when the officers of the C.O.A.F. Quinte Hockey League tendered its players a banquet during which the Champion Trenton "Fliers" and Mountain View "Bombers" presented windbreakers through their respective captains, Phil Raymond and Norman Bandreau. It was a fitting climax to a successful hockey season and all about the evening was one to thank the officers and players of the league for the handsome Wonson lighter presented this department, during the evening. Why such an acceptable gift we are unable to imagine, except we guessed upon it was "in appreciation". Again we say—"thanks, fellows".

What "Scrambled Eggs" lacks in the brevity of the speakers. The Commanding Officers, Group Captain Bell-Irving of Trenton, Group Captain Laird of No. 6 Repair Depot and Group Captain Gibb of Mountain View spoke appreciatively after thanks to the players for the fine sportsmanlike games provided the visiting veterans. Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 52a
By SAM GORDON
Play Bridge

Suppose your partner starts with an opening bid of one spade. With your hand make an immediate double—jump assist to four spades.

The opening bid by your partner says he has five tricks, high points, five, you are ten tricks; enough for a game in spades. So, you should make a jump assist of another four.

But you must not make an immediate one-jump bid of any kind with a hand that does not contain two sure tricks. Consequently, you have not a one-jump assist to three spades.

Change the queen of clubs in your hand to the ace of clubs. That will give you two sure tricks. In that case, your response would not be four spades, but, it would be a one-jump to three spades.

There is purpose in the distinction between different kinds of jumps. With a one-jump, partner has encouragement in case he has tricks enough for a slam. But not so much with a double jump, thus ignoring a jump suits only a chump.

Training Camp Notes

By TED MEEKE
(Of Sport Writers)

New York, March 14 — (AP) — Ross Christopher, Richmond, Calif., right-handed who is expected to be one of the best pitchers in the American League for Philadelphia Athletics this season, has landed the biggest and agreed to terms yesterday with manager Connie Mack just back in Philadelphia from the Pacific coast.

While Connie beamed over the signing of Christopher, Horace Stoneham, president of New York Giants, announced that southpaw cliff Melton, infielder Billy Jurges and outfielder Charlie Mead were holdouts. The Giants held a 31½ hour drill at their Lakeland, N.J., camp in which their latest arrival, first-baseman Phil Weintraub, participated.

Other Training Camp Items:

New York Yankees — Players at Atlantic City camp jumped to 16 with arrival of third pitcher Don Savage and catcher Ed Levy.

Boston Red Sox — Team started training at Pinehurst, N. J., today. After checking in last night manager Joe Cronin learned that first baseman George Metkovich had agreed to terms.

Chicago White Sox — First hitting practice carded today at Terre Haute. Tony Cuccinello arrived boosting squad to 17.

Philadelphia Phillies — With general manager Herbert Pennock declaring "We'll have a better club than we had last year," the Phils departed to open camp at Wilmington, Del.

Hamilton Majors Senior Champs

By The Canadian Press.
After playing five games of the best-of-seven final series with St. Catharines Saints, Hamilton Majors are senior champions of the O.H.A. for third time in four years. Hamilton last night they clinched up a 7-1 victory over their traditional rivals in the deciding test and will take on Prood Open Pil, Sudbury champions of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association, for the all-Ontario honors. This will be a best-of-seven affair, with the first game scheduled for Saturday at Toronto.

Majors led 2-0 for the first period against Saints on double scores by Stan Robertson and with Dillon Brady notching two more, were leading by four straight counters before Red Reynolds found the net midway in the second canto for St. Catharines' one and only tally. Mason scored a brace during the fifth session to finished.

Robertson with three goals and one assist, led the parade, closely followed by Brady, also responsible for three goals. Mason had his one counter and two assists, while Gene Chappa was awarded to Dinning and Conick; each with two, Bellinger and Shillington. For St. Catharines, Bellinger made the pass for Reynolds' scoring accomplishment.

GOOD JOCKEYS WILL BE MISSING WHEN BAN LIFTED

New York, March 14. (AP) — A dearth of jockeys, particularly topflight riders, is in store for United States racing when the current ban is lifted.

This opinion, widespread among turf observers, today was explained by Johnny Gilbert, veteran trainer rider. He gave several reasons. Chief is the anticipated shortage.

"Take the increasing weight of boys, for instance," said Gilbert, who for years have had to refrain from eating and drinking every-thing to keep down. Additionally, continuing the working of horses: But that isn't like the strain of keeping thoroughly fit and riding in actual afternoon competition. It's much harder these days for them to diet.

"Some of the younger riders' the big-boned growing type, get heavy quickly, and not so many apprentices are likely to develop during the coming season.

"Another thing—there are plenty of young who have gone into defence work. Some older jocks, will on in their 40s, figure they have not so many riding years left anyway and might as well stick to something else on a permanent basis."

The armed services, it was reported early in January, took one-third of the Jockey Guild members. It seems unlikely that many of these boys, when they don't like service uniforms, will have retained their riding weight.

NOTED SHIPWRIGHTS DIE

London — (CP) — John Carlisle, 69, and his brother Henry Montgomery Carlisle, 67, died on the same day, removing the last of a generation of a Northern Ireland family which put Belfast on the map as one of the world's shipbuilding centres.

GRAPES — STRANGE FRUIT

Grimsby, England — (CP) —The war has been going on so long that many of the younger generation have little knowledge of peacetime fruits. In a Grimsby juvenile court a young boy, who stole grapes from a truck, told the magistrate "They were round, black things — I don't know what they were."

Wallace Beery and Binnie Barnes are teamed up for the second time in the first time in "Barbary Coast Gent," the new M-G-M film opening early at the Belle Theatre. "Barbary Coast Gent is a story of San Francisco's Barbary Coast and early Nevada gold-field days.

Girl Rush-Tuneful Musical

Wally Brown and Alan Carney who have established themselves as prime comedy favorites, are co-starred with Frances Langford and Vera Vague in RKO Radio's gay new musical comedy, "Girl Rush," the second feature attraction.

In their roles of comedians in a girl show, stranded during California's gold rush of 1849-49, they go out looking for gold in order to get their fellow workers back to the show.

Together with Miss Langford and Vera Vague, they keep the laughs coming loud and often. Lew Pollack

THE SECRET OF THE MARSHBANKS

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

CHAPTER 17

"There's something very likable about you tonight, Cherry," Kelly said, his eyes on the earnest face under its fluff of streaked gold and brown hair, the slender, finely cut figure, the expression of keen sense and intelligence and light. She had on a simple dinner gray and white dress tonight; a bangle of silver and blue bells hung about her throat like a wee collar, and the other bunch of the same bells was twisted about her wrist. "I like that getup," he approved.

"Fran gave me this. It was too big for her; I'm glad you like it."

"And I approve of you. By gum," said Kelly with simplicity, "you do manage to stand the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune about as well as any human being, I ever knew! You're one person and then you're another, an aunt turns up, an uncle turns up, a father and grandmother and cousin spread out of the void, you're Cherry Rawlings looking for a job, and then you're Amy Marshbanks with a pot of money, and then an old lady steps in, a papa and you're back again. And you stand it all and you laugh, and you've kept your sense of humor."

Sudden tears were in her eyes, although she were smiling, and kept her firm grip upon his big fingers.

"I don't do much. But I'm growing up," said Cherry. "Rebecca and I are thinking of opening a girls' school. Coaching for college entry, she had a swell—she had a most flattering offer," Cherry corrected herself punctiliously, "from a dame Barbara Jaloe, we thought, who not do it ourselves instead, up here? Go her mother's going to give us two big rooms to start with, and—Kelly, what are thinking about?"

"Wishing I saw more of you, Cherry. How today it was lovely, over our week's fellow's need to know in Oxford is here with me for a few days—I had to bring him to town for a dinner tonight, but I ducked the dinner—and we had lunch by the fire. . . ."

Fran wanted me to go," Cherry put in. Her heart was singing. He had not been alone with Fran today before.

"Well, why the deuce didn't you go?" Kelly asked.

"I couldn't, Kelly. I've an eleven on Saturday. I didn't come in until after four."

"And have loved it. He's a great boy, Leland. Sixty, you know, and he's been everywhere. I've not seen Fran," Kelly said, considering, "in weeks. I've not seen Fran since one day in September when I met her downtown, shopping."

"You mean until today?"

"I didn't see Fran today, Cherry."

"You didn't?"

"Nope. What made you think I had?"

"Why, she—she said so. She told the judge so."

"Told him I'd been here today? Told him she'd gone in Gay Gallito today. And she told him—or her chauffeur told that way—that I'd gone too. That's funny," Cherry said, her eyes shining in the soft lamplight and firelight, because she made quite a point of it. She said that on account of the chauffeur being over there all day—But, Kelly!" she broke off, suddenly remembering, "you did telephone Fran tonight, didn't you? Didn't you call her from downstairs here about seven?"

"From downstairs here! We didn't leave Sausalito until after seven."

"But then—but then—" Cherry stammered, bewildered, "why did she call somebody 'Kelly'? I just come into the room, and she saw me too, and yet she said 'Kelly' as distinctly as I'm saying it now. She had turned around with the telephone and looked right at me, and said something about it being dangerous for you to be here, and 'Goodbye, Kelly.'"

Then she said it for you to hear, Cherry. I'm no sleuth, but it seems to me that was a plant."

"But then who was she talking to?"

"Her latest," Kelly said briefly, in a wry smile.

"But I can't believe it!" Cherry said, under her breath. "Oh, Kelly," she went on innocently, "isn't it funny to be sitting here talking about it, and telling each other things?"

"I think it's fun," he agreed.

"Some day we'll tell another day in Sausalito, I like it so!"

"Whenever you say, Marchioness. But I should imagine," Kelly said, "that the Judge will do some investigating before pussyfooting in your behalf—and you'll be a busy woman here. Why not to protect his mother, of course, but he'll move heaven and earth to see that the spite of her you get your rights. I tell you what I think he'll do," Kelly listened to himself to say with conviction, "he'll talk to Amy; he'll tell her the whole story, and then he'll get a adjustment out of court, a division of the property, and there's end it all. . . ."

"Amy may," Cherry said rather ruefully, in a moment. "She's head over heels in love with this Sicilian count who's been going the rounds—Mario Cumantine."

"Not Public Bounder Number One?"

"The same."

Cherry stood up. "I just heard Martin showing someone in, and I think it's Cogo. Come on in and meet him. I want to know what you think of him!"

They had joined hands as they walked through the hall, but Cherry loosened her fingers when they reached the others. Cogo was indeed there, dark, stunning, mustached very much at ease, and with him had come two other, not very attractive younger men. The bridge game had ended; they were sitting about the fire, drinking highballs and listening to the story of a boar hunt in which Cogo, according to his own account, had acquitted himself to advantage.

Kelly and Cherry united into the circle, but Kelly did not stay long, and when he had excused himself Cherry felt suddenly too, feeling herself happier, in an irrational, all-pervading way than she had ever been in her life before. He didn't love Fran; he didn't love Fran!

"I beg your pardon!" Cherry was startled by a voice that addressed her as she crossed the upper hall. It was the elder Mrs. Marshbanks who had spoken. She was standing in her bedroom doorway. "I asked if you would step into my room a moment?" the old lady said.

Oh, Kelly, come back; come back! Cherry's thoughts called desperately, nine-tenths an impulse of active terror. She went slowly into the luxurious, dark bedroom, and at the invitation of her companion took a chair.

"I wanted to speak to you," said Mrs. Marshbanks. "I have tried before to let you see how unconscious your presence is in this house. I am sure you have unconsciously in the first place. For reasons that only be understands my self that has taken the position that this family owes you something. Owes you! You have received a hundred times more than anything to which you were entitled already. You turned your way to be kind, made friends, you knew in your pleasing little miserable soul that every time you were here I refused to leave my room. That didn't stop you; you came anyway! You've been between me and my grandaughter, it's all. Oh, Cherry's such fun, Gran,' and 'You don't understand, Cherry, and I'm sick of it.

"Now you've come between me and my son. He talked to me tonight as no man should talk to a woman, least of all his mother! You came to him with your story of babies changed in their cradles, you to inherit all that belongs to Amy—no proof, of course, no proof! And so Amy's to be disgraced—ousted from her place. . . ."

"I—I ought talk to me this way!" Cherry said, on her feet. "Good night, Mrs. Marshbanks!"

"No, don't go. Don't go, or I'll tell this whole household what you came here today to do. . . ."

An abrupt stop, and a silence. Amy had called Cherry from the hall.

"Amy come in here!" her grandmother said.

"Mrs. Marshbanks, I do beg you—" Cherry began, "I do beg you—"

Amy came in, bewildered by their manner and their looks.

"Amy I've something to say to you!" Mrs. Marshbanks said.

"You knew Cogo came in; Cherry told you." Amy surmised defiantly. "Well, he did, for fifteen minutes! And I don't care."

"It has nothing to do with him till down. Cherry, sit down."

"I won't," Cherry said flatly. "And I beg you to wait until to-morrow and then talk to the judge about this. . . ."

"Talk to Uncle about what?" Amy asked amazedly.

"About me!" said her grandmother, speaking in a light, panting fashion. Cherry looked at her with anger. "This girl who is your dear friend, and who loves you so, and is such a lady, and never wears Fran's outworn frocks, and is the daughter of a servant—a servant in my house! This girl who comes in now with a claim that she is Amelia Marshbanks' daughter, and you are the unwanted one!"

Amy looked from one to the other with a puzzled, but not by the least alarmed expression.

"I have the slightest idea what you're talking about, Gran," she said. The old woman, with a sudden look of recollection, spoke again.

"Amy, there's something you've never known, something I hoped you never would know. But, you have to hear it now, for your uncle tells he has told you. Well, he's not tell you, for I will! You never guessed that your father was also Cherry's father?"

"I never guessed it because it isn't true," Amy answered, in proud disdain.

"It is true, my child. Your father was a fascinating man. Women were drawn to him."

"Cherry and I are the same age," Amy protested. "He was married. I don't—I don't—I don't believe it!"

"Cherry was born two months too soon. Her mother was Charlotte Rawlings, the younger sister of Emma Rankin who was your grandfather's nurse for years—my granddaughter, I'm sorry to say, weak, pretty little thing, eighteen or so, with no background, no character. . . ."

"You are not hurting me, Cherry," Amy said, turning to her. "You are talking of Amy's mother."

Amy turned her pallid, pale face and bewildered. "What is all this, Cherry? What's she talking about? I don't love grandmother's losing her mind. What's it all about?"

Mrs. Marshbanks, a few weeks up in the mountains," Cherry began, speaking in a low, smothered, hoarse and weak. "She told me that—that there had been a mistake in—in not just me—the infantities, Amy, when we were just newborn babies."

"Of which there is absolutely no proof!" put in the old lady harshly.

"There was proof. Judge Marshbanks will tell Amy as if she asks him," Cherry was beginning, when Amy interrupted again in her turn.

"You mean I'm not Amy Marshbanks, and my father's not Mrs. Marshbanks's child and grandfather Washington's grandchild? But that's ridiculous. I can assure you that I know perfectly well who I am," Amy summarized it triumphantly. "You feel who you are," she ended superbly, "you know. If I'd been anyone else how possibly could I have—but then it's all too silly!"

"You are right, Amy," said Mrs. Marshbanks, more quietly than she had yet spoken. "You are absolutely right, my darling, and I am proud of you. And now, girls, no more of it. It's late, and I am going to bed. Good night, Amy!"

"What do you suppose got her?" Amy asked in a whisper when they were in the hall. "She said the most crack-brained ideas! Come into my room, Cherry. No, come on in a minute. I'm sure that that is my father really your father, too!"

"Amy, don't," Cherry admitted, sick of the whole thing.

"Uncle got me to promise. . . ."

"Yes, He told me long ago. When I was here after Mrs. Porter died. . . ."

"Honestly!" Amy stared, then a smile and a frown. 'And Cherry could see that she was not wholly displeased with the idea. "So Emma and my father—" mused Amy, a deep dimple affecting her flawless little cheek.

"Then Emma's younger sister Charlotte. She was only nineteen, Gran was just out of boarding school."

"That makes us cousins, doesn't it?" Amy said, after a pause at the strangeness of it. "No, it doesn't," she corrected it quickly. "It makes us half sisters! But I wouldn't feel bad about it," Amy went on, with a hint of patronage in her kindly voice, "because, after all, my father was a perfectly fascinating person, and he was a bachelorette—and he was—he don't know, a long time ago, and nobody knows it, so who cares? And it's all right, well, we like each other anyway."

Basketball

In a closely contested game that saw rigid defence set-up by both squads, the Belleville "Y" juveniles downed the Belleville "Y" juveniles 26 to 22 in the second round Ontario Basketball Association-Canadian Playdowns in Kingston last night. The return game will be played in the Belleville Y.M.C.A. on Friday night when the "Intermediate Collegians" enjoy a scant three point margin to take the two game series of points to count on the round.

The Limestone City juveniles "Y" racked through to an 18 to 13 lead in the first half, but Belleville Bert Burnett's Belleville kids rallied to cut-play the homesteaders every department in the second half when Kingston was held to seven points while Belleville netted nine. Bert Clark, and Boutter were the best performers for the Belleville squad.

Along the Belleville line the "Y" juveniles played strong basketball and should quite handily haul down the small three-point lead in the return game here Friday night. The locals' scoring was well divided, which puts them in a favorable position for the games coached by Tom Burnett. Cameron at centre commanded up a strong defence, as the entire Belleville sextette "bended but not broke" in a masterful manner. Spafford, Watson and Vaughan played the best for Kingston.

The lineup:

Belleville "Y": Wonnacott 2, Cameron 2, Vaughan 4, Spafford 6, Watson 3, Wallace 4, Bird 0, Total 22.

Kingston Collegiate: Boutter 6, Graves 1, Clark 10, Mrurray, Carveth 2, Kidd 0, Anderson 2, Bell and Monaghan. Referee—Fleming.

Memorial Service Held for Tpr. F. Watson

Not only did the friends and former associates of the late Trooper Frank Watson, son of Roslin, killed in action on Feb. 26, 1945 honor his memory with a special memorial service, but made tangible expression in the form of a contribution of $20.27 which was turned over the branch of the Rr 1 Cross here.

The Rev. J. Bell-Irving conducted the service held in St. Paul's Anglican Church, which was attended with military tributes. The Last Post and Reveille were sounded by buglers at the conclusion of the service which was attended by a large number of local and district residents.

Commercial Fishing Problems In Great Lakes To Be Studied By Commission Says Dunbar

One Association Asks for Abolition of Three-Day Non-Resident Licence

Toronto, March 14. (CP) — A commission representing Ontario and eight states of the United States will study commercial fishing problems in the Great Lakes, Hon. Gordon Conant, Minister of Lands and Fisheries, today told the Fish and Game Committee of the Legislature. He had been informed by Ontario members of the forthcoming formation of this committee and an announcement concerning it was expected shortly.

"Questions of uniformity of legislation will be approached", said Mr. Dunbar, "and methods of fishing in these waters will be given thorough consideration".

Representatives of the Northern Ontario Outfitters' Association and the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters presented recommendations on behalf of these and affiliated bodies.

Recommendations submitted by Len Hughes of Trout Mills, representing the Outfitters' Association, included abolition of the three-day non resident fishing licence, which, he declared, is a deterrent to tourist fish, that the legal size of muskinlonge be increased from 30 to 32 inches, that proper fishways be provided at dams, that 10 more hatcheries and rearing ponds be established in Northern Ontario, that no fish in the Dryden district and that the wild life preserve in the Sioux Lookout area be the showing or motion and still pictures, production of suitable text books and establishment of competent wardens.

Favor Lake Breakers

The Hunters and Anglers Federation proposed that the government give publicity to the game and fish laws, by publishing the names of persons individuals, together with details of the offence, the penalty imposed and disposition in the annual report of the Game and Fisheries Department. Also, that there be no limit to effective deterrent, it was claimed, to the practice. Dalhousie Mott of Gun Club protested the opening of the bear season on June 15 in Haliburton district and requested that the open season for black bear be set for July 1.

T. A. Golden, representing the Georgian Bay and Lake Huron Commercial Fishermen's Association, told the committee that commercial fishermen "have gone downstream" in their waters during the past 20 years. In the last recorded year, 1943, the Lake Huron catch was only 50,000 pounds compared with a yearly average from 1933 to 1938 of 1,900,000 pounds. There was a further decrease in 1944, he estimated at 10 to 15 per cent.

Commercial fishermen have had their gear destroyed by the ice and the white fish catch was down to 36 per cent in 1943-44 average.

Commercial fishermen were opposed to the practice of fishing during the spawning season, Mr. Golden said. They held that sanctuaries in spawning grounds largely disrupted by parasitic fish that largely destroyed the eggs and the only effective means of maintaining stocks.

Want Pike on Game Fish List.

He advocated extension of planting of pickerel, pike and muskinge and consideration of placing pike on the game fish list, as the latter is not considered a valuable commercial variety.

Alderman McGuire of Stoney Point presented resolutions on behalf of the Essex County Sportsmen Association. One asked that a portion of revenue from licences and fines be used to purchase lake, river and marsh land areas for sanctuaries, the other that fifty-nine per cent of the $5-mile waterfowl limit, ninety per cent of the open season for deer, $7.50, fee yearlings $12-$13.50.

Receipts reported in the Department Marketing Service were: Cattle 1,200; calves light, 600; sheep and lambs 80. Unsold from yesterday were 900 head of cattle.

Police Blotter

City police recovered a bicycle taken from Queen Alexandra School yesterday afternoon. The bike, owned by James Hall, a young pupil at the school, was taken from the school yard by a boy rider and subsequently found abandoned.

Two reported disturbances resulted in charges having been laid in police court this morning following the week-end. One was tragical after the "boys in blue" issued warnings to motorists, while the other was responsible for the trouble.

Charged and a driving engaged in a heated argument in front of a Front Street shop last night, the fists flew and blackoffs followed. The pair was escorted to the police station and block to "cool off".

Car Crashes Into Window

While he was driving through the village of Stirling early this morning, a car driven by Harry Tain, of Roslin, crashed through the plate glass window of Mrs. Jones' store in Pitcher's implement store during extensive damage to the window and a few separators which were on display. Constable Ted Pitcher investigated. Tain was subsequently apprehended by the O.P.P. and charged with the charge of dangerous driving and also of leaving the scene of the accident before he met the police authorities.

According to reports from Stirling Mr. Tain was driving south on Highway No. 14 and failed to make a turn in the village of Stirling with the result his car bounded over the sidewalk and he failed to have crashed through the show window of the store. Several of the occupants of the vehicle succeeded in escaping from the wreckage, but only where Tain was apprehended by Provincial Police. No occupants of the car received serious injuries but the front portion of the car was extensively damaged.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, March 14 — (CP) — Trading was dull today on the livestock market. Prices were firm on lambs 3; hogs 324; calves 51.

Reports received from four car loads of hogs were shipped to the Toronto market yesterday and that could be sent.

In the deals today, sellers were asking $16 a head, with buyers not only bidding $15 for hogs. Several carloads were sold.

Receipts were not enough cattle and lambs to make quotations.

There was a good demand at $15.50. Graaers were slow at 96-98c.

Senior Play-off Series Announced

Toronto, March 14 —(CP)— Harry A. Hewitt of the Ontario Hockey Association today announced the senior play-off series between Kingston Frontenacs and Hamilton Majors for the Colonel Gardiner Trophy emblematic of Intermediate supremacy.

The first game will be played in Hamilton March 18 and 23 and at Toronto again March 21. Further dates, if necessary, tentatively scheduled as a best-out-of-seven affair, will be announced later. Hamilton won the O.H.A. senior title last night, winning over the Toronto Marlies in their best-of-seven final series 4-1. Proof won the Northern Ontario Hockey Association senior crown.

Britons Still Face Many Discomforts

I see that films are to be made about this Big White Paper which sets down without tears, so to speak, Britain's war effort, James Lansdale Hodson writes in the Saint John Telegraph-Journal. I dare say Walt Disney could make something very fine and funny out of it—a disappearing pipe and moreover, letting cobwebs in. But with Charles Lamb were alive to write some essays on the subject, I think it was Rose Macaulay who composed a charming book on the minor pleasures of life. Some body ought to do one on the minor trials and discomforts of total war.

I am not, of course, thinking of high explosive bombs and bombs. They are on the major side. Some of the discomforts are almost definitely not. Old clothes for one. Nobody can criticize us now because our trousers are baggy, nor jackets or skirts too short. The old forgery has come into his own.

Looked Like Fodder.

A distinguished literary friend of mine has always looked rather like a tramp. Walking one evening before the war, we passed a Fleet Street restaurant, looked down with both he was going to review, a lady inquired in her cash desk near the door, "Could I help him severely: "Not in here, I think," thought he, has come hawking to them. She would not dare to sell to him now." Too many of us are indistinguishable from him. Actually, I will confess,

Ruhr-Frankfurt Highway Under Fire

Strategic Road Serves the Saar And Rhineland

Yanks Establish Nine-Mile Bridgehead Across Moselle

By JAMES M. LONG
(AP Staff Writer)

Paris, March 15 (AP)— The German radio said today that the new United States 15th Army had gone into action in the east Rhine bridgehead at Remagen to swell the assault force of 100,000 men. The Americans had virtually cut the Ruhr-Frankfurt superhighway and placed 75 miles of machine-gun fire from a halt mile away.

To the south, the United States 3rd Army crossed the lower Moselle on a nine-mile front within sight today of battered Coblenz, key to domination of another 10-mile strip of the west Rhine barely from point-blank fire than three miles from the ancient walled Rhine town of Boppard.

Still farther south, four waves of American medium bombers ripped up dragon's teeth barriers and pillboxes of the Siegfried Line in the Saar front where fresh advances of the United States 7th Army carried almost to the Siegfried line, shortening cities of Voelklingen and Saarbrucken.

The bombing with special-fused, non-clinging fragmentation bombs was "first used to preclude other Allied offensives in the past. The United States 3rd Army moving south of the middle Moselle was miles northeast of Coblenz and within 36 miles of Saarbrucken from the north and east, threatening to roll up the Siegfried line along the Saar river front line.

U. S. 1st Army infantrymen edging into the heavily wooded hills east of the expanding Remagen bridgehead were within half a mile of the highway at 8 a.m. (midday front time) and an unconfirmed Brussels radio broadcast 40 minutes later said the road had been cut.

American machine-gun fire swept the concrete highway, built by Hitler as a military road serving the Rhineland and the Saar district.

Infantry advanced to Brunesberg, 5½ miles east of the Rhine and 5½ mile southeast of the highway junction city of Segburg. Other 1st Army units pushed north of Honnef and still others were in Honnef, six miles east of the Rhine and seven miles southeast of Remagen.

The Germans were building up their strength in the area of Remagen and made the wholly unconfirmed assertion that their bombers had destroyed the Ludendorff bridge and nearby pontoon bridges supplying upwards of 70,000 foot and tank troops the enemy said were in a 25-square mile area 25 miles or the German heartland.

Deepen Foothold.

The U.S. 3rd Army bridged the wide Moselle under machine-gun and deepened their east bank foothold to three miles. The crossing was made against stubborn German resistance of the German 7th Army, which had already taken 64,000 prisoners to Lt.-Gen.- Patton's Army since January 30.

The Moselle / crossings extended from slightly to 17 miles northeast of Coblenz, major traffic centre on the Middle Rhine. Other 3rd Army troops lined up to the north of Coblenz, major traffic centre on the Middle Rhine. Farther south, the resurgent U.S. 7th Army invaded Germany's Saar district anew and captured at least six German towns, including Wehrden the largest steel mill in the Saar to be taken intact. Voelklingen, an industrial city of 31,000, was menaced imminently, as was Saarbrucken, capital of the district and a ruined city of 130,000.

The 7th Army advanced up four miles on a six-mile front against Saarbrucken, crossing the frontier and reaching the Saar River at several points, Shaffhausen, Wehrden, Geislautern, Claremthal and Schoenecken all toppled.

Skies were clear for a second day, pressing further heavy Allied attacks.

With the Ruhr already smoking as much from bombing and shelling as from industrial production, the question was how much longer its factories and forces could continue to feed steel to the German war machine.

74 Enemy Vessels Sunk, 25 Damaged By British Subs

London, March 15 — (CP)—Royal Navy submarines sank 74 enemy vessels and damaged 25 others in recent periods in Far Eastern waters, the Admiralty announced today.

Vessels destroyed included a small trawler, a mine-layer, an armed trawler, an anti-submarine trawler and a naval auxiliary. The balance were junks, motor launches, landing craft and coastal vessels.

In one action a British submarine fought a running battle with a Japanese convoy of five coastal vessels and an armed trawler, off the northeast coast of Sumatra. The trawler and one coaster were sunk and the remaining four coasters driven ashore.

No British submarine was listed as lost.

Three Fugitive German Prisoners Are Apprehended

London, March 15—(CP)—Tired and hungry three fugitive German prisoners of war came out of the woods at Bridge End 40 miles and were seized a short time after escaping a main road.

Their capture left at large 13 of the trio escaped in a mass break from Brigend camp last Sunday.

Visitors at Yalta Parley Learned Russian Secret of Surviving Toasts

By DOUGLAS R. CORNELL

By The Associated Press)

Washington, March 15 — (CP)— At the end of the second full day of the Yalta Conference there was time out for a bit of relaxation.

President Roosevelt gave a dinner for Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin, and their top assistants. Mr. Stalin gave a similar dinner Feb. 8, and Mr. Churchill Feb. 10.

At all the dinners there were toasts in the Russian manner — sometimes so many that the food chilled and leg muscles got sore from popping up to drink.

Observant visitors quickly learned the Russian system of toast-making. The toasts could be diluted between times by sipping water or drinking something like cider.

Even the Russians didn't down a beer glass of vodka every time. Some of them occasionally took Scotch and soda, and were not required only touching the glass to the lips. But please had to be drained when one individual toasted another and again for what the hosts called "big toasts" — to a confinty or chief of state, for example.

Stalin's Dinner Rigged

Mr. Stalin's dinner was the biggest and the only one to which the American newspaper men at the conference were invited. They were: Mr. Churchill's daughter, Mrs. Sarah Oliver, a WAAF; Averell Harriman, Mrs. John Boettiger, and Kathleen Harriman, daughter of the American ambassador to Moscow, W. Averell Harriman.

The menu included caviar, bread and butter, consomme, sturgeon, roast beef and macaroni, cauliflower, sweet cake, tea, coffee and fruit — and vodka and five different wines. The cauliflower was a rare treat, because fresh green vegetables are scarce on Russian tables.

Since the Russians brought 14,000 persons to the Crimea, the visitors were't limited to the formal dinners. They — and caviar — were on the table for all meals, breakfast included.

At the formal dinners there was no formal attire. Mr. Roosevelt wore his customary rumpled gray suit both days. Mr. Churchill embellished his business clothes with a tremendous black sealskin hat. Mr. Stalin always appeared in uniform.

1,350 PLANES HIT FREIGHT YARDS AT ORANIENBURG

New 11-Ton Volcano Bomb Used for First Time To Knock Out Berlin-Ruhr Railway

London, March 15 (CP)—A fleet of 1,350 American bombers attacked the outskirts of Berlin, including the huge freight yards at Oranienburg, nerve centre of the railway by the R.A.F. of a new 11-ton volcano bomb.

British and Canadian bombers were in action during the night, striking at the Western front supply centres of Zowel-Russchen and Homberg, while Stirlings rocked at Berlin for the 23rd straight night.

More than 5,000 Fortress and Liberator crews participated in the operations yesterday during which the new 11-ton bomb was introduced in the attack on Heidelberg.

The Air Ministry announced that six to eight spans of the viaduct and railway line, Western front supply centres of Zowel-Russchen and Homberg, while Stirlings rocked at Berlin for the 23rd straight night.

More than 5,000 Fortress and Liberator crews participated in the operations yesterday during which the new 11-ton bomb was introduced in the attack on Heidelberg.

The Air Ministry announced that six to eight spans of the viaduct and railway line, an armed trawler, an anti-submarine trawler and a naval auxiliary. The balance were junks, motor launches, landing craft and coastal vessels.

In one action a British submarine fought a running battle with a Japanese convoy of five coastal vessels and an armed trawler, off the northeast coast of Sumatra. The trawler and one coaster were sunk and the remaining four coasters driven ashore.

No British submarine was listed as lost.

Unsuccessful Attempt To Arrange Armistice Says Stockholm Paper

Stockholm, March 15—(AP)—An unofficial British statement today confirmed reports that a German approach to Allied representatives was attempted here a few days ago with a view to a possible armistice, but said it was unsuccessful.

An approach was attempted a few days ago through a third party to a junior member of the legation staff," the unofficial British statement said.

"The third party was at once told that the British Legation was not in the least interested in any such approach.

Apparently the German effort to make contact with the Allies was made only through the British Legation because the American Legation denied that any feeler had been attempted there.

The third party mentioned in the unofficial announcement apparently was a Swedish business man, who, other informants said, was approached by a prominent Nazi official in the hope of using him as a medium for talking to the Allies.

Planned German Propaganda

Responsible Allied officials generally regarded the incident as a crafty planned German propaganda manoeuvre in an effort to split the Allies by causing mistrust, dissension and suspicion of double dealings.

The Stockholm newspaper Svenska Dagbladet, which reported the attempt, said the German peace feeler said the Germans had urged the Allies to begin negotiations for an armistice while Germany was still strong enough to act as a bulwark against the "Bolshevik menace."

Svenska Dagbladet said the attempt failed because the German representative predicated their bid on the condition that the Nazi government should continue in power.

The newspaper said the approach to the Allies was made early this month.

Svenska Dagbladet said the German "made it basis for their insistence that the Nazi government be permitted to remain in power on the grounds that only Adolph Hitler and Reichsfuehrer Himmler had sufficient authority to reconcile the German people to the idea of suing for peace.

Declines Made at Parley

The German, trying to contact the Allies, the newspaper asserted, was made at a conference at which Reichsfuehrer Himmler attended. "Von Ribbentrop headed the peace attempt, Svenska Dagbladet said, but Himmler, who, however, was said to have talked with Hitler all night long, was against it. It was essential to use force.

The article said the Germans had failed to evacuate all occupied territories now in their possession which include Norway, Denmark and parts of Holland.

The Germans were reported to have left behind fifth column organizations, urging the Allies they would continue the struggle against Germany now while she is weakened, unless they took a back-seat against the "Bolshevik menace."

AMERICANS SEIZE 2 SMALL ISLANDS IN SIBUYAN SEA

Mindanao Invaders Push Five Miles East of Zamboanga In Accelerated Drive

Manila, March 15 (AP)—United States forces, making their 22nd and 23rd invasions of the five-month-old Philippine campaign, seized two small islands in the Sibuyan Sea Tuesday.

Invaders on Mindanao island pushed five miles east of captured Zamboanga in an accelerated drive.

U.S. 24th division infantrymen, veterans of Leyte, Bataan and Corregidor, invaded Romblon and Simara, islands at night and, "attained complete tactical surprise," a communique said.

The Japanese garrisons were wiped out, American losses were light.

Romblon and Simara are strategically situated in the heart of the Philippines between the north and central Philippines. Their capture strengthened the American hold on the main shipping route from the United States to Manila.

On Mindanao, invaded last Saturday, the 41st infantry division captured the town of Malahay and Harlow, north of the two captured Zamboanga airdromes, while patrols advanced eastward to seize Pasonanca, Recodo and Mampang, all miles beyond Zamboanga.

On Lizon Island, U. S. troops debouched from captured Antipolo on the strongly-defended approaches to Manila, but the enemy others turned back several counter-attacks on high ground to the north, inflicting heavy casualties.

South and forward of Antipolo, main advanced east and north of captured Batangas and began clearing the Batangas peninsula between Batangas Bay and Balayan Bay.

Heavy bombers pounded southern Mindanao in support of the ground bombs. Bornao was hit with 60 tons.

FIRST CANADIAN HOME DEFENCE TROOPS IN ACTION

General Opinion is That They Are Well Trained, Can Handle Weapons

By ROSS MUNRO

With the 1st Canadian Army on the Rhine, March 14 (Delayed)— The first of Canada's home defence troops to go into action with the infantry during the recent 1st Canadian army offensive battled for days of fire and handled themselves satisfactorily, an unofficial survey shows.

There probably were fewer than 100 who actually took part in the action and it is too early yet to make a final appraisal but on the basis of first impressions commanding officers have no criticism to make. Their performance was that of well trained troops.

More than 1,350 heavy bombers and 600 fighters of the 8th dropped 3,000 tons of bombs on the main railroad centres of the Ruhr and the Weser-Rhine rail bridge at Ysoho and Bad Oeynhausen.

OSAKA'S 150-ACRE ARSENAL BLOWN IN RECENT RAID

Blasts Shoot Superforts 2,000 to 5,000 Feet in Air Over Target

Guam, March 15 — (AP)—Maj.-Gen. Curtis E. Lemay expressed belief today that Japan's entire arsenal — vital to the Japanese war effort — was blasted out of action in five days, laid waste a five square mile area in the heart of industrial Osaka. One of the chief targets was the Osaka arsenal.

May Defer Income Tax Payments

Ottawa, March 15 (CP)—Finance Minister Ilsley said yesterday that the government is considering whether income tax payments, due April 30, could be postponed if they were last year, until after completion of the Victory Loan campaign.

Last year the deadline for the payments was moved ahead from April 30 to Aug. 31 to give taxpayers the opportunity of subscribing to the Victory Loan while the campaign was in progress and to pay their income taxes later.

Mr. Ilsley said officials declined to comment on the possibility of the deadline being given another extension, but did say that if the delay was granted taxpayers would have the full period to April 30 as they did last year.

Mindanao Invaders Push Five Miles East of Zamboanga In Accelerated Drive

By ALEX H. SINGLETON
(AP Staff Writer)

London, March 15 — (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill held out hope today of victory over Germany this spring, pledged his dominant Conservative party to promotion of free enterprise in the post-war period, and served notice that he intended to guide Britain in the trials of peace.

"Victory lies before us, certain and perhaps near," he told the Conservative Party Conference. He said the war in Europe might conclude "before the summer ends or even sooner."

The 2,000 delegates gave their leader a tumultuous ovation as he concluded his 46-minute address.

He cautioned the Conservative Party against "quarrels and blandishment" and against bidding for votes and party popularity "by promising what we cannot perform."

Temper Test

The speech obviously test after recent sharp exchanges with left-wing critics in the House of Commons, the Prime Minister struck out at "the Socialist crusader" and their program "for nationalizing all the means of production, distribution and exchange."

He asserted that would imply "not only the destruction of the life of the whole of our existing system of society and, life and labor, but the creation and enforcement of another system or systems borrowed from foreign lands, and alien to our islands."

By contrast, he declared that "at the head of our mainmast we fly the flag of free enterprise."

"We are determined," he said, "that the native genius and spirit of adventure, of risk taking for peace as in war shall bear our fortunes forward in the markets, trade and trade for our people, and that good and thrifty housekeeping, both national and private, shall sustain our economy."

Homes Damaged

With more than 1,000,000 British homes damaged or destroyed, Mr. Churchill said:

"Never was there a time when so much was planned and worked for and so much remained to be turned into peace into action. Nothing is more clear than that when the war is over the world will face an acute shortage of the necessities of life. It would be madness indeed to cast away the immense food production which has been achieved in the war."

Speaks on Pacific War

Turning to the war in the Pacific, Mr. Churchill said:

"The scale of the war against Japan is limited only by the amount for that will readily be forthcoming; it is limited by shipping and by the necessity to maintain the vast ocean spaces and through steadying jungles."

Charges Japs Ordered Soldiers To Kill as Many Filipinos as Possible

San Francisco, March 15 — (AP)—Bitterly describing "coldly premeditated atrocities" in Manila, Brig.-Gen. Carlos P. Romulo was back in the United States today with a sheaf of documents and films to "indict the Japanese people on the charges of murder."

The resident Commissioner of the Philippines, machine-gunned in Manila yesterday after a reunion there with his wife and four children, said He arranged to leave for Washington this morning.

Romulo told reporters "The rape of Nanking was a picnic compared with what the Japs did to Manila."

He said he carried documentary evidence that Japanese Imperial Marines in Manila had received orders from Tokyo to kill as many Filipinos as they could.

"The Japanese were irate in having failed to get the support of my people. They wanted to make an example of the Filipinos to influence Greater East Asia."

Romulo said that inside Manila's Intramuros (walled city) the Japanese herded virtually every man into Fort Santiago, doused the place with kerosene and set it ablaze.

"I saw the inferno. Women died," he declared. "Only those escaped, through machine-gun fire, do describe the horror.

"I myself left Santiago later and I saw the burned corpses lying helter-skelter. Bombs were holding on to the heels of retreating Japs when I touched them."

He related that women and children were mowed down as they sought to escape the conflagration in Intramuros, a breach made by American artillery.

"I saw the body of a daughter of a banker I knew. She had been raped and then cut in two with sabers."

YANKEES RAISE AMERICAN FLAG OVER TWO JIMA

Island Cut Away From the Japanese Empire After 55 Years

Guam, March 15 (AP)—The Stars and Stripes waved on the heroic soil over blood-stained Iwo, 760 miles from Japan, signaling that the island has been cut away from the Japanese Empire after 55 years.

But the 36-day-old fight for the island went on with, three U.S. Marine divisions pressing relentlessly in the last enemy and adding him to a toll already exceeding 20,000.

While stiffly-resisting survivors of the enemy garrison yielded gains up to 400 yards yesterday to the Marines near the north end, the island was officially declared formally at the south end in the shadow of Mount Suribachi.

A proclamation suspended "all rights of government of the Japanese Empire" and vested Dem in Admiral Nimitz as military governor of the island.

28,986 Japs Killed.

Nimitz's daily communique announced 30,000 "as a very close approximation of casualties — 2nd extended to 30 days on official silence of the heavy cost of the fight. Between the two as an air base and eliminate it as a menace along the 3,293 route to Japan.

The last American casualties were 6,821 — 4,189 marines killed in the first three days of the fight, was 5,722, including 644 killed.

4 Carloads Local Eggs Shipped Overseas Weekly

Farmers and poultry raisers in the Bay of Quinte district are doing their share in producing the 600,000 cases of eggs which are needed overseas by mid-October according to one local egg buyer whose staff is being rushed by the egg volume during the past few weeks.

According to this buyer's estimate there are approximately four carloads of eggs shipped out of Belleville each week for the overseas market. These include only grade A firsts and mediums, while other grades are processed at Trenton for shipment overseas in the dried state.

Eggs for shipment overseas by the end must be packed with the word "Canada" stamped in two inches high on each shell. Each egg is then "Canada" and packed in new cases. Government inspectors both at the packing centres and on the receiving docks at the ports check the respective standards are adhered to.

To meet with the increased demand for eggs, poultry raisers in the district have been asked to "sit on" as one stated, also, farmers are now making plans for next year's crop to cope with the result that there is no definite reason given for the increase has come earlier than usual.

Chairman of the committee is Alan Mood and many other features are being planned.

Canadian Legion Buys Building In Simcoe Park

Trenton, March 15 — As a permanent headquarters and social centre for veterans of all wars, Trenton Branch of the Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L., has concluded the purchase of what is known as the armory building, bordering the Simcoe Park, Trenton. It is understood that the price paid was in the neighborhood of $4,000. A campaign to raise funds to purchase the building has been under way for some time and it is now revealed that over $1,300 is now in the treasury. The latest donation totals $50 from the Town Council; $500 from the Trenton Kinsmen; $1,000 from the I.O.O.F., and the same amount from the Trenton Lions Club.

The building will be greatly improved when possession is forthcoming. It is now used by the military authorities but will privately owned, it is large enough to take care of the uses to which it will be put, and will be a memorial to the boys who have served in all wars. Club rooms and other conveniences, will be provided.

Zweibrucken City Wiped Out by CanadianBombers

London, March 15 — (CP Cable) —R.C.A.F. heavy bombers last night struck the small German city of Zweibrucken, 11 miles east of Saarbrucken, in an all-Canadian attack except for participation of R. A. F. Pathfinder planes.

Every squadron of the Canadian bomber group was represented and all aircraft returned safely.

"The town must be largely written off," said FO. A. C. D. MacKenzie of Hamilton, Ont. "We saw violent explosions all the way as we turned in to the target and as we left. Smoke must have hit an oil dump."

Sqdn. Ldr. W. J. Smith of Oak Bay, B.C., said visibility was "wonderful" and target indicators were dead on. "Bombing was perfect and only negligible flak were encountered."

Canadians also were well represented in an R.A.F. attack on Homberg, 10 miles beyond the western front, the enemy had a concentration of troops and supplies.

Part of Strikers Vote To Return

Hollywood, March 15 — (AP) — The first break developed today in the ranks of Hollywood's A. F. L. film craft unions strike as the film technicians local 683, voted to return to work, regardless of picket. The technicians represent 900 of the 17,000 studio workers on strike. By a majority vote the technicians upheld the stand of their leaders who declared that the strike was a wild-cat walkout, striking nothing to do with wages, hours or any logical union claims.

The first of the returning technicians starts this morning to develop the backlog of exposed film shot during the first three days of the strike.

Feint in Burma

It is recently reported 30,000 Japanese have been cut off by the latest surprise move of the British 14th Army in Burma.

This was probably one of the most brilliant operations in a campaign notable for its brilliant generalship. The Japanese simply did not know what was happening, which is why the news was held up for several days.

General Slim achieved surprise by putting on a demonstration of establishing a bridgehead at Ngasun where the Irrawaddy flows westward from Mandalay. This move was a direct threat to Mandalay itself, and the Japanese reacted in the manner looked for. They sent up armor for support against the British-Indian attack. It came from the Pagan-Pakokku sector further down the river, where the Irrawaddy flows southward.

It was then that the British armor dashed through Pagan and Pakokku, against relatively little resistance, and drove eighty-five miles eastward to Meiktila, which has been the H.Q. of the Japanese Fifteenth Army. After a five-day battle this important point was taken and then the British armor pushed on and took Thazi, twenty miles further east, and eighty miles south of Mandalay.

In the long run this is a much greater disaster to the Japanese than will be the loss of Mandalay. Meiktila has eight airfields, all ready being used for bringing in Allied airborne troops. It is an important point on a branch line of the Rangoon-Mandalay railway and the Rangoon-Mandalay road. That is a still more vital communication centre, being a junction on both the road and the railway.

With the British and Indian forces astride the Irrawaddy as well, Mandalay is surrounded on the north, west and south. But what is more important, the Japanese forces are cut off from retreat, reinforcement and supplies by all three of the only routes to Rangoon—river, road and railway.

Perhaps the remoteness of Burma is the main reason why this campaign continues to be regarded as a rather minor affair. But it seems likely that when the war itself becomes remote, SEAC's Burma Campaign of 1944-45 will stand out in perspective as one of the great campaigns of history—both for the strategic importance of the victories and for the military innovations and tactical inventiveness of its commanders. This campaign began with much head shaking, among people thousands of miles away from the theatre, over an apparent threat to India. Now it seems destined to become, in the words of the current cliche, one of the 'text-book' campaigns of the future.

False Nazi "Enthusiasm"

How false is the enthusiasm of a German broadcaster is indicated in a report from London describing a broadcast from Berlin in which the announcer said of the capital battle for Berlin: "The fighting is magnificent that "the fight must take place over and under the ground with enthusiasm and imagination and with all means of deception and trickery" and with "entire enthusiasm" which the broadcaster tried to infuse into the people was this reference that Lt.-Gen. Hausenchild, who has been given command of the forces defending Berlin, is a specialist in fluid fighting and is expert in modern tank warfare. The "enthusiastic" German announcer said that Hausenchield is "making use of all possibilities" and that the atmosphere of Berlin is intense and that the city is busily preparing for an impending street-by-street battle "to the very last" against the Russian forces who are now only 25 miles away as the German claim.

Words of Goebbels and Hitler and now the words of the German announcer sound very hollow, as if they were whistling to keep up their courage or to keep up the morale of the people of Berlin.

So the "mighty" Germans who defied the world, overran a large part of Europe in the name of Hitlerism in the end have lost all these conquests and have had to face the Allies on the German side of Germany's borders and even then are supposed to go into the battle for their capital over the ground and under the ground "with enthusiasm and imagination." The announcer's added remark "with all means of deception and trickery" can be interpreted by the Allies who have spent plenty of evidence in all overrun lands of what German "deception and trickery" can mean.

The mighty armies that Hitler flung east and west, north and south, are now much decimated and millions of their men are dead or wounded and other millions are prisoners and the rest with what has been added to their numbers by the people's army and young boys are "with enthusiasm and imagination" said to be entering into the defence of the square miles within Berlin proper. The German that looked upon themselves as world conquerors and superman are to be contented and happy by force with the operation of the defence of Berlin.

Hun power that was to be supreme on earth has shrunken to rather a little measure and that for the sake of Adolf Hitler and Germany's inhuman and mad inspiration to world dominance.

Two Hun Commanders Gone

There are now two German commanders out who had opposed the redoubtable Field Marshal Montgomery, they are Rommel and Von Rundstedt, the latter the expert on whom Hitler placed so great confidence for the campaign of North Africa and who there lost his reputation by the headlong flight which General Montgomery forced him to take down the north fringe of the continent of Africa again faced Montgomery in France and after a time was wounded, his injuries proving fatal. Now Von Rundstedt, another expert of the German army who has been pitted against the Allies in France and the West, and went into headlong flight across Europe before the Allies' invasion forces and has lost command of the German armies facing the British, Canadians and Americans in Germany, is said to be no longer in command while another report says he has been wounded.

Maple Sap

Before a tulip lifts
Its cup or lace
Of cherry petal slits
New fuel the trees store.
The maple makes it clear
That spring is here.

Before a robin sings
Or phoebe calls,
Before a brown bee wings
Through tangled halls,
The maple gives the sign
In proffered wine,

Before the pulsing heart
Has aught to say,
The maple currents start
Their eager way.
First couplets sing
The news of spring.

Home of the Gloucesters

(Australian News Letter)

Few changes were made at Yarralumla, the home of the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester in Canberra. The work was done on austerity lines.

One pleasing feature of the work was the demolition of four air raid shelters. The Duke and Duchess saw only newly-planted gardens.

The few additions to the furniture include a dining table for 50 guests.

The principal color scheme at Yarralumla is off-white, with various shades of blue. The floor coverings throughout are beige, except in the main drawing-room, where there is a jarrah floor with silky off-white Grecian rugs.

There are floodlit recesses for pictures in the walls of the main drawing-room. The chairs in this room are upholstered in aquarelle satin brocade with a tiny tulip pattern in white, blue, green and red of the chairs are painted in white.

The small drawing-room is upholstered in eggshell blue satin brocade with a small white pattern. It has small gold-painted chairs.

The main bedrooms are carpeted in beige, with hydrangea blue curtains with a white feathering front design. The chairs and sofas in these rooms are upholstered in English chintz.

SPEED AND SPACE

For countless years the human race
Has been controlled by speed and space;

At first, as far as man could run
In search of food, till day was done,

And thus he lived the whole year round
Within a certain stretch of ground.

Then, dogs were famed and horses trained
And thus a few more miles were gained.

With these, millenniums were passed
Till man discovered steam at last,

With steam and skill men came to own
Both telegraph and telephone.

Now, conquerors of speed and space,
Around the world they daily race.

Today—God grant it be for good—
They're made the earth a neighborhood!

Hears Tale of Woe From Barber

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Marianas Islands.—(Delayed)—On one of the small islands the other day, I got what amounted to getting a month-overdue haircut.

My barber was a soldier, barbering in a tent, and I sat in a wood-framed slack leather Japanese barber chair he had dug up on the island.

He had been trained in the conversational school of barbering, for as the snipped gray locks fell about my shoulders, he expert forth from him such a tale of woe and unkind fate as I have never heard in this life.

This barber was Pfc. Eades Thomas, from Mullens, West Virginia, near Lexington in the horse country. By the time he had finished his torture before the war, and was never a barber at all. He just fooled around with the run-down barber-shop.

Well, Thomas has been in the Pacific 30 months. He has been on duty as though he might as well count on settling down for life as another month ago he married a Scottish girl in Honolulu. Shortly after that he was shipped on out here, and he hasn't seen her since.

"I'm worried to death," he said, and I could have too. I felt so terrible about it. I couldn't get it off my mind, and was telling it to an officer that evening.

"Oh," he said, "it happen to know about that. I'll go and tell Thomas right away and fix it." And off he had. We got orders not to send the prisoners home after all, so the whole thing was called off. Nobody went."

Which is the kind of joy you get when you stop jabbing yourself on the head with the hammer, but at least it's better than if you kept on like it.

On that same island I ran onto a couple of old Hoosier boys, who had followed in my inglorious footsteps at Indiana University.

One was Lieut. Bill Ross, who was editor of "The Daily Student" in 1936, just as I was for a while in 1935. Apparently it doesn't make any difference what year you were editor. The Daily Student, you will wind up in the Marianas Islands.

The other was Lieut. John Morris, from Anderson, Ind., who graduated from our illustrious alma mater in 1939. He was the navy officer who cancers out here. Life is kind of funny sometimes, but there isn't much to kick about.

Ross is now serving, they came and thrust a package into my hands, and said would I accept a gift from them. It was a gift that was a dark poisonous liquid with the label scraped off the bottle, but one which is much sought after out here.

A fellow does feel like a heel accepting bountiful gifts from strangers. But I gave him a beer a beer for a long time and it's too late to refuse. So I gracefully the gift and fled before they could change their minds. Thanks again, boys.

It'll be several weeks before I get around to doing some columns on the fabulous Seabees, but I do keep running into them on my meanderings about these islands.

The other day one of them came to see me. He was obviously middle forties, and very difficult and shy, and so polite I couldn't get him to sit down. He had on the green fatigue clothes the Seabees wear over there.

The reason he came was that he lives in Albuquerque, and just wanted to say hello. His name is Ben Wilson. He lives on a little farm Silver, and had been a postal clerk in Albuquerque for 18 years. Over there he is in charge of the post office for his battalion.

Ben Wilson may be typical of the craftsmanship and the sincerity of the Seabees. He is 43 years old, and his wife and 14-year-old boy back home, and wouldn't have to be in the war at all. But here he is.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Christie Street Hospital,
Toronto.

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,

To National Veterans of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties:

I write as one of you who will eventually have to have some clothes again. We must decide and plan now what course of action will be necessary to make ourconvention a success.

You remember the comradeship that existed in the forces; the give and take between the boys who are living together as pals, living for something that is worthwhile to everyone? Then you return, only to find yourself in the same harness and cutting each other's throats. Nevertheless, if we are to remain in the counties after the war there must be a change in our policy of living, and it is up to us to make the change.

The farmer must study and plan crop rotation, soil chemistry, weed control, power machinery and building. Remember, the farm with the filthy barnyard, rickety buildings, poor cultivation and unsanitary conditions must disappear. Never again shall the farmer become the pawn of monopolists, the packing and feed companies. We must keep the prices of the crops fixed so low as to barely pay the taxes. If necessary, more than 50 per cent must be owned produce shipping companies and cooperative exchanges. Machinery must be now industries introduced, preferably those that will manufacture farm products, and these industries should not be allowed to progress at the expense of the land by the one hour and thrive on the misery of people.

Our wood products should be protected for the future. The wood lots must be kept at the level of timber and cord wood cut, with no reforestation to be neglected.

We have a great asset as yet only partially developed, that is tourist business. Everything should be done to make our province the playground of the homeward, lakes kept well stocked, so that our district should be known as the real sportsman's paradise.

Whenever possible, every organization should promote adult vocational education. Our native crafts have been neglected for the sake of cheap machine-made articles. These must disappear if not revived. Every man, woman and child should have a hobby so that he can completely relax and enjoy life, getting away from dull toil.

So you see, we have a tremendous job ahead of us. Only by uniting can we accomplish anything. Get started some vocational education and work, not just appear at the meetings and conventions. Even though there are veteran organizations formed to aid in rehabilitation, they will be of little material fellowship and comradeship, (that we have enjoyed) unless we unite and overcome our own local problems.

We must guard against the drinking and squandering our savings that have been accumulated, and add this sum at hand to invest, added to our Re-establishment Credit or outright gift for specified purposes so that we may become in the end able to take our places as citizens and it will mean the difference between success and failure, precedences and poorly paid laborers. We must become producers, not consumers for mankind, not leeches or parasites. Our aim should be to become not be our prime object of living; rather our goal must be fair and honest living for all, for our fellow surroundings, good practical education and training for the next generation and for the future.

Finally, if any of you returned men are in Belleville any time, drop in and donate some money. Or your services will be paid up yet. You realize how many of us have claims in from the city and if Belleville is not doing so well by herself as she should be soon, one Thursday).

Some of our comrades have become bitter and cynical when they return home to find things so entirely different from what they decided.

Now, return to see people who evidently don't care to do their own fighting, "is about the way our Fascist bandits are doing everything possible after the present steps to establish an international security organization.

"It is worth noting the coincidence of the German attacks with the growing determination of certain Allied and neutral countries to by the American Isolationist

Izvestia Attacks Opponents of Plans For World Security

Moscow, March 18 —(AP)— Izvestia today attacked as "Fascist bandits" those in Allied and neutral countries who oppose current plans for the formation of an international security organization.

"The success of the Dumbarton Oaks and Crimea conferences," said the article, written for the Soviet government newspaper by Prof. E. Tarle, "is shown by the way the Fascist bandits are doing everything possible after the present steps to establish an international security organization.

"It is worth noting the coincidence of the German attacks with the growing determination of certain Allied and neutral countries by the American Isolationist

Triplets Tagged With "ABC" Names

Norfolk, Va., March 18 —(CP)— When Mrs. Ruth Mitchell at the Norfolk General Hospital, the first set of triplets born there, she got pretty excited. To avoid confusion, the nurses tagged the infants "A," "B" and "C."

Pretty Mrs. William W. Sawyer, their mother, liked the idea, so will she decided to tag the little girls' permanent names to fit the three letters of the alphabet. She named them Anne, Barbara, and Christina.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

YANKEE STOMACH

Yankee stomach, is not confined to any section of the country. It is somewhere, possibly in connection about their eating and drinking habits. Yankee stomach is found particularly that pass of digestion that goes on (a) in the mouth during mastication and (b) in the stomach for half an hour or more after the food has been delivered if the food has been well chewed. Come to think of it, that is the only part of the entire digestive process after which one may safely unwind. All the more reason why every one who values health, vim, vigor and life should keep all teeth in good working order at all times and all the time—his own teeth or his dentist's, that is immaterial so long as the teeth function efficiently.

The trouble I call Yankee stomach is a functional derangement, at least in the majority of cases, characterized by hyperacidity, hunger pains, heartburn, acid eructations (waterbrash), uneasiness from fullness after eating, by the usual local and general crankiness, impatience and irritability engendered by these discomforts.

One with Yankee stomach had better refrain from alcohol and tobacco or at most smoke only after meals, and drink coffee only if at all regularly and five or six light meals a day, rather than the conventional three meals a day, take plenty of time to eat and never indulge in any food which existence has shown him or her cannot digest comfortably. Such individuals must be now industries introduced, preferably those that will manufacture farm products, and these industries should not be allowed to progress at the expense of the land by the one hour and thrive on the misery of people.

Our wood products should be protected for the future. The wood lots must be kept at the level of timber and cord wood cut, with no reforestation to be neglected.

We have a great asset as yet only partially developed, that is tourist business. Everything should be done to make our province the playground of the homeward, lakes kept well stocked, so that our district should be known as the real sportsman's paradise.

Whenever possible, every organization should promote adult vocational education. Our native crafts have been neglected for the sake of cheap machine-made articles. These must disappear if not revived. Every man, woman and child should have a hobby so that he can completely relax and enjoy life, getting away from dull toil.

So you see, we have a tremendous job ahead of us. Only by uniting can we accomplish anything. Get started some vocational education and work, not just appear at the meetings and conventions. Even though there are veteran organizations formed to aid in rehabilitation, they will be of little material fellowship and comradeship, (that we have enjoyed) unless we unite and overcome our own local problems.

We must guard against the drinking and squandering our savings that have been accumulated, and add this sum at hand to invest, added to our Re-establishment Credit or outright gift for specified purposes so that we may become in the end able to take our places as citizens and it will mean the difference between success and failure, precedences and poorly paid laborers. We must become producers, not consumers for mankind, not leeches or parasites. Our aim should be to become not be our prime object of living; rather our goal must be fair and honest living for all, for our fellow surroundings, good practical education and training for the next generation and for the future.

Finally, if any of you returned men are in Belleville any time, drop in and donate some money. Or your services will be paid up yet. You realize how many of us have claims in from the city and if Belleville is not doing so well by herself as she should be soon, one Thursday).

Some of our comrades have become bitter and cynical when they return home to find things so entirely different from what they decided.

Now, return to see people who evidently don't care to do their own fighting, "is about the way our Fascist bandits are doing everything possible after the present steps to establish an international security organization.

"It is worth noting the coincidence of the German attacks with the growing determination of certain Allied and neutral countries by the American Isolationist

BOURBON WHISKY

The accepted English pronunciation of "Bourbon," when applied to the royal family of Europe, is "BOOR-bon" or "BOOR-bun".

As a rule the accepted term when "Bourbon" is a place name in the United States is "BUR-bun".

There is, however, one notable exception, in Kentucky the name of Bourbon county, which is also applied to whisky distilled and aged in the same stiff pattern.

Kentucky "Bourbon" is applied loosely to any corn whisky regardless of where it is produced in the United States.

In normal times Kentucky still accounts for more than half of the whisky production in the country.

Kentucky whisky is made mostly into two main varieties, bourbon and rye, both of which are Scotch and Irish. Federal law requires that whisky made in the United States in imitation of Scotch whisky must be labelled "Scotch type whisky."

Spring Fashion Show Staged By Hospital Auxiliary Vision Of Freshness and Loveliness

Seven Stunning Models Display Latest in Dresses, Coats, Suits, Sports Wear, Furs, Hats, Hand Bags, Gloves, Hairdressing, Jewelry and Cosmetics

Seven stunning Belleville models, radiating the exhilarating freshness and intoxicating loveliness of the Spring season, paraded before a large audience of stunning in the Capitol theatre on Wednesday afternoon and evening. The delightful concept was the Spring Fashion Show under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of the Hospital. The mannequins, assuming all the base, grace, charm and finesse of professionals, were striking pictures in the very latest styles in women's clothes and accessories.

Catching the eyes of the audience, made up for the most part of women, was the dashing sports wear in such Shetland wool, wool jersey, camel hair, plaids, crepes, strips and tweeds. Four-piece outfits comprising the two-piece suit, the top-coat and the slacks, which are proving very popular according to fashion critics today, were shown. Princess line coats and the ever becoming boxy models in browns, blacks and exciting new shades were displayed to perfection. A very youthful suit the thing for the younger set was a sports outfit of a check top-coat of Scotch tweed over a sports suit of red with navy binding. A coat, that is becoming increasingly popular is the new "shortie" which was quite a favorite in yesterday's display. A beautiful coat was a black crepe with beautiful scroll embroidery worn over a frock of grey and gold print. Afternoon dresses, striking.

The afternoon dresses were strikingly designed in plain crepes and silk jerseys and in daintily artistic floral patterns and print motifs. Shades of fuchsia, lime, lemon yellow, spun gold, lilac, grey, black, navy and brown, burst into bloom on the stage in the fascinating street-length gowns worn by the models. There were combinations of shades like navy with lime, violet with lime, fuchsia with lime and black with Chinese red. Many of the frocks emphasized the new drape effect and the cap sleeve. Accentuating the use of drapes were various attractive designs in beading and braid.

Definitely alluring were the "character costumes" in the fashion parade, particularly the saucy bicycle sailors with their cap demurely under the chin, the little jaeger Sissy sailors with provocative streamers and the more sedate sailors with contrasting flower brims. The very latest in clothes were seen on some of the models.

Gems of Accessories

The purses were most decidedly "gems" of accessories. There were fussy pouches, tailored envelopes and various types of "Kiber" bags in leather, suede, corded silk and alligator designs.

The various ensembles, worn by the models blended in perfect harmony with their accessories and were chosen with a definite eye to style.

Some very beautiful fur coats in box and princess styles, emphasizing the plaid tweeds from which they were made. There were also fine Muskrat Flank in the new boxy blouse effect, a fascinating Silver Fox jacket was stringsy presented by one of the models. Scarfs shown throughout the show included Canadian Sable, Russian Squirrel, Red Fox, Kolinsky, Silver Fox and Canadian Mink.

Accenting the charming ensembles of the models were the beautiful glamor pins, earrings and bracelets.

Mrs Stoble Commentator.

Commentator for both the afternoon and evening performance of the Fashion Show was Mrs. G. H. Stoble, who on behalf of the Hospital Auxiliary, extended a welcome to everyone. "We are appealing to you again for our hospital", she said. "We have had a difficult time to keep going. The hospital has been overcrowded. Today people are becoming more hospital-minded. We as the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, exert no influence in the running of the hospital as only help we by contributing money in certain instances when called upon by the hospital", Mrs. Stoble listed various things bought by the Auxiliary for the hospital. She expressed the appreciation of the auxiliary for the help of the general public.

Mrs. R. H. Wray, president of the Auxiliary, as the representative, spoke briefly to the assemblage. She stated that this was the fifth Spring Fashion Show presented by the auxiliary. "Since their inception in 1938, they have raised over $5,300 by various projects", she said. Mrs. Wray made mention and praised in glowing terms the Women's Christian Association which built and owns the Belleville General Hospital. The artistic genius of the show would be used in aiding the hospital", she said. On behalf of the auxiliary, Mrs. Wray thanked the models; the exhibitors; Miss Bond, special Helena Rubinstein operator from Toronto; the pianist, Mrs. Gordon Robertson; Mrs. George Stoble for her work as commentator; the management of the Capitol Theatre for their kindness, Mr. Chisholm and co-operation; the Stewart Warner-Alemite Corporation, for loan of equipment and operator; the Belle Theatre for loan of curtains, and the following Jewellery Stores and McKeown's Drug Store for their generous donations of prizes.

At the afternoon show, a lovely lady's Omega watch donated by Angus McFee's, was won on a draw by Mrs. R. L. Zufelt, 94 Coleman Street. A handsome walnut serving tray, generously donated by Wray's Home Furnishings, was won by Mrs. Harry Taylor, 95 Lingham Street. In the evening, another Omega watch was won by Harold Soubliere, 8 Wareham Street, and the Helena Rubinstein gift, donated by McKeown's Drug Store, was won by Mrs. M. Choinard.

The seven models in the show were Mrs. Edgar Buchanan, Mrs. Fred Carscallen, Mrs. Jack Marsh, Mrs. J. A. Lizotte, Mrs. Walter Hardon, Miss Barbara Leslie and Miss "Mickey" Forster.

The great success of the Fashion Show would not have been possible if it was not for the exhibitors. The J. A. McNab Limited donated coats, suits, dresses and sports wear; Miss Maude Campbell; Millinery; Grant Ashley, Furs; McIntosh Bros., Handbags and Gloves; Angus McFee, Jewellery; McKeown's Drug Store, Cosmetics; Mathieson, Cummins and Leeman's Beauty Salons, Hairdressing; Potter's Floral Shop, Flowers. The exhibitors also helped back stage. Miss Bond, special Helena Rubinstein operator, was here from Toronto on the occasion.

Mr. E. Shapiro and Mr. Grant Ashley on behalf of the exhibitors presented bouquets of flowers to the models, to the pianist and to the commentator.

Mrs. D. Gordon Robertson assisted at the piano during the show and furnished a very delightful musical background for the models. The members of the Hospital Auxiliary worked diligently in all phases pertaining to the arrangements and presentation of the Fashion Show.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

An Apology Is In Order.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I have just quit my job in a war plant. I am terribly disturbed by something I did on the day I left, and I would very much like your advice. Working with me in this plant were eight girls, ranging from nineteen years to over forty, and they were always at odds with one another about something not worth fighting about. By never entering their disputes I was able to get along somehow. On the last day at the plant four of the girls gave me a gift, and the other three girls who were hurt about this and said very disagreeable things. I was hurt, too, kept on working, and at the end of the day I left the gift on the table, telling one of the girls I could not accept the gift after the way the three girls made about it. Now I very much want to keep on the friendly basis I was with the four girls who gave me the gift. Mrs. Beeckman, did I do the wrong thing? If so, should I apologize? Or would it be better to forget the whole affair? If you think I should apologize, will you please help me word the apology?

Yes, you did the wrong thing, and you should apologize to these four girls who were trying to be so kind and generous to you. No matter what the "disagreeable" said, you shouldn't have let their disagreeable ones cloud the good thought of the four friends whom you like and whose friendship you want to preserve. You certainly muffed your chance to show that you stood on the side of kindness and friendliness.

Now, and as soon as possible, please, get yourself straight by apologizing to your friends. Write or tell each one how unhappy you are about what you did and that you blankly ask for their forgiveness; explain that you were upset by the unpleasant remarks of the other three girls that you impulsively did something that must have hurt their feelings, and that you are deeply troubled about your discourtesy. Tell them that you hope they will forgive their thoughtless gift to you, that you will treasure it as a token expression of their friendship, and that you hope they will let you see you soon so that you all may continue the friendship you so much value, so much want.

Host and Hostess Lead Guests at Anniversary Party.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1.—At a wedding anniversary dinner does the hostess sit at the foot of the table and the host at the apostle her, or do they sit together?

2.—Also, is it proper to display the gifts that have been sent?

A.R.

1.—Unlike the procedure of other kinds of dinner parties, at an anniversary dinner the host and hostess lead the guests into the dining-room, and sit together at the head of the table.

2.—Yes.

Introductions Are Not Always Necessary

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

The other day I went to a large tea at a friend's house. As I entered two women guests were leaving. The hostess greeted me, then said good-by to them, but she did not introduce me to them. I felt slighted. Don't you think she was impolite?

Claire.

No; your hostess was not impolite. It is not necessary, or customary, for a hostess to introduce an arriving guest to a guest who is taking leave.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Eat Wisely, for Beauty's Sake.

For her dietetic sins a woman pays in dip of the complexion, hair, teeth and fingernails. Her figure suffers, she may or may not be able to keep up with the styles. Some women are blessed with a normal appetite, get all the food elements they need for well-being, and are athletic, don't care what they eat or whether they eat at all, since the complexion of good coloring of fine texture is dependent upon proper nourishment, it stands to reason that every beauty-seeker should give thought to the important matter of stoking her digestive furnaces.

Appetite is susceptible to many influences. Worry and discontent will knock it galley-west. If you are a good feeder, you are likely to be a good eater. Some women who spend much of their time in the kitchen—setting, handling and smelling good food—get thinner. By the time the feast is on the table they are not hungry in it. Those women are enlisted to get away from the family dining table as much, and partake of food fare at a high class restaurant; it is little enough reward for their culinary labors.

Business girls, eating in solitude, get into bad eating habits. A meal should be a social occasion. Coon company makes food palatable. The one-woman party is seldom any fun.

The poorly-nourished body usually has a nervous system that is anything but sound. A lot of jittery, long-faced women who think every blind is raised against them, especially the hand of fate, would perk up and some allow if they made it a practice to down three man-sized meals a day.

If the human machine is not properly supplied with groceries, all sorts of unpleasant disturbances can take place. The complexion takes on an unwholesome cast because the soft undergirding goes slack and wrinkles appear. It is easier, cheaper, more sensible to partake of the food elements that are necessary to create energy and well-being than it is for a man around for beauty shops and spend a good-sized budget on cosmetics. After all, make-up is only the cover for the good-looks cake.

Every part of the body, every cell, every drop of blood—is dependent upon nutrition.

Let the finicky eater take inventory. What are the years doing to her? Is she getting raw boned and scrawny? That won't do. If she's a business girl, she must get exercise in the open air. A brisk walk every day will send her blood streams scampering; she will return home with a real desire to down at the table and partake of a respectable meal.

To have a balanced diet one requires a pint of milk and one egg a day, meat, fish or fowl, cereals, cheese, fruits, vegetables in proper proportions.

London, March 15 — (CP) — Designers of new printed materials for summer frocks have gone for inspiration to kennels, horses, elephants, birds and lines of scribbling.

Gurkha and Welsh Troops Make 40-Mile Forced March

Mandalay, Burma, March 14 — (CP) — Gurkha and Welsh troops of the Indian 19th Division, attacking after a daring 40-mile forced march over an opium smugglers' trail, have captured the Burma Road town of Maymyo, 35 miles east and slightly north of Mandalay, it was announced Tuesday.

Fall of the town placed the Allied troops in the path of Japanese falling back along the Burma Road before a Chinese onslaught from the Lashio area, 100 miles to the northwest.

Other troops of the 19th Division, meanwhile, continued occupying Mandalay block by block in heavy street-fighting. They now control more than half of the city. A further advance of less than nine blocks will seal off the Japanese holding out still in Fort Dufferin.

The thrust to Maymyo was made over a trail known only to a few Burmese. When the Allied troops stormed the town, the Japanese set fire to the government house and fled.

DAY FOR FEASTING

In France, people used to celebrate the day before Ash Wednesday by parading a fat ox through the streets, then killing it for the feast. This custom gave rise to the name "Mardi Gras" or Fat Tuesday.

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, Red Indian Squadron, bagging three German aircraft on his last sortie in Normandy.

Flt.-Lt. W. N. McLeod of Imperial, Sask., has set a record for the City of Edmonton, Squadron. On his seventh sortie he has shot a convoy of German transport, vehicles with their lights on, and this time he was hopeful he had destroyed 14 vehicles and damaged 16 more. He said: "Only one night bag ever chalked up in his outfit."

It was the second attack on that convoy in the same evening. P/O. Al. Nicol of (3617 McKinnon St.) Vancouver, found it earlier but had to be satisfied with five damaged vehicles because his guns were almost empty.

Two gunners stationed on an R.A.F. Lancaster bomber station in the north of England—one of them a Canadian—are on the warpath against German night-fighters during February.

They are Flt.-Sgt. C. R. Jones, mid-upper gunner from Ottawa and P/O. D. H. Roberts, rear-gunner from Bury, Lancashire, and they fly in the same crew.

Their fourth victory was an MB610 shot down on February 24. Jones has had six combats in 22 operations.

London Letter

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(CP Staff Writer)

London, March 14 — (CP)—Plans for reconstructing bomb damaged sections of Britain have started a war at home — between those who think the principal thing is to modernize old-fashioned towns and those who think everything old must be retained.

The argument started in earnest when Professor Patrick Abercrombie's plan for rebuilding a brave new London was made public. Undoubtedly it will continue well on into the peace.

Just now the discussion centres on suggestions for rebuilding Rowe, on the Sussex coast. Canadian troops were stationed earlier in the war.

T. R. Humble, Hove surveyor, has boldly advocated the replacement of ancient beauty by utility. Georgian architecture would give way to great blocks of apartments. The whole of Regency Hove including the famous Brunswick Square and Terrace and Adelaide Crescent, would be affected.

Mr. Humble expected plenty of criticism and he got it; but there has been little condemnation, too.

Charles Reilly, London architect, is one of his opponents. Writing in the Times he said he was "shocked" by the Humble plan and added: "Hove has a little farther along the sea front an Edwardian and later area, full of buildings of various colors and little merit, which could well be spared."

The strongest support for Mr. Humble's proposal came from the Daily Mirror.

"These squabbles are becoming so common that we had better decide whether we want post-war Britain to be one big architectural museum or a comfy home we can live with the maximum of comfort," it said editorially.

"We may as well scrap all our rebuilding schemes and continue to live in the Georgian and Victorian ages, if we are going to cling to the fetish that everything is sacred....

"In this country we have many clever young architects. They are yearning for an opportunity to design original and beautiful communities.

"Back them up, and there are excellent chances will create buildings which, in future centuries, will become as venerated as those of the old architects.

"Most of us want to live in the 20th Century, not in the Regency."

There the matter stands now, but the debate is far from ended even though the peril to Regency Hove is by no means immediate. It is protected by legislation which must be repealed by Parliament before the Hove council could acquire the gardens for public use and permit erection of new buildings of different character from those now standing there.

"Let's Get Going," Says Stalin Before First Session of Yalta Conference Called To Order

Churchill Talked Longer and More Frequently Than Either Stalin or Roosevelt

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

(Associated Press Staff Writer)
(Copyright, 1945, by The Associated Press)

Washington, March 14 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt discussed another "Big Three" conference at their meeting at Quebec last September. Shortly afterward plans for the Yalta conference were set in motion.

Difficulties arose, Marshal Stalin insisted he couldn't leave Russia; Mr. Roosevelt had to take care of his fourth-term campaign.

But Jan. 30, two days after his fourth inauguration, the President took a train at his home port, boarded a cruiser and set a record-making course for the Mediterranean. The President broke the trip with a stop at Malta Feb. 2 for a conference with Mr. Churchill on diverse with Mr. Churchill on diverse European and Pacific military matters.

A story made the rounds that Mr. Stalin heard about it and sent them a message: "I said Yalta, not Malta."

Mr. Roosevelt stepped into the role of chairman at Yalta since all sessions were held in the American quarters, Livadia Palace. At each session and, under way with Mr. Stalin uttering the Russian equivalent of "let's get going."

Has War In Morning.

In general, Marshal Stalin—as head of Russia's armed forces—ran the war in the morning and sat in on the conference in the afternoon. He sat on the President's right. Mr. Churchill on the left, each a third of the way around to huge round table. Top advisers and interpreters sat in between, to total reaching 30 at times.

Mr. Churchill talked longer and more fervently than the other two. Mr. Roosevelt interjected, seemed ruminating with hands or thick cigar, frequently his thumbered as he thought addressing parliament. Time after time the interpreters had to slow him down.

Churchill Wins Points.

Mr. Stalin spoke with less animation but he, too, outstripped the interpreter at times.

Mr. Roosevelt talked in a conversational rather than an oratorical manner.

Mr. Churchill was the most voluble when he was in the minority, and he won many of his points. It was he who was most insistent, for balance, on offering France a zone of occupation in Germany and chairmanship on the control Commission in Berlin.

Sometimes both of the leaders wanted to "sleep on" a decision—as did Mr. Stalin when the question for voting by members of the proposed International Security Organization came up.

This formula, worked out by the conference, dealt with a British suggestion, provides:

Slept on Proposals.

1.—That council member cannot vote on matters having to do with investigating a dispute to which he is a party, or recommendations for peacefully settling it, but...

2.—When it comes to application of force or sanctions, the vote of all five permanent members, seated unfamiliar with it. But he considered it promising and next day said: "I'll take it."

In effect there were two conferences at Yalta—one military, the other political. When major military decisions were made by the chiefs of staff they were laid before the Big Three. Normally these military agreements will become known only upon their execution.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

CANADIAN SPORT SNAPS
By PETER KIDDIER.
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, March 11 — (CP) — Ice is literally locked up tight this week away and golfers in most parts of the country are dusting their clubs out of the cupboard and taking a few practice swings in the living room or basement. The only gripe aside to the picture is the increasing scarcity of golf ball situation.

The thought foremost in the mind of every golfer today is how to secure a supply of reconditioned balls to keep them in stock through the golf season. The problem becomes more serious when information from the United States and England is added to what we already know. In those countries a great deal of golf is played during the winter months and their suggestions for how to save the "pills" are humorous.

The golf clubs have even begun to think of the percentage of their members through the members' inability to get supplies of golf balls. This is far from being a dream and is something club officials are trying to solve with ways and means of getting supplies of old balls to be reconditioned.

If you think it will work, you can try the advertisement that appeared in an Edinburgh golfing magazine recently. It ran something like this: "Whisky for golf balls. Bottle for four pre-war; 1/2 bottle for two; or record price given." We haven't found out whether the advertiser got results.

Madness' Methods:

They tell this story about Jean Paul Gignac, University of Montreal student, who plays hockey for Montreal's senior Royals. In the Royal-Hull Volants semi-final series last week, the Montrealers were two goals down going into the 3rd period of the second game. Gignac apparently had a skating date for Sunday and from that if Royals lost, the rubber match would be played in Montreal on the Sabbath.

To avert the calamity of missing his date, Gignac went out and scored a goal, cutting Volants' margin to one. The Gignac offerings resulted in Fern Majeau tying the count a moment later. Jean Paul skated over to coach Frank Carlin and said: "I'm going to get the winner, I've got to go skiing tomorrow."

And with the help of mates Jack Ownby and Ernie LaForce, that's exactly what the Collegian cager did.

Things and Such:

PO. Al Forman, the Montreal boxer and camp photographer who held the British lightweight championship, has been released from an R.A.F. hospital after receiving treatment for wounds. Al was a talented gunner . . . Ted (Toronto Telegram) Reeve, discussing revival of Big Four football, suggests the loop might turn into a Big Six, maybe even a Big Eight . . . the first thing Flt. I ALWAYS GET CLEAN, QUICK SHAVES WITH BLUE GILLETTE BLADES

Clem McCarthy
Ace Reporter on Gillette's Cavalcade of Sports — says:

"A TRIP through the Gillette factory showed me why I always get clean, quick shaves with Blue Gillette Blades. I saw steel hardened in automatically-controlled electric furnaces . . . saw the blades sharpened by grinding machines weighing several tons—yet so precise that they are adjustable to 1/10,000 of an inch. So my advice to any man who wants to enjoy shaving is to use Blue Gillette Blades."

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.

A Smile.

The amateur actors were rehearsing.

Mrs. Jones was required to kiss Mr. Smith and as they arrived at that incident, Mrs. Smith appeared, "Oh," exclaimed Mrs. Jones, "I hope, dear, you don't mind my kissing your husband."

"Not at all, darling, was the icy reply. "I don't mind in the least if he doesn't."

Good Showing.

Tom Burnett's Belleville "Y" juvenile hoopsters, the team that is being called upon to put out two Kingston cage squads, made a creditable showing against the strong Kingston Collegiate quintette on Tuesday night losing 26 to 22 and should have little trouble in hauling down the Limestone City students' three point lead in the return game here Friday night. Clark and Scanlon were the only Kingston players who gave Burnett's kids any trouble, while on the other half the Belleville quintette completely outplayed the Limestone City five in every department. In the last half, The fact the Belleville defence effort was so well divided makes matters, somewhat of a "problem" for Kingston in the second game. Wonnacott and Vaughan set-up a strong defence for the "Big Red" kids, while Vaughan, Spafford, Watson and Miller took care of the offensive play. Friday night's return game should bring out a capacity basketball house.

Incidentally tonight the strong Kingston "Army" team plays the Belleville Y intermediates in the Eastern Ontario final here. The Army enjoy a 19-point lead gained in Kingston.

A Rehash.

Maybe local puck fans don't know it, but Adam Brown, former Detroit Red Wing star now with the Kingston Army pro-hockey, is in military hospital in Kingston. It all came about when Brown, attempted to board Paul Raymond during last Saturday night's Army-Air Force game at Kingston. The smooth Raymond just wasn't around when Brown struck with full force. The result was that Brown bounced off the boards with a dislocated arm as the result what he had intended for the saucy Raymond. Incidentally, Don Willson, who played for the Bombers, was the star of this game that saw the Air Force beat the Army 8-5, that is along with goalie Robertson.

Here's part of Mike (Kingston Whig Standard) Rodden's account of the fiasco: "The visiting Canucks lived up to advance notices and pulverized players who have been places and knod those sawers. They had speed to burn and a rock-bound defence which even had Major Laycock shaking around in circles in efforts to discover flaws. They were also very shrewd attackers and to such an extent that on numerous occasions they made the Bears' defenders look very inept, indeed.

Having learned in advance that the Brown-Laprade-Smbo line is the best in the local league, the Flyers "bounded" these stalwarts throughout the battle, tying down the wings and generally having three players to look after the marauding Laprade. The system, however, was not without its flaws because the members of the Bruin first-string line did manage to collect nearly all the points as they strove with might and main to turn the tide."

Sweet Scoring Record.

Still more talk on the scoring ability of Peterborough seniors playing bush league hockey in Omemee, Peterborough Scout Fred Craig adds to his statistics this week. Fred says: "The column has for some time been making plenty of claims for scoring records for the razzle-dazzle line of the Omemee Black Hawks but last night with the aid of two referees and a timekeeper we really went to town as the scorers' department in the last half. The fact the Belleville statisticians were also well divided makes matters, somewhat of a problem

Horse Sensé Bridge

LESSON NO. 631
BY SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Never have so many owed so much confusion to so few as in bridge. Millions of bridge players are all balled up because of only a handful of opinionated experts.

Nationally publicized experts seldom agree on the same thing for the same way twice in succession. So, there must be something wrong with most of them. Let's see if we can figure what that goes to their followers.

Uncertain or changeable rules in bridge are an unnecessary ill. Bridge situations can be covered with a few simple guides and slant rules. Only rarely, if at all, do they need non-standard treatment. Experience either teaches or bids. If he bids, he follows T-A-N: takeout, assist, no-trump. A normal responsive bid denies seeing enough for a game. A jump advances seeing enough for a game.

If your jump is exactly one more than necessary (a one-jumper) it also admits holding two sure tricks. If your double—or higher—jumps you deny having two sure tricks. That could handle all responses until Gabriel blows his horn. It will take years for me to pound that into the skulls of beginners. And I expended like long enough to do it.

Scott opened with one club when north held this hand:

♠A 8 5 3 2
♥K Q 9 8 5 2
♣6 4 3

Scott's so-called expert said an immediate response of one heart was not best but one heart was better. That burns me up. It ignores the fundamentals. It is opposed to good reason.

A four heart response deliberately denies having two sure tricks. A one heart response deliberately denies having two sure tricks. A one heart response deliberately denies having tricky enough to help make a game. That is the formula for directing skilful information.

The only true response is two hearts, a one-jumper, designed to show at least six tricks with at least two sure tricks in it, standard. It tells what partner should know. It cuts out the guesswork.

STIRLING

Indo-China is Theme of Study Of Presbyterial

Stirling ... The regular monthly meeting of St. Paul's Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. Milne on Monday, March 12. The corresponding secretary read extracts from the annual report of Bethune Hospital describing the work being done, and the difficulties encountered under very crowded conditions. At this time a special collection was taken and will be forwarded to Bethune River to aid in the extension or equipment needs of the hospital. After the dedication of this generous offering, the president dealt with the business.

The annual Presbyterial meeting was announced and will be held in Holloway Street Church, Belleville, on April 19. The secretaries present reported for their departments, and the correspondence was read by Miss Caldwell. Mrs. H. Davis, Mrs. A. Armstrong and Mrs. B. Thompson were appointed by the president as prayer leaders for the next meeting. The monthly financial report was given by the treasurer, and Mrs. E. G. Bailey read a letter from Mrs. Trumpour, Conference Branch officer, on finances.

Mrs. Bradburn and group then presented the program for the afternoon, the theme being "The Kingdom of God in the World". The following ladies offered short prayers and read Scripture passages between the singing of hymns: Mrs. R. Duffin, Mrs. G. Bradshaw, Mrs. Sommerville, Mrs. G. White. A reading describing the difficulties of a country minister, was given by Mrs. Bradburn.

The Study Book Chapter "The Church in Indo-China", was given by Mrs. A. Armstrong. After describing the physical and political geography of Indo-China the speaker told of the different religions. There are four main strands of thought in Indo-China, Buddhism, Confucianism, Brahmism and Animism. The youth of the country have been given the responsibility in organizing young people's societies, and there is much to help Christianize the spirit of Indo-China. The missionaries are two single women—the "kingdom of God" is their constant thought in the minds of the missionaries. In their work they can find to interest the people in the words of God.

Mrs. Harold Wilson contributed a solo, Miss Mae Currie was accompanist.

Mrs. Bradburn and group served refreshments and the thanks of all present to these ladies and the hostess were expressed by Mrs. Robert Christie.

Ladies on the committee were: Mrs. Bradburn, Mrs. R. Duffin, Mrs. G. White, Mrs. C. Linn, Mrs. J. O'Neil, Mrs. Sommerville, Mrs. A. Stinson, Mrs. G. Potter, Mrs. A. Scott, Mrs. A. Vanderwerf, Mrs. H. West, Mrs. G. Bradshaw, Mrs. Armstrong, Mrs. A. Wesley, Mrs. Sherry.

Red Cross Aids Navy, Merchant Marine

For the men of Canada's fighting Navy and Merchant Marine, who spend long uncomfortable winters at sea, the Canadian Red Cross has since the start of the present war collected and despatched literally millions of articles of comfort.

How these articles are received and appreciated is seen in the words of the Commanding Officer of a Canadian warship when he says: "I do not feel that anyone is better qualified to judge of their value than we who are serving in the North Atlantic. All your excellent aids are worn from the time we leave until we return to port, and only does the comfort mean so much but the added warmth increases our fighting efficiency."

"The ship has spent the winter in Arctic waters, stated an officer of another Canadian warship, "and we know too well that everything you have sent us is indispensable."

Information from the Canadian Red Cross reveals that in one year of war slavey articles of warm clothing, woollen comforts and supplies for Canadian sailors at home and abroad totalled just under two million. Every month a cash grant of $10,000 is donated to the British Navy League and Merchant and Navy Welfare Corporation of Britain for the purpose of purchasing materials to be made up into sailors' comforts and supplies, it is shown.

"We know the effort and labor involved in production and have the greatest admiration for the women who knit and knit week in and week out, and turn out amazing lots at Red Cross pool, never knowing their ultimate destination," reports Miss Mona Wilson, Assistant Commissioner for Newfoundland for the Canadian Red Cross. "We wish they could see as we do what a real necessity extra woollens are for the men travelling the seaways of the North Atlantic in winter, who are continually wet and cold and have few facilities for washing and drying their clothes, especially in small ships."

Catholic Women's League Holds Interesting Program

At the March meeting of the Catholic Women's League at which Mrs. S. B. Upper presided, many encouraging reports of work accomplished were received. Mrs. M. Hudson read letters of acknowledgment for donations received during the past month from the I.O.D.E., St. Michael's Radio League and from the Sisters in charge of the Sanctuary boys, and also one from Mr. J. J. Whelan and family for kind expressions of sympathy in their recent bereavement. Interesting communications were received from the Diocesan convenors of Citizenship and Social Welfare. It was decided that this organization would contribute $50. to the Literary Society of St. Michael's High School with which to buy books for the school library.

In preparation for the annual election in April, Miss A. M. Hurley, Mrs. T. J. Figrey and Mrs. W. J. Doyle were chosen to form a nominating committee. Mrs. E. B. Lally and Mrs. A. Wilkinson were named as auditors.

After the business part of the meeting, Mrs. E. B. Lally, Reg. N., gave a practical demonstration and instructive lecture on Home Nursing. This was followed by a short talk by Fit. Lt. J. Sweet, of concerning a few of his experiences when flying over Europe and Africa. Fit. Lt. Sweet is returning to England shortly. Rt. Rev. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson addressed the members briefly.

BETTER HEALTH RESULTS FROM IMPROVED FOOD

Girl Civil Servants at Ottawa Thrive on Well Planned Breakfasts at Government Hostel

Ottawa, March 19.—(CP)—The 366 girls who live in Laurentian Terrace—government hostel for junior women civil servants—are enjoying better health than ever before in the building's 18-month history, with a maximum of five bed patients in the infirmary any day this winter.

"This is compared to a maximum of 20 last winter," said Miss Juliette Robert, the hostel's nurse-matron, adding that she thought the decrease was largely due to the fact that most of the girls now regularly include fruit, eggs and milk in their breakfasts.

Before the girls came into residence many tried light housekeeping in boarding house rooms, frequently skipping breakfast to save time and money. Their hostel fees now include "grit" and three square meals a day.

Patients this winter have been treated for colds, flu and a variety of accidents, encountered mostly while skiing. Other serious cases have been one of septic throat and several of appendicitis. Recuperation at the hostel followed the operations.

"The girls have also been learning more about how to look after their health," said Miss Olive Cruickshank, manager, formerly director of Macdonald Hall, Guelph.

At Christmas 35 passed examinations in a first aid course given by Miss Robert and another 35 are taking the Sir John Ambulance home nursing course.

For Grade One Clerks.

The hostel, which was opened for Grade One clerks and stenographers June 19, 1943, is filled, and has a waiting list of 36. Girls may remain until they are promoted to a Grade Three position. A recent survey showed that 139 of the girls in residence were of "teen age, and 130 between the ages of 20 and 30. Rooms for two share in a double and $7 in a triple.

Entertainment is not a problem for the girls may leave their beau sweet visit them in the timbered, two-storey main reception hall up to midnight, when the building is locked. In addition, there are six common rooms furnished in habitant style—three on each floor—where the girls may be entertained, but most women friends are invited to join in at informal get-togethers in the girls' rooms.

Hostel dances in the modernly decorated cafeteria provide more formal entertainment, under the supervision of elected dance committees. Effie Reggie of Kirkland Lake, Ont., and Mary Ann Sharpe of Renfrew, Ont., were in charge of the last two, which held before Christmas.

"With night school, skiing and so on during the winter there isn't so much time for dances, but we are planning a couple in the spring," Miss Cruickshank said.

THE SECRET OF THE MARSHBANKS

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

CHAPTER 18

Cherry was standing looking at the other girl, startled. "I think I'll go to bed, Amy. I'm terribly tired."

"Try not, Amy said, with a little important stress upon the pronoun, "it's all sort of silly because I know this plan of everything else in my mind. Tonight he said to me, 'In ten days I will have the sweetest little wife in the world in my arms, and then I only hope he'll be that away, from me!' Cherry did you think he was fascinating?"

"Yes, that was just what I did think he was—fascinating," Cherry said wearily as she went away. Amy called after her: "He liked you, too!" But Cherry made no answer.

She went to her room and began slowly to undress. The thought of Kelly rose steadily to the surface of the moving sea of other thoughts, and a warm sense of comfort and happiness began to envelope her in spite of herself. He had come to see her, not anyone else. Nothing else mattered, now that Kelly was her friend.

Before she fell asleep she heard Fran and the judge came in, and Amy's voice in the hall: "Uncle Jud, could I speak to you a minute?"

"Tonight!" said the judge's pleasant voice in answer.

"If I could, Uncle!"

"All right, trot down to the library. Leave it there, Cherry heard him say, and then Fran's voice, "It's that confounded account, Jud, be firm with her!"

He followed Amy down, and there was silence shoveltairs. Cherry nervously excited, got into bed intending to wait until Amy came up, and to gather, if she could from Amy's manner how the conference had gone. But she was too sleepy. Long before the light in the hall went out she was deep in dreams.

They were troubled dreams. Someone was in danger. A horse's voice called out, "Help, help!"

Cherry sat up in bed, terrified at darkness, awoke suddenly cold on her hands and spine and knees. What was it? Somebody had called "Help!"

A shout came from the floor below, and then the sound of a revolver shot above the darkness sharply.

Cherry was at the door now. The hall lights rushed up and the light over the stairs. Amy was at the switch, pallid with fright; stout, sturdy Molly, with May and some of the other maids behind her, was running down from the upper floor, Fran, clinging to the banister, was on the stairs.

"What is that?" Fran said, in a quick quiet voice. "Let's not lose our heads. It was downstairs."

They all ran downstairs after Fran. Old Martin, the butler, was in the lead and they saw him pause at the library door. They re. ard him pause, and knock hrokenly.

When Cherry reached the door, Martin was on his knees at the body of his master, shot through the heart, was resting limply against his shoulder.

Days went by. There was a dreadful silence in the house; a feeling of emptiness even though it was filled with people. Old Mrs. Marshbanks murmuring to Fran in Fran's room; Amy tearful and frightened in hers; Cherry coming and going with colorless, shocked face; Gregory Marshbanks, tired and good-looking and serious, home from college, Molly and May, the two upstairs servants, Helene the maid, the Chinese cook and his helper, Martin, the butler and Rousseau the chauffeur, these were all there.

And besides these wife-officers of the law who had opened doors and locked boxes, taken their posts gravely and regularly at the entrances, checking everyone who went out and in.

Slumped all over on Cherry's memory, upon her inner vision as upon those of any one soul or them all, was the picture of that final moment of tragedy. The picture of the library, that comfortable, great desk lamp, of the revolver that the judge had shown Cherry that very afternoon, lying on the carpet a dozen feet from the desk. The body in the chair.

Judge Marshbanks had fallen back against his big chair, had slipped to the floor; it had been his voice that had first heard, shouting for help. Cherry recognized it as she remembered that dreadful sound in the silent night.

Since then the place had been in full possession of the authorities. The family, the servants were being eternally summoned for questions.

Fran, always pale, but now with circles under her eyes, had become into a strange frenzy of terror at first, had answered the first questions put to her with an hysterical shout. Then she had something to tell. But presently she had seemed to grow calmer and more coherent, and she had told Cherry with great satisfaction her simple story. She had come home from a Christmas party with her husband at about midnight, and had felt restless and headachy that evening, and Judge Marshbanks, who always went to bed at eleven at a reasonable hour, had been delighted to bring her home before the party was well under way.

The judge, her story went on, had been gone into the library for a talk with his niece, Amy Marshbanks, and Fran had gone to bed. She had heard nothing until his dreadful cry of "Help!" had rung through the house.

Amy was a poor witness on her own behalf, crying bitterly and breaking out with frightened self-defense in every word. She had asked Uncle Jud to talk to her that night—no, she wouldn't say about what—no, he hadn't gotten angry at her nor she at him—yes, it had agitated her a good deal, she had cried—yes, she had said, "Then I'll kill myself!" as Martin testified. No, Martin, going down to put out the lights, knew that she had gone upstairs before he spoke to Uncle, before Uncle said to him, "I've a little business to finish with Martin," and went out the lights!

Had the announcement of your prospective marriage anything to do with your conversation, Miss Marshbanks?" Amy had been asked. She had hesitated, had answered, "Why, I suppose it had, twenty-one now, and society had been very kind to me, Uncle Jud's present to her, intention to become the third Columbus Constantine.

On the other hand, the murdered man's mother had proved an incompetent witness. She had answered questions thoughtfully, evasively, wheeling away from the most appalling details.

They killed Jud Marshbanks!" headlined the newspapers. 'Everyone speculated, and everyone's guess seemed as reasonable as that of everyone else's.

"Cherry, you must have a theory," Kelly said one day when they were climbing the hill at Sausalito behind Topolo, and had sat down on the trunk of a fallen eucalyptus to "breathe" after the winter day of sunshine and blue skies.

"I have a theory," she answered judicially. "And Amy would add one to that. She has strong suspicions of you."

"Interesting," commented Kelly, pushing out long legs lazily, and his laced shoes with the point of his cane.

"But after all, she may have no more than four," pursued Cherry, with one of her rare Amy hers self. Oh, I don't really think she suspects you of any sin! she interrupted his quick, surprised laugh. "But she has a feeling she knew that Uncle Jud was the only person who could really do anything about this question of her identity and mine. She was frightened about the status of it, and the money, of course, and above all, about Gogo. Amy knew in her heart that Gogo would have her flat if anything like that came out. She said to me yesterday that Jud wouldn't marry a woman without family background, and that she was tied up in his brother's estate. The brother has a son, but he's an idiot, so Gogo will be regent—as he calls it, some day—but it means he is always short of ready cash."

"Same old story, Marchioness. His father, or his grandmother probably, has a second claim to the title; nobody questions those claims, but they cost money. To learn as the others have! She'll be married to Gogo in a week, and about a half a million out of pocket. . . . So Amy," Kelly said, in a mildly pleased tone, "suspects me of—"

"I don't say she suspects you. But she knows that Fran, and that you were there that night, and she asked me the other day if I thought by any chance you and Uncle Jud could have had a quarrel—"

"Ha! I wonder if she suspects Gogo?"

"She was in perfect terror until you'd been cleared."

"Amy is like a person completely innocent."

She let him look at the same time she and I and the old lady are hiding what did actually go on that night, what the discussions and quarrels were about, and I marvel sometimes that Kelly, the police, don't smell a rat!"

"There's Fran!" Kelly said thoughtfully, stuffing his pipe, "Fran, she wouldn't."

"She's just the one who would, and could, but for all that I don't think she did," the girl mused. "Fran is one of those curious women whose moods are entirely personal. If she wants to do a thing, it's right."

"Who was she telephoning to that night, Kelly?"

"Any one of a dozen men. Men fall for her the way soft coal goes into basements."

A few moments later, they returned to the house. Cherry pulled on her hat and handed Kelly her coat to hold for her. "I hate to go back!" she said.

Kelly adjusted the collar in back, squared her about with his big hands on her shoulders and carefully buttoned her coat.

"You don't have to go back, you know," he said, after a moment in which he had closed his throat.

"It would be so good," she said, her raised face close to his, so long here. Just peaceful days and meals and digging in the garden and climbing the hill. We could have a grill outdoors, you know, and have simple suppers over for Sunday lunches, and then, when they left, it'd be so marvelous to go inside, and close the door against the night and the dark, and light lamps, and sit by the fire!"

"Why don't you do it, Cherry?"

"Because from the very beginning, Kelly, from the time I first knew you, I've known you didn't love me. And if I came here," Cherry said, "I'd want you to be so mad about me that you could hardly bear it. I'd want you to feel that marriage—marriage between us was a miracle, and that if we had

"Felt So Sick and Dizzy I Had to Quit My Work"

This Man Tells of Suffering With Gas, Indigestion, and Heartburn. Rheumatic Pain Set in Arms, Limbs, Back. Tells How Syntona Gave Him Grand Relief.

When the stomach is out of order and food fails to digest properly, but ferments causing sourness and a full, bloated sensation; when heart kidney action brings on nightfrings, backache and rheumatic pain; when bowels are constipated and you have headaches, dizzy spells and nerves are on edge, take a short treatment of Syntona and you too, may find that this same herbal medicine may be just what you need to put you on the road to better health again.

For instance, Mr. Joseph Martin, 18 George Street, Brantford, Ontario, said in a recent report:

"For about eight months with a bad stomach. I had indigestion, gas, heartburn, rheumatic pains in arms, limbs, back and shoulders. At times I couldn't work for a day. I would have to go to bed or sit on a chair for hours at a time. Rheumatic pains set in my arms, limbs and back and I suffered almost every day with a headache and dizzy spells. I felt sick and nervous and on edge I couldn't sleep.

"I tried many different things with disappointing results. I finally got Syntona and after taking a few doses the very first day I felt relief. I was surprised to find that my stomach trouble began to clear up. I kept on taking it until the gas, heartburn and indigestion all cleared up and I can enjoy my meals now without fear. Syntona has also relieved my kidneys and I no longer bother me and my nerves are calmed down. I feel fine. I am back at my work and I feel fine."

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Traffic Cases Dominate Court

Traffic cases dominated Magistrate Ponton's County police court today with two such cases being disposed of.

Sgt. Basil Busby, of No. 6 Repair Depot, Trenton, was convicted with a number of others that arose from a motor collision some weeks ago. A fine of five dollars and costs was imposed. Prior to the opening of the court William Goldberg of Ottawa, paid $36 and costs after being charged with speeding. The money was preferred under the Wartime Measures Act. The above charges, as well as another since R.T.A. count against Ray Hunt of Picton, which was enlarged for a week, were all preferred by Traffic Officer Harry Caldwell.

Sidney Welch, Belleville, pleaded guilty to a charge of indecent assault and was released to the custody of his parents pending final disposition of the matter. The evidence in the case was produced last week following which young Welch was examined by the government psychiatrist and found to be normal.

Zhukov Improves Positions For New Offensive

By DANIEL De LUCE
(AP Staff Writer)

Moscow, March 18 — (AP) — Sporadic Russian attacks from the mouth of the Don to the vicinity of Kharkov, Improved Marshal Georgy K. Zhukov's 141 White Russian Army, apparently positioned nicely for a new offensive as operational silence prevailed along the crucial Berlin front.

There were persistent German reports that the Russians had withdrawn across the Oder in force, between Kustrin and Frankfurt, and Breslau, but they have not been confirmed by Moscow).

Meanwhile, other Russian troops scored additional successes in sectors as far removed as southwestern Slovakia and East Prussia.

In the Slovak campaign Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's 2nd Ukraine Army captured Zvolen, heavily fortified German base on the upper Hron River.

Capture Eight Towns

Malinovsky carried the fight almost to the outskirts of Banska Bystrica, headquarters of last year's gallant Slovakian uprising, 10 miles north of Crvenica, thereby bridging the Carpathian Mountains these Soviet troops operated eight years in that area yesterday, reaching within 13 miles of Kremnica, astride the enemy's most important railroad and communications east of the Vah River.

The 3rd White Russian Army, closing in on Koenigsberg, set the Germans' coastal corridor defenses on the Baltic Peninsula capital blasting again under a heavy ground assault supported by warplanes, front dispatches.

Two thousand prisoners were reported taken yesterday in the vicinity of Brunsberg, and 1,200 captured there in the German stronghold would be quickly isolated.

Troops of the 2nd White Russian Army, meanwhile, lighted the siege rings around Danzig and Gdynia.

Probable Motive For Man's Death Will Be Disclosed

Toronto, March 15 —(CP)—Probable connection between the slaying of Louis Wernicki, alleged Toronto drug-runner, and murders of another in Lancaster, Ont., a week to days before he disappeared, was revealed by police here today following announcement an inquest into Wernicki's death will be held March 27th.

Police said they have learned Wernicki tipped off narcotic investigation officers of a shipment of drugs was on the way to the west coast.

The shipment was reported to have come from United States sources competing with a Toronto drug ring for control of the trade in Canada, police continued, adding evidence to this effect is expected to be introduced at the inquest.

The said several witnesses who had refused to talk when questioned by police will be come examined at the inquest by Crown Attorney James Parker Hall.

The bullet-riddled body of Wernicki was found in suburban Etobicoke last Jan. 26.

Houses Debate Financial Items

By The Canadian Press

Debate on financial matters which yesterday occupied the attention of four of the nine Canadian provincial legislatures in sessions in two houses.

Alberta and Ontario where divisions occured, and British Columbia and Prince Edward Island considered various financial legislation. The Quebec assembly discussed a motion calling for production of documents exchanged between the Provincial and Federal authorities with respect to employment of women in war plants.

Elsewhere, the Manitoba and Saskatchewan houses dealt with health and Nova Scotia and New Brunswick with educational legislation.

The divisions at Edmonton and Toronto arose from similar circumstances—the Administration was victorious in each case.

Legislature Approves Payment Of School Grants After Two Divisions Forced by Liberals

Immediate Payment and $8,808,000 Will be Paid as Advances on School Grants

Toronto, March 15 (CP)—The Ontario legislature Wednesday night approved immediate payment of $8,808,000 as advances on school grants to Ontario municipalities this month after Premier Drew's Progressive Conservative government survived its third division of the session by a 68-18 recorded vote.

The advances—providing $6,594,360 to public and separate schools, $1,246,750 to secondary schools and $935,000 to vocational schools—were approved by the House in committee after C.C.F. members vigorously denounced the basis of payment as "inequitable."

C.C.F. leader Jolliffe said that if the grants were based on those of last year, their payment would tend to make "the strong stronger and the weak weaker." Separate schools would suffer in this way.

Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell said the government had not seen fit to disturb the legal basis of difference between separate and public schools—a question no responsible person can play with.

Mr. Jolliffe earlier supported the government to frustrate Liberal leader Hepburn's third attempt of the session to oust the administration. The C.C.F. leader stated the party policy to oppose the government on a matter of principle but not on a point of procedure.

Hepburn Forces Vote.

Mr. Hepburn forced the vote on the question of whether the House would go into committee of supply to consider the education advances. The fiery ex-premier considered the government lacked majority support to establish the legislature and should not be allowed to proceed with the advance payment. All members C.C.F. supported the vote, and voted against the resolution.

Mr. Hepburn said before the vote he was willing to accept the result as a vote of confidence.

It was Mr. Hepburn's second threat at government of the day. Earlier he had charged that a letter from the highways department had ordered the McKenzie Petroleum Company of London to take a $45,000 bond to assure payment of gasoline tax collection from the A. E. Wilson Company of Toronto, with which Highways Minister George Doucett is associated. He demanded investigation and said he would take his seat on the outcome.

Produced Copy of Letter.

Mr. Hepburn produced a copy of the alleged letter, and said letters had gone to other gasoline companies with the same request as to taking bonds. He demanded a full investigation.

To Mr. Hepburn's charges, Mr. Doucett said: "I had just about what I'd expect from the member for Elgin. I had nothing whatever to do with sending the letter."

Premier Drew said the charge would be heard by the Public Accounts Committee.

Before the recorded vote, Mr. Hepburn argued against discussion of the estimates until a vote is taken on the C.C.F. amendment or the Liberal sub-amendment to the address in reply to the Throne Speech.

"The fate of the government is hanging in the balance," he declared. "We are out to beat this Tory government at the first opportunity. We have a confidence in it."

Premier Drew said the motion, by Provincial Treasurer Leslie Frost, was merely one to allow for payment from last year's funds on account of the 1944 grants to schools.

"We are here as a government just as long as the legislature supports us," he declared.

Method In Move Claim.

Arthur Williams (COF-Ontario) asked if the initial payment move were not made with an election in view. He wanted to know when the school boards would receive their grants.

Mr. Frost replied that it was published to make the first payment near the end of July and another in late October.

The motion carried, the House went into committee of supply to consider supplementary estimates. Debate on the Throne Speech is scheduled and will resume the House are a five-point C.C.F. amendment censuring, by 2 lack of confidence motion, in addition to Liberal sub-amendment.

The storm abated only slightly when the House took up the estimates. This time the Liberals and their Labor-Progressive supporters agreed that the advance payments was "trickery" and Mr. Hepburn called it an effort "to fool the public."

Scheme to Fool Public Charge.

Actually, he said, the government had made a promise in 1943 which should have given the school boards $22,000,000 or half the cost of education.

"This is a scheme to fool the public so the schools operate on the calendar year and the province on a different fiscal year," the premier said, is to take money from last year to pay, not last year's commitments, but this year's grants for the current calendar year. Last year the government had promised $22,000,000 "as alimony of about $2,000,000" on its promise of $22,000,000.

Mr. Frost replied that the move is "just being entirely honest and giving the hard pressed taxpayers a needed break."

"We're getting nearer election," retorted Mr. Hepburn.

Given First Reading.

Two bills were given first reading, Mr. Doucett, acting agriculture minister, introduced a sugar beet subsidy bill, providing, for payment of $14 a ton, this year's crop, and announced by the Agriculture Department. Yesterday, this subsidy speaks that paid last year. Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell introduced a bill amending the Fire Departments Act, enabling any municipality to establish the full-paid-by system for fire departments.

Controller Allen Lamport (Toronto St. Patrick) said during Throne Speech debate given to the Mines Department should be doubled to carry on "greatly needed" expansion of mining.

Agnes Macphail (CCF-York East) said that there is "not a single client room in the legislature building" for members to meet and urged construction of two new wings on the east block to ease the situation.

Canadian Fags Being Received By War Prisoners

Although it was dated last November and on sale then, the 1943 war prison camp in Germany, the fact that Canadian cigarettes are being received by our war prisoners was established when Chairman Hester Lishman received an acknowledgment of thanks for cigarettes received from the Ontario Flag Fund by Col. Cecil C. Merritt, V.C. this week. As writing space is limited on cards sent out of Germany, just those two accepted words were printed on the 1943 card along with Col. Merritt's address. They were very thanks, which expresses the feelings of many Canadians receiving cigarettes from home whether in prison camp or along the battle lines.

"Your fine gesture will always be remembered by the Belleville boys receiving cigarettes while here in Italy," assured L. B. Cross, words that were reiterated by Bill Morton and other Belleville boys in Italy. Similar comments have been received from the European front as well.

The list of Belleville boys sent individual shipments of 300 cigarettes each by the Kinsmen Flag Fund this week included:

He added: "Although it will be our ceaseless endeavor to hurt the utmost into the Japanese war; although we shall have to provide for the sustaining of our forces in Germany which has been assigned to us in the discussions with our principal Allies; nevertheless we should have to provide for the return to this country of very large numbers of our soldiers now serving abroad, many of whom have been separated from their families for years."

Stand Against Time

Britain in her stand alone against Germany had gained time for Hitler "that master of wickedness" to make a gallant stand. "Thus we gained the space for the United States to begin the marshalling of its great unmeasured forces of power, of science, and of valor.

"But there is another glory in which we may rejoice. In those terrible days the whole of our Empire and Commonwealth of Nations, apart from one melancholy exception, round the corner, stood together with us, of their own free will, from the greatest Dominion to the smallest colony in spontaneous resolve to die or conquer with us in a righteous cause."

In his first address to a full Conservative Party Conference since assuming leadership of this dominant political group 4½ years ago, Mr. Churchill declared:

"The continuance and ever more rapid progress of the war against Germany and the Nazi tyranny lead us all to hope that the glad free against whom for more than a year we stood alone, unflinchingly and undismayed, will be forced into unconditional surrender or beaten to the ground in chaos or ruin."

Hands Allowed to Free

In a brief but pungent criticism from Left-Wing factions in the House of Commons, the first time he later opened his Right-wing political party's address by saying:

"Many are the insults and slanders which we have allowed to pass —I will not say uncalled, but unanswered — for the sake of concentration on the war effort.

"We shall maintain this patriotic restraint as long as the National Coalition continues to work together in loyal comradeship."

He indicated clearly that he had no intention of stepping down from the driver's seat once Germany is defeated.

"Should it fall to me," said Mr. Churchill, "as it may do, to form a government before the general election, I shall seek out and only Conservatives but men of any party or no party who are willing to serve and thus invest our administration with national character."

Likely to Help Japan

Mr. Churchill didn't few minutes later, declared Britain was obliged to repay injuries inflicted by the Japanese "and the infernal cruelties they have perpetrated upon His Majesty's subjects, British, Australian, Indian, Burmese and Malayan alike."

"This requires an intense effort and no mood of war-weariness must prevent us from doing our duty to the last inch and to the last minute," he declared.

"This is no time for windy platitudes. The Conservative Party had far better go down telling the truth and acting in accordance with the verities of our position than gain a span of shabbily-bought office by easy and fickle froth and chatter."

Ns Times for Nursing

Hailing "those public men," Mr. Churchill cried, who seek to slide life's power down the slippery slope of vain and profligate undertakings. This is no time for humbug and blandishment, but for grim and stark facts and figures, and acids to test unpalatable facts.

"It would be very easy for us all to promise for ever to give each other presents, bonuses and gratuities in the most enthusiastic manner but it would be wise to be sure

3RD, 7TH ARMIES CLAMP VICE ON SAAR AREA

Reds Open New Attack in Stettin Sector

Artillery Smashes Last Hun Positions East of the Oder

Remnants of Koenigsberg Defenders Zone Divided

By RICHARD KASISCHKE
(AP Staff Writer)

London, March 16 —(AP)— The Russians have opened a powerful new attack against the last German positions east of the Oder in the Stettin area, a drumfire barrage today followed by masses of tanks and infantry, the Germans reported today.

In East Prussia the Russians announced a seven-mile thrust through to the shore of the Frischer Haff, a lagoon of the Baltic which divided the remnants of the 200,000 defenders of the Koenigsberg area into two pockets.

Another major attack has been started by Marshal Ivan Konev's 1st Ukranian Army north of Ratibor and in the direction of Neisse, southeast of Breslau in Silesia, the German communiqué said, and German penetrations were made. German broadcasts said several Russian divisions were involved in the drive toward Moravskaostrau, in the Ostrau area, 17 miles south of Ratibor.

Wide-Scale Merging —Up.

The Stettin and East Prussian offensives apparently were a part of a wide-scale sweeping behind advanced Soviet lines preparatory to the ultimate battle which the Russians may launch along the Berlin front and Elbe.

Stettin is the key to Berlin's north flank, for data the Russians have been reported on heights overlooking the city, Berlin's chief Baltic port, by artillery fire into the streets.

The other German bridgehead centres around Altdamm, the Stettin suburb on the eastern bank of the Oder which the Russians were reported to have penetrated at one time.

The Germans said most of the 300,000 inhabitants of Stettin had been removed. Moscow broadcasts reported that the city had been turned into a fortress.

Another German bridgehead garrison in Kolberg, Pomeranian port on the Baltic 65 miles northeast of Stettin, appeared to be holding its last. Moscow dispatches said the fall of the town is imminent, however, and a German broadcast said the garrison had been withdrawn to the northern fringe and harbor area of the town, and that the streets were "flooded with Russian troops."

On the Berlin front a German broadcast said the Russians had encircled Kiesen, 33 miles east of Berlin and on the north bank of the Oder, but that the encirclement had been broken.

The German reported Soviet bridgeheads west of the Oder have been enlarged to a depth of about 100,000 Russians, but Moscow had never publicly confirmed the crossing of the river.

Two Jima Saves 30 Superforts And Their Crews

Guam, March 16 — (AP) — Two Jima has saved about 30 Superfortresses and their crews from probable destruction, the 21st Bombber Commando said today, explaining the first dividends from the costly island fight. Already the 4,000 United States Marines have paid with their lives.

An Air Force spokesman said 30 B29s returning from the three great "incendiary" raids within the last week on major Japanese industrial cities landed at the Iwo airfield for emergency repairs. Without the island, he said, most of them never would have reached the Marianas bases. The lives of approximately 300 men were at stake in the 30 bombers.

The battle for Iwo, now 26 days old, was still being fought bitterly against steadily dwindling, but well-organized and armed, pockets of stubborn Japanese.

The Germans Tranocean radio was heard in London quoting a Tokyo dispatch that 1,000 enemy transports had been sighted off northeastern Iwo, suggesting the Marines may attempt to land at the rear of the enemy troops making a last stand at Kitano Point.)

Yankees Slash Crumbling Line On Luzon Island

Manila, March 16 (AP) — American infantrymen smashed a wedge two miles deep into the crumbling Shimbu line on Luzon Island today, perhaps trapping several thousand Japanese, and seized 15 more villages in the Southern Philippines to spread their Mindanao beachhead over 28 miles.

The Shimbu line, roughly fifteen miles east of Manila, was crushed by infantrymen who drove through Antipolo and the adjacent southern defence lines and seized a network of roads and trails off the escape route for thousands of Japanese.

Annihilation of the Shimbu line was speeded by a new skip-bombing technique of fighter-bombers that sent bombs skidding into the mouths of tunnels and caves.

On Mindanao Japanese artillery and electrically-controlled land mines, used for the first time in the Southwest Pacific, slowed the American advance northward from Zamboanga.

Beachhead Widened.

The invaders, captured the town of Malabang, five miles inland, while along the coast the beachhead was widened with the seizure of Manicanan on the east and San Ramon on the west.

Fighting in Leyte, where American rail and ship transportation is again operating, was limited to patrol clashes and fierce along the Shimbu line where trafficed Nazism groups pressed against Japanese entrenched in a series of caves and tunnels.

Other forces, clearing the shores of Batangas Bay on the south coast of Luzon, wiped out an enemy barge concentration and dispersed a small enemy force attempting to land at Bolo.

Four medium bombers sank a Japanese destroyer in the South China Sea. They also sent a 5,000 ton cargo vessel and two small freighters to the bottom.

Settlement of Polish Issue Most Complicated Task of Yalta Parley

EDITORS NOTE: This is the fourth of five articles on the Yalta Conference, based on first-hand information from its participants. Each article is written by a correspondent who joined President Roosevelt aboard the cruiser Quincy and returned with him to the United States from the trip. The reader behind the scenes.

By DOUGLAS R. CORNELL
(Associated Press Staff Writer, Copyright, 1945, by The Associated Press)

Washington, March 16 (AP) — Settlement of the Polish issue was the most complicated task of the Yalta Conference, it was disclosed today.

Judging by the time they spent discussing it with parliament and Congress, it was the point on which Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt —felt themselves most vulnerable.

It took two days of intensive work by the foreign ministers—and even then Mr. Roosevelt felt obliged to say he wasn't altogether satisfied with it.

The fact is, there was a definite conflict of views, even as to facts. Give-and-take came only after the Russians presented the first meeting.

Some trouble arose because any settlement appeared likely to conflict with Atlantic charter declarations for territorial integrity of small states and their right to select their own governments.

More trouble arose because Russia recognized the Polish government seated in Lublin, Poland, whereas Britain and the United States recognized the Polish government in London.

Finally, territorial issues of no small proportions.

Against the charter of a century, Premier Stalin said, Poland was driven far toward the westward which Germans invaded Russia. To seal off this gateway Stalin insisted on Curzon line as his western boundary.

Mr. Stalin said he could not accept anything less even though it might actually carry a third of 1939 Poland. He was entirely frank in explaining the necessity for this, and the United States might soften toward Germany to the point where Russia could not be expected to power again.

Mr. Stalin said he wanted a Poland he could trust, and a Poland strong enough to check any future attack long enough to permit Red armies to go into battle beyond Polish borders.

The Yalta agreement, generally given Russia in the current line, compensation. Poland will get "substantial accessions of territory in the north and west"—bites out of Germany.

While the action on Poland has been interpreted widely as a diplomatic victory for Russia, the premier had to make concessions with respect to the Polish government.

He agreed to reorganize the Lublin government by bringing in other "democratic elements." He consented to an arrangement under which representatives can be entered on the make-up of the new government. They committed to set it up as one Russian, one British and one United States member.

BOMB-BLASTED BERLIN UNDERGOES 24TH NIGHT RAID

Germany Army Staff Headquarters at Zossen Pulverized By 600-Plane Attack

London, March 16 (CP) — Bombblasted Berlin underwent its 24th consecutive R.A.F. night raid on Thursday night after speciallytrained American fliers had climaxed a peak day of Allied air operations with a 600-plane pulverizing attack on German army staff headquarters at Zossen, 30 miles south of the German capital.

R.C.A.F. heavies joined other R.A.F. bombers in the attack on Hagen in the industrial Ruhr, 10 miles south of shattered Dortmund and left it a mass of flames.

The R.A.F. also hit oil refineries at Misburg, near Hannover.

U.S. 8th. Air Force officers reported that the Zossen night attack, which was the first time Berlin's outer defences had blasted, Carefully Briefed

The attackers, carefully briefed for the vital task which was part of an overwhelming assault on Berlin area communications, only sporadic and light anti-aircraft fire as they attacked the army headquarters buildings above ground. Part of the Zossen target is known to be deep underground.

The big attack was aimed at paralyzing the nerve centre thru' destruction of communications, offices, vital records, barracks, utilities and transport.

The bombers dropped 6,000 high explosive bombs totalling 1,500 tons, and 125,000 incendiaries that the burning fliers said started fires that soon engulfed many buildings.

7,000 Planes Over Germany.

From 6,000 to 7,000 Allied planes took advantage of a quiet day, free of the weather to step up yesterday's operations over Germany from the Ruhr south, east and west to a near-record.

Thirteen bombers and three fighters were reported missing.

The R.A.F. Bomber Command struck snow at the vital Arnsburg rail viaduct with giant 11-ton bombs.

The R.C.A.F. participated in the R.A.F. attack on Misburg. Thruout all operations eight Canadian planes are missing.

ALLIED DRIVE THREATENS HIGHWAY

With new pontoon bridges thrown across the Rhine by American combat engineers, and the Remagen bridgehead being rapidly expanded, Nazis face the cutting of their vaunted superhighway paralleling the Rhine, 15 doubleheaded arrow along Hitlerian lines indicates how its capture would give the Allies paths to either the Cologne or Koblenz areas.

AUSTRALIA TELLS WORLD OF PROUD RECORD OF ARMY

Units Fight From Greece's Mountains to Jungles of South Pacific

New York, March 16 (CP)—Australia placed before the world today the proud record of her army which has fought from Greece's rugged mountains to te steaming jungles of the southwest Pacific and is still battling Japanese in the islands to the north.

On the page book, "The Australian Army at War" summarized the record in search of the fighting forces of this country of 7,000,000 people which so far in 29 campaigns collected 2,500 awards for valor including 11 Victoria Crosses in five years of war and suffered 56,828 casualties, nearly half of them prisoners.

As the book went to press a new phase opened in Malaya, where the land handed the Japanese drive south its first setback in 1942 and prevented invasion of their homeland, were mopping up Japanese, by-passed in the islands to the north in the advance to the Philippines.

The Australian army previously fought in epic battles of the twenty desert, Greece and Crete before lining transferred to the southwest Pacific, were back in Australia following a six months respite after their gruelling New Guinea campaign, in which United States troops also fought.

Respite Necessary.

The respite, said Gen. Thomas Blamey, Australian commander-in-chief was "very necessary for the rehabilitation and reorganization of the Australian army which has borne the brunt of two years land fighting in New Guinea."

The merit of these successes first won Milne Bay on the eastern tip of New Guinea in 1942 and then in the Owen Stanley mountains, "where they were achieved against weight of numbers and equipment and by troops who only then were yearning the lessons of jungle fighting, in which the Japanese had been trained for a very long time," the book declared.

The Australians saw first action late in 1940 when one division participated in the initial Allied western desert offensive. These troops served in Greece and Crete also. The other Middle East divisions fought, mainly, Italians and Germans in the later western desert campaign.

Dictated by Events

Progressive withdrawal from these fronts was dictated by outbreak of the Pacific War. The 6th Division was the first to be sent home, in the 7th. The 9th did not return until after the Battle of El Alamein in October, 1942, by which time the Japanese southward drive had been checked and the 9th was fighting in other "democratic elements." He consented to an arrangement under which representatives can be entered on the make-up of the new government. They committed to set it up as one Russian, one British and one United States member.

AIR MARSHAL BREADNER WILL RETIRE APRIL 1

Former O.C. of Trenton Air Station in the Service Since 1915

Ottawa, March 16 — (CP) — Retirement of Air Marshal Breadner as Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief of the R.C.A.F. overseas and his replacement by Air Vice-Marshal G. O. Johnson, at present Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief, Eastern Air Command, Halifax, was announced today by air forces headquarters.

The change is effective April 1. Air Vice-Marshal Johnson is expected to leave for his new post shortly.

An air force spokesman said no reason was available immediately for Air Marshal Breadner's retirement. Born at Carleton Place, Ont. he is 51 years old. He enrolled as a native of Woodstock, Ont., in 49.

In 1939 Air Marshal Johnson was in charge of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan which winds up March 31. Up to January the plan had graduated, 122,000 airmen and employed approximately 15,000 planes.

Chief of Air Staff

Air Vice-Marshal Breadner was Chief of the Air Staff in Ottawa at a time when the R.C.A.F. was expanding rapidly. It was under his command that the Canadian Officer overseas that the strength of Canada's air force squadrons overseas was raised from one to 48, now operating in widely-separated theatres.

Almost continuously in the air service since he enlisted in the Royal Naval Air Service in 1915, he saw service in the First Great War with the naval arm and later with the R.A.F. He retired in 1919 but the following year was again connected with flying as air certificate examiner for the Canadian Air Board. Join R.C.A.F. in 1924.

In 1922 he joined the Canadian Air Force and was Acting Controller of Civil Aviation. He joined the R.C.A.F. on its formation in 1924 as temporary wing commander in command at Camp Borden, a post he held until 1928 when he became acting director of the R.C.A.F.

He became chief of the air staff in 1940 with rank of air commodore and was later promoted to Air Vice-Marshal and then an air officer. He was appointed vice chief of the air staff until late 1943 when he went overseas as air officer commander.

Air Vice-Marshal Johnson is another First Great War flyer, who began flying and the R.C.A.F. in life work. He was an R.F.C. fighter pilot in the last war with a record of 12 planes. He joined the Canadian Air Force when the armistice was signed.

After filling many important air posts in Canada in the following years, he became assistant director of air training in 1939 with rank of air commodore and successively held the posts of assistant director of Civil Air Operations and Senior Air officer with headquarters at Ottawa.

DUKE OF WINDSOR GOVERNOR OF THE BAHAMAS RESIGNS

No Immediate Plans But Will Likely Stay In the Bahamas For Another Month

Nassau, The Bahamas, March 16 —(CP)— The Duke of Windsor, who steered the Bahama Islands through a war-time economic storm during his term as Governor, will leave this colony or 70,000 next month.

An announcement that His Highness had resigned the Governorship which he has held since Aug. 17, 1940, and that he would be succeeded by L. Murphy, Bermuda colonial secretary, came yesterday as a surprise to many.

The Duke himself said the resignation should not have been unexpected, pointing out that by the end of April he will have served for but about 3 1/2 months of a term of five years, usually the maximum tenure for colonial governors.

Apparently the Governor was somewhat surprised himself by the timing of the announcement. He was reported to have cancelled a golfing engagement to meet government officials when the news was made known from London.

While Bahamians and Britons alike appreciated the part the Duke and his American-born Duchess would go to the Windsor ranch in Alberta, journey to southern France, or live in the United States. His departure had he had no immediate plans for the future, but would probably stay in the Bahamas for at least another month.

Wanted 'a Quit

It was reported today that the Duke of Windsor had wanted to quit last December when Oliver Stanley, Secretary of State for the Colonies, visited here. He was said to have agreed to remain at his post until a successor was named.

Recovering from their shock, Bahamians of Nassau today were almost unanimous in their praise of His Highness' accomplishments as Governor.

They had good words too for the wives and war relief activities of the Duchess, who served as president of the Bahama Red Cross, revived children's clinics and devoted much time to the welfare of colonists.

Married Six Years

The Duke and the former Mrs. Wallis Simpson were married six months after he quit the throne in 1936 and since they lived in Europe until the outbreak of war, when they returned to Nassau. The Duke was then assigned to general staff work at Nassau.

Today the Nassau Guardian in an editorial voiced the "heartfelt regret" of Bahamians at the Duke's resignation. The newspaper praised his "personal initiative" of the Duke in his efforts to improve the lot of colonists and declared that the Duke's presence helped to make the colony's finances "sounder than at any other time in the long history of the Bahamas."

Hopes for Chinese Unity Before Allied Landings Hit New Low

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
(AP Staff Writer)

Washington, March 16 — (AP) — Hopes held here for unity of warring Chinese factions reached another low today.

There appears to be little chance now, according to diplomatic reports, for a wholehearted consolidation of the Chinese Communists and the national government in time to help Allied landings on the China coast, regardless of when it occurs.

It is expected, therefore, that the prospective campaign to bring the civil factions — fallure to bring the two Chinese elements together cremated, and the fighting of political parties. The appeal was made to the United States and to the views given by that country.

Also, they have asked for but been denied lend-lease assistance.

The official Washington position is that unity between the Chinese and his government must be supported in the war effort now directed to Japan in Asia and that the Communists must be regarded as an opposition party in China.

Americans Race To Outflank Hun In Siegfried Line

Bridgehead Forces Lengthen River Line to 13 Miles

By JAMES M. LONG
(AP Staff Writer)

Paris, March 16 — (AP)—American troops fought within 300 yards of the almost-vertical Rhine-Hindenland "superhighway" today and advanced up to two miles overnight into Koenigswinter, lengthening their east Rhine bridgehead to 13 miles.

A hundred miles to the south, the new U. S. 7th Army offensive rolled forward along a 50-mile front from Saarbrucken to the Rhine, and serial reports indicated the Germans already had started their flight to Frankfurt from the Saarland and Palatinate.

Nut-Cracker Squeeze

The U. S. 3rd Army, applying a nut-cracker squeeze from the north on the Saarland and Palatinate, moved out of its Moselle River bridgeheads and cut off Coblenz and raced 12 miles to the southeast in Frankfurt from the Saarland and Palatinate.

The U. S. 3rd Army, applying a nut-cracker squeeze from the north on the Saarland and Palatinate, moved out of its Moselle River bridgeheads and cut off Coblenz and raced 12 miles to the southeast in Frankfurt from the Saarland and Palatinate.

The Gap Widens

The U. S. 3rd Army, applying a nut-cracker squeeze from the north on the Saarland and Palatinate, moved out of its Moselle River bridgeheads and cut off Coblenz and raced 12 miles to the southeast in Frankfurt from the Saarland and Palatinate.

It was the 4th Armored Division which made the long dash through and beyond the Moselle bridgeheads established by the 5th and 90th Divisions. The casualty rate crossed anew air miles southwest of Coblenz and six points south of Mayen.

Advance United States 1st Army troops possibly already were astride the big military road east of the Rhine. To the south, elements of 3rd Army's 7th Army crossed the Rhine at Worms, a burning mass of bombed - out ruins.

Last Holdings West of Rhine

The Saarland and Palatinate both were largely pried loose from Germany—and these were the last German army holdings west of the Rhine.

The 3rd Army was also swinging south from the middle Moselle behind Merzig and fortifications on the Saar River.

The Germans reported assertions that the Americans had reached the east of the Rhine bridgehead had penetrated to Siegburg and been severed; they expressed as fact that the Americans had driven to Lt.-Gen. Patch already had committed at least six divisions.

Today the Nassau Guardian in an editorial voiced the "heartfelt regret" of Bahamians at the Duke's resignation. The newspaper praised his personal initiative" of the Duke in his efforts to improve the lot of colonists and declared that the Duke's presence helped to make the colony's finances "sounder than at any other time in the long history of the Bahamas."

REINFORCEMENT PROBLEM SOLVED SAYS M'NAUGHTON

Expresses Hope Long Service Men Overseas Can be Replaced by New Men

Grenfell, Sask., March 16 — (CP) — Defence Minister McNaughton said in an address here yesterday that the reinforcement problem has been solved and expressed hope that long service men overseas could be replaced by new men.

Gen. McNaughton, enumerated as Liberal candidate in the Qu-Appelle Federal constituency, told of efficiency and skill of Canadian commanding officers overseas and explained to his constituents that he returned from the command of Canadian Army overseas because of difference of opinion with "certain people."

The defence minister indicated the shift in command of the Army is to get a matter for public judgment when he said: "I cannot disclose the certain people now because it would be improper for any discussion, but the day may not be far off when all can be told."

Will Be Justified

He said that when history of the events is written "what I did will be justified in the eyes of every right thinking Canadian."

He added that a person could only serve when he had confidence in those he served. Gen. McNaughton said that he had carried out orders given him. "As I thought that orders given me were right and for Canada, I asked to be relieved," he said.

Gen. McNaughton likely will figure in a three-party battle in Qu'Appelle at the next general election. Mrs. Gladys Strum has been nominated C.C.F. candidate and the present Member of Parliament is K. M. Perley, Progressive Conservative. The Defence Minister replaces J. A. Virtue as candidate, the latter withdrawing because of business reasons.

THREE-LEGGED CALF

Following in the lead of governments throughout the world, even nature has started a system of rationing according to a report emanating from the Ridge Road district here. A milch cow owning by Everett Mason, Ridge Road, recently gave birth to a calf with only three legs. Apparently normal in all other respects this freak of nature has only one front leg and weighed approximately 75 pounds. It eats normal very well, according to Mr. Cook.

Child Killed When Run Over By Coal Truck

Three-year-old Bobby Boyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Boyd, 386 Albert Street, was instantly killed just before 5:00 o'clock today when he was run over by a loaded Gregor Lehigh coal truck as it was backing out of a driveway sideways in front of the Boyd residence.

The youngster had been playing with his tricycle which he was riding on the sidewalk, the dual wheels of the loaded vehicle passing over his head on the cindered driveway. Neither the driver of the truck nor those in the house saw the accident.

Driver of the truck, Mr. James Beich of this city, stated to police that the Boyd boy with four other children had been playing in front of the Boyd residence as the truck was driven up. The driver's helper, Arthur Lewis, had moved the children back from the sidewalk away from the driveway and had gone to open a gate at the rear of the premises. As the truck was being backed across the sidewalk the child apparently ran back from the driveway and by into the path of the moving vehicle.

The truck driver did not see the child as he was in the cab and was behind the truck from the right side.

First indication the driver had of the accident was when Mr. Lewis turned from the driveway and did not see the lad underneath the wheels.

Coroner Dr. Thomas Wallace said the death of the boy was conducted this afternoon at the Belleville General Hospital.

A prime store does not seem like a life-saving invention, but in a military hospital in France it turned out to be just that, according to information received from Canadian Red Cross welfare officers in France, Miss Ruby Cobbett, of Belleville, among them. Surgical instruments were sterilized over the primus stove when it was supplied by the Red Cross when no other means of sterilization of instruments were available. "The nursing sister said it would have been impossible to perform those operations without that little stove," Miss Cobbett said.

Miss Cobbett is one of a group of over 200 women and girls who are working overseas as volunteers with the Canadian Red Cross welfare staff. Working in co-operation with the Canadian Army Medical Corps it is their job to welcome the men from Newfoundland to Italy they are among the first women in such jobs as driving ambulances, canteening in the hospital and in hospital and bringing them comforts and necessities, teaching handicrafts and doing jobs too numerous to mention.

"If take my hat off to the Red Cross," writes Corporal Howard Mason, convalescing from wounds in No. 3 Canadian General hospital in Italy. "They do a fine job. Every day we are visited by a Canadian Red Cross welfare officer. She always has writing materials, stamps, cards, books. Every soldier on entering the hospital receives a little bag containing toothbrush, soap, razor, toothpaste and powder. The Canadian Red Cross are certainly good to us."

Fully trained along the lines of a combat soldier, living in battle dress and carrying their possessions in 60-pound packs on their backs while in the field, these Canadian girls are present wherever servicemen need them.

Your organization has supplied women of great adaptability and resourcefulness, many of excellent qualifications," stated Lord Bennett, former Prime Minister of Canada, in a cable to the Canadian Red Cross. "However engaged, they have won the confidence and admiration of the appropriate authorities.

Proving herself a brilliant student at Collegiate here, Miss Sharpe entered University at the age of 16 years at a time when scholastic standard every consideration being given medical students.

In all 240 doctors were listed as being successful in the exams. Among the successful candidates were 39 women, one of them Lillian Banting, widow of Sir Frederick Banting, co-Discoverer of Insulin. Dr. Wilma Pearce.

Belleville Reaches One-quarter Of Red Cross $25,000 Objective

Approximately one-quarter of the $25,000 objective set by Belleville's quota of the 10 millions of dollars to be raised by the Canadian Red Cross, has been obtained Chairman Morley Duff announced today.

This amount is gratifying, he said, inasmuch as the general canvass has just gotten under way, and increased momentum during the next few days, Mr. Duff believes will be very satisfying response on the part of the public here.

An outstanding contribution in the county is the annual donation of $1,000 by the Canadian Corporation of the Delaro Smelting Company which recently forwarded its cheque for $1,000.

Besides several substantial contributions have been made by individuals in the city, the general campaign will bear the brunt of achievement of the objective. Chairman Duff pointed out correctly the public towards canvassers who are going from door to door and afford to the furtherance of the Red Cross effort here.

Since the begining of the war, he pointed out, the industry, loyalty and ability of Belleville citizens and others in Red Cross work have produced magnificent results. Thirty-nine million supplies and comforts have already been shipped overseas.

13 Million Articles Supplied.

Some 13 million articles have been supplied to the members of the armed forces overseas, of these 6,000,000 by the Canada. Millions of pieces of civilian clothing and 1,000,000 pairs of blankets, quilts and bedding have gone out to the men and boys in such as Dover, England where the need was critical.

Ever since the first blitz in Great Britain, Canadian Red Cross has supplied the victims with clothing of clothing. The same is true of the destruction rendered the families have been re-outfitted with extra warehouse with the exception of shoes.

Nothing new Germany has stripped each country as she fled it, stores of clothing and bedding which were left behind by the invaded Allied countries. This is only one example of the work of relief which the women of Canada are doing. The funds are also distributed by their own Red Cross Societies and welfare agencies in Canada.

Contacts for the met in the Belleville area by Canadian Red Cross survivors' clothing will continue to pour in, 7,000 tons of ships until all needs are met.

Labor Minister Daly Pleads For Management and Labor Co-operation in the Province

National Labor Code, He Says, Has Resulted in Step Forward

Toronto, March 16 — (CP)—Labor Minister Daley, appealing for co-operation and tolerance between Labor and management, yesterday told the Ontario Legislature the National Labor code had resulted in, "a tremendous step forward" for labor.

Progress has been made under the code-even though revision is needed, he said during continued Throne Speech debate which showed that 1,000 labor unions had been certified in the short time the code has been operative.

He had been informed from Ottawa that representations are made by Legislature for toward amendment of the code would receive "serious" consideration. He said he would give the consideration would be favorable.

"I am in favor of properly organized, properly run unions," Mr. Daley said, "but I don't want unions to have over-all power which may be used unwisely."

'Growing Pains'

Labor is having "growing pains," he continued, adding that some unions have been "misled" through organization thrust on them suddenly "naturally resented the intrusion."

Use of the word "Communist" was protested by veteran union organizer A. A. Cassidy, Windsor (Ind. Progressive), who claimed organization was not an intrusion, but properly a right of workers.

R. A. McEwing (L — Wellington North) charged that John Bracken's National Progressive Conservative Leader, has developed "all the earmarks of a Nazi propaganda agent" in stirring up trouble and has made statements to Canadian girls are present wherever servicemen need them. statements to Canadian girls regarding home defence troops overseas.

Premier Drew said Mr. Bracken has three sons overseas.

"That does not alter the facts," Mr. McEwing replied.

Handling of Stock Yards

He criticized handling of union stockyards during strike by the C.C.F. government, and accused the government of dismissing civil servants without adequate cause and said one war veteran had lost his job because he had "expressed disapproval of me as a member."

Progressive Conservatives leave the C.C.F. because of the "authoritarian leadership" of that party, said Leslie Blackwell, Independent Labor Farmer Member for Wellington South, Mr. Blackwell and Nelson Ale, Independent Labor Member for Essex North, both resigned from the last fall over its refusal to co-operate with the Labor-Progressive party.

Mr. Hancock said the Progressive Conservative administration had remained in power two years only because "progressive elements," which had a majority in the last legislature, were disunited. C.C.F. Leader E. B. Sullivan said the government could be defeated without occasioning an election, and Mr. Hancock hoped that Mr. Jolliffe would "accept the challenge" to form a government. C.C.F. co-operation with other groups sitting in opposition was "impossible," Mr. Jolliffe said.

Salsbery Names Firms

J. B. Salsbery (Lab-Prog. — Toronto St. Andrews) named eight Canadian firms as having constructed units of army camps their employees.

The firms mentioned were the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Windsor; the Wright-Hargreaves and Sylvanite Gold Mining companies in the Kirkland Lake area, the Canada Breed Company, Toronto; the Canada Westinghouse Company, Hamilton; the Electro-Metallurgical Company, Welland; the Halifax Shipyards and the Imperial Optical Company, Mr. Salsbery outlined recent Labor-management relations in each case, with particular reference to the Ford Company facility, as being typical, giving example of the blind procreative tendencies of the "vicious circle of workers have to contend with."

Fred Harris, Mr. Salsbery said, was in reply to a Toronto globe and mail editorial of March 3 asking Mr. Harris to explain why he had left to support an earlier charge in the Legislature that provincial government companies toward collective bargaining were causing "a mounting crisis in labor relations in Ontario."

Three speakers were heard in the night session, Dr. Percy R. Thrier (PC — Huron), William C. Riggs (PC — Durham) and Archibald F. W. Warren (CCF — Hamilton Wentworth).

Family Allowances

Dr. Taylor told the House the government was considering all angles lie under the Family Allowances Act presented the danger of citizens of a certain class of Canadians becoming moronic children. He said there was a high birth rate in Canada composed of mentally deficient persons and stimulation of the birth rate, which, he said, was the opposite to building of additional mental hospitals.

Dr. Taylor, a medical practitioner, said:

"I am concerned not only as a medical man but as a representative of the people, that the birth rate of citizens who are proud of the fact they have been able to bring up on their children without the aid of the government bonus, and feel that we can go on in the future without this kind of assistance." Dr. Taylor said. Are these people, the vast majority of our citizens, going to be penalized by this baby bonus-ism?" he asked. "I think from a medical standpoint is not competent to raise vigorous healthy Canadians?"

Mr. Hipps urged diversification of industries as one means of meeting unemployment problems after the war, citing as example the production of farm products.

Mr. Warren said 40,000 homes must be built in the next 10 years to meet the Canadian housing short-age. He advocated appointment of a special committee of the legislature to study housing problems.

Talk on Torpedoes Heard by Life Underwriters

Members of the Belleville Life Underwriters' Association at their regular monthly luncheon meeting held in the Y.M.C.A. Thursday had the experience of hearing a talk given by Mr. L. G. Pousett who disclosed interesting detail the mechanism and construction of the torpedo as a weapon of war. Mr. Pousett had gained his technical knowledge of the construction of the torpedo as his apprentice with the British Admiralty and the interest with which his hearers followed his talk was evidenced by the pertinent questions addressed him when he invited discussion at the conclusion of his speech.

Police, Firemen Search District After Cries Heard

MISS

"Mystery surrounds the meaning of means and cries for help sometime from the Malden Mirror sighted late Thursday night following which city police, firemen and provincial police searched the entire area surrounding the river bank and bridge, but without discovering from whence the cries came.

Shortly before eleven o'clock Saturday night Constable Clifford Smith of the O.P.P. headquarters, telephoned police headquarters to say he had heard what he believed to be the cries of a human being in distress emanating from a point south of the C.P.R. tracks east of the Reliance Industries property. A few minutes later Mr. Pepper and Mr. Deck of the Albert College staff, telephoned police to say they distinctly heard cries for help coming from a point south of the city dump and along the bay bridge road.

With automobile and flood-lights police and firemen scoured the entire Motor Mirror area, even the banks, but could find no traces of any individual in distress, and also thought both sides of the bay bridge road, the east and west Dumond's Drive and Victoria Park were thoroughly searched by numerous posses, as were the islands, but had by now joined the search. Today police officials stated that no evidence of a person having been in distress could be established, although with such reliable information provided it is believed there might have been some basis for alarm last night.

V.C. Winner Urges Support Of Red Cross

Private E. A. Smith, V.C., Canada's most distinguished private soldier and the first private in the Canadian army to win a Victoria Cross, the Empire's highest battle honor, appealed to Canadians to support the Canadian Red Cross.

The first time I had an opportunity of seeing the Red Cross in action was when I was wounded while serving with the 8th Army in Italy," said "Smokey" Smith.

"I was lying in a hospital without any kit. The Red Cross girl asked me if there was anything I needed and the next morning delivered a package containing such comforts as a razor, blades, tooth brush, etc. The second time I was wounded was in Italy and while I was in the First General Hospital I had a chance of seeing the Red Cross in action. The girls provided us with all kinds of comforts, letters for the fellows who couldn't write, and generally made things easier. I've been told that countless lives have been saved by the blood sent over by the Red Cross, and for prisoners of war who have been kept alive by Red Cross parcels. You can take it, from one who has been there-yes, feed the Red Cross."

Friction Between Duke and European Business Community

London, March 16. (CP Cable) — The Daily Mirror's London diplomatic correspondent today said there had been great friction between the Duke of Windsor and a section of the European business community in the Bahamas.

His Highness' resignation as governor of that colony was announced yesterday.

The correspondent wrote:

"Their approach to questions of native welfare and native representation in the government of the island was distinctly reactionary.

"The Duke has been anxious to make a number of reforms, some of which he considered overdue, but was in conflict with his business friends.

The Daily Express said the governor's resignation was prompted by the need to begin a second term of office at Nassau, since he felt his health a change, and by concern for the duchess' health, which has not been good for some time.

The Express said editorially that Anglo-American relations had been much smoother during this war than in the First Great War and "some of the credit for that is due the Duke of Windsor".

Cpl. E. Harvey Arrives Home

A former westerner and now desirous of settling down in Belleville, Corporal Ernest Harvey, Royal Canadian Engineers, has returned after four years overseas experience. Arriving home from the west two weeks ago and is now undergoing hospitalization in Ottawa Military Hospital for wounds received in battle.

Corporal Harvey married the former Bertha Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Moore, Coronation Street.

He enlisted in the R.C.E. in a western city in 1939 and remained with the same field company until he was wounded at Rimini, Italy, a few months ago.

Ahead of the infantry with a company of engineers, the corporal helped clear the way for the advance and erection of a bridge across a river near Rimini, when the German artillery suddenly found the range. Shrapnel and high explosive rained down on the engineers, and a burst of the former got Corporal Harvey in the upper right arm. He was sent back to hospital where his wounds were found to be so serious he was invalided to England and returned back to Canada. He will spend some time in hospitals here before being discharged.

WHO CARES WHAT "HE" SAID?

We can readily sympathize with you dinners-out if you spend the greater part of your meal-time waiting while, one waitress listens to what "somebody's boy friend said the night before. It don't happen here!

A Great Day For Irish As Oscars Awarded

Hollywood, March 16 — (AP) — It's a great day for the Irish — and a lovely Miss from Sweden, Ingrid Bergman.

Bing Crosby, Leo McCarey, Barry Fitzgerald, little Margaret O'Brien and Miss Bergman walked off with the major share of honors at the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences' awards in Hollywood's "Oscars" last night.

And the movie capital went all the way in honoring "Going My Way" the most outstanding picture of 1944 — The film outdistanced such nominees as "Wilson" and "Double Indemnity" and earned no less than six awards. Included were:

An Oscar for crooner Crosby for the best performance by an actor; another for Dublin-born Fitzgerald, for co-star, for giving the finest supporting portrayal, and two to the man who directed and wrote the original story, Leo McCarey.

Miss Bergman won the best award for her difficult, psychologically-harassed role in "Gaslight."

Two thousand Academy guests packed into the Chinese Theatre and 3,000 crammed Hollywood Boulevard outside.

The coveted Irving G. Thalberg award went to Darryl F. Zanuck, the man who brought "Wilson" to the screen, as the producer who fashioned "the most consistent high quality production last year," and a special award went to the child favorite, Margaret O'Brien.

Bob Hope's banter shared supporting role honors with Mr. Fitzgerald for her mother part in Cary Grant's "None But the Lonely Heart."

Ring Crosby, who often described himself as the "worst" actor in pictures, was out over Alexander Knox ("Wilson") of Strasburg, Ont., Charles Boyer ("Gaslight"), Cary Grant and Barry Fitzgerald, the latter having received a double nomination.

WIN BY LOSSES

London, March 16—(CP)—Propaganda Minister Goebbels, writing in the weekly magazine Das Reich, predicts that Germany will "win the war by losses," the Berlin radio said today.

"He who fights with least regard for losses has the most chance of winning," Goebbels was quoted as saying. He conceded, however, that Germany has embarrassments which will force her hand."

Club Seeks Information For Better Service In Post-War Period

NEW TYPE LANDING CRAFT

New York, March 16 — (AP) — A giant new type of landing ship for use against the Japanese now is being built in British shipyards, the British Information Services reported last night.

The B. I. S. said the new landing craft has a far larger capacity than any landing ship built up to date and its range is also considerably greater.

Indicating that its members are fully appreciative of their duty to the community as a service club the Community Service Committee of the Belleville Kinsmen Club is laying the foundation for a definite policy for the club's service work in the post-war era. And feeling that the job is one worthy of ideas from the complete club membership, a questionnaire on what it feels and what it might be advisable for the club to undertake has been forwarded to all members.

Among the questions asked are whether the service club should take direct steps in the rehabilitation of returned men, whether the club is ready for the "Big Brother Movement" to combat juvenile delinquency, questions regarding the advisability of a Kinsmen's Centre and whether the club's eye clinic should be expanded.

Idea of club members on superior dental service for school children, and supervision of community playgrounds, also whether it is also asked if the club is in position to sponsor a community centre, a sports field or swimming pool project.

The committee has as its Chairman, Geo B. Colling and has given considerable effort and thought to the matter of service toward the community in the post-war era. Members of the club are asked to fill in the questionnaire and return it to the committee.

Irish and St. Patrick's Day

While St. Patrick's Day, March 17th, is not the official first day of spring, to actually all of the people it serves to mark the arrival of springtime. As it is a festive day more people mark it than perhaps most other saints' days. In this part of Canada there is a strong Irish sentiment which can be noted whenever crowds get together and a large percentage of the people owe their origin to the Emerald Isle. A few weeks ago a musical play shown here attracted unusually large crowds that one might well have asked, Can there be so many people of Irish birth and origin here? and the answer probably would have to be "yes" and it might be added that the Irish are popular and so Irish sentiment in these parts is the best. St. Patrick's Day this is especially noted as a large section of the community will be seen wearing the shamrock.

Today in many homes in the Belleville district there are preparations to celebrate the annual feast day of St. Patrick, Erin's patron saint by native sons of Ireland, their families and those who claim the origin but several generations to the Green Isle of lilting song and sprightly jig.

The day which is always in Lent, serves as an outlet for pent up emotions due to winter which are released on this festive day.

The date itself was finally determined after a lengthy Irish argument which ascended to its legend ended in a "typical Irish compromise," says Frank Hinds of The Canadian Press who gives a history of the festival.

"With their traditional propensity for disagreement on any and all subjects, one faction in Ireland claimed the Saint's birthday fell on March 8th; while an opposing party claimed the Saint's birthday was March 24th. A solemn-like Irish priest, Father Mulcahey, is said to have settled the argument by adding the eight to the nine to total the seventeenth—the date that was set for the feast of time.

"St. Patrick's Day in Canada will be celebrated this year quietly in the absence of so many young Irish Canadians fighting beside fellow countrymen overseas. But no Irishman in whatever clime he may find himself on the day, will be able to pass it off without a 'top of the morning' to the shade of the good saint and his followers have branched out over all the globe from the little island of their origin.

"In view of the saint's obscure origin arguments about the birthplace of Patrick is a fruitful pastime of genial Irishmen who are notoriously 'agin' accepting anything without a century or so of thorough discussion. His legendary birthplace ranged from Scotland to France. Historians, in the contrary, say he was born about the year 389 in Wales and was carried off at any early age by Irish pirates who sold the young Christian into slavery as a herdsman in County Antrim.

"Patrick entered the priesthood after his escape to France several years later and returned to Ireland eventually as a missionary. After a remarkably successful career converting the pagan Irish to Christianity, Patrick died in 461 bequeathing to his converts numerous legends which became more and more elaborate as the years went by.

"The shamrock, Ireland's trefoliate emblem, was chosen by Patrick to explain the doctrine of the Trinity to his listeners. Snakes and toads were banished from Erin by the Saint, according to legend and fact remains that reptiles are unknown in Ireland although they are found in Scotland and England."

St. Patrick's Day serves to show how fortunate the British peoples are in the diversity of Englishman, Scotsman, Irishman and Welshman. On November 30th the English-speaking world observed St. Andrew's Day for Scotland, a few weeks ago St. David's Day was observed in communities where there is a body of Welsh people, now St. Patrick's Day is at hand and there is the constant feast of the Irish and next month the English-speaking world will honor St. George, patron saint of England. Surely these peoples with their high ideals of freedom have always their influence for good in the places that they hold in the forefront of democracy and freedom of the world.

The Irish have found their way into many lands and are more of a welcome everywhere. Abroad they kept warm their hearts for the Old Land and their children and succeeding generations will never forget the land from which they sprang. These Irish are warm-hearted and companionable, they love music, they love song and they love the gay measures which originated in Erin. They never forget the Emerald Isle though they may be far away. When one hears of Irishmen making their mark, the names of many who have been famed not only at home but in the history of the world come to mind. They are the land of poets, their minstrels, their folklore and national song, they have developed a national drama within the past few decades and they look back on a rich history of song and music and literature all bearing that strain which goes by the name Irish, distinct from Scots, Welsh and English and yet blending with these cultures into that culture which we may say on every part of the great Tales which the Channel separates from the Continent of Europe. They have had great military leaders, a Wellington, a Montgomery, their history and others are recorded in their writers and philosophers. They have their preachers too for they are a religious and God-fearing people. In these war days our soldiers are in every front in the battle for liberty and democracy.

Unique in history is the part these people of Irish birth with their Scotch, English and Welsh compatriots have taken and are taking before the world—and for the world's good.

Harps Into Firebells

(New York Times)

A person interested in whirligigs of fashion and in violent swings of the pendulum can hardly do better than go to the newest sales talks on the radio. The change in voice production has been nothing short of revolutionary. There was a time not so long ago when a soothing sound but mildly describe the tones in which the public was invited to consider hair tonics or headache powders. Honeyed words expounded the merits of the small-sized package at 23 cents or the economical family-size bottle at 79 cents. Words depicting the perfections of the non-stop wrist watch came straight from the heart. And now all this concord of sweet harmonies has gone out of the radio commercials. Instead of using flute and dulcimer to sap customer resistance, they yell at you. We say "they" purposely, because it is apparently necessary for the voices to put over a cure for superacidity where formerly the case was summed up by a single golden-voiced orator. Once upon a time the sales talk for bottled aerated water sounded like Julia Marlowe reciting Portia's lines about the quality of mercy. Today it sounds like a trio of top sergeants auditioning for a political candidate for P.R.O. "It will take that nauseous feeling like Grant took Richmond," shouts Voice No. 1 forte. "It comes in a green bottle," yells Voice No. 2, fortissimo. "Yes, and it's only 27 cents in the handy size," shrieks No. 3, like a soul in torment.

O Fashion! O whirligig of Time! O swing of the pendulum!

200,000 miles steamed, with only two visits to a dockyard for major refit, was the proud record celebrated recently on board the 27-year-old British destroyer "Watchman." During three years of Atlantic convoy escort H.M.S. "Watchman" travelled 20,000 miles through some of the worst gales, while over a similar period recently she logged 14,000 miles on the Russian convoy routes.

Agriculture in Britain is at present the most highly mechanized in the world. The tractors in use have increased from 55,000 in 1939 to 90,000 in 1941, 165,000 in 1943 and over 200,000 to date.

JUST FOLKS

BROTHERS

I hold, because I think it true,
In spite of all the wrong they do
And love of pleasure,
That whether men be poor or rich,
One scarce can tell just which is which
By spirit-measure.

Put purse away, and foolish pride,
Most men are much alike, inside.

From church or desk or lathe away,
Most men with children like to play—
Their own and neighbors.
Most men would have them nobly trained,
With one, perhaps, for church ordained.
The man who labors
Has dreams, if but the truth were known,
As high as those the richest own.

Most men are strengthened by belief;
Are saddened by another's grief,
And turn to share it.
Seldom a cross on man is laid
But one, like Simon, comes to aid
Who begs to bear it.
No doubt, by every spirit-test,
All men are brothers at their best.

Diversions Help To Relieve Boredom For Troops on the Marianas Is.

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Marianas Islands—(delayed)—One thing that might help you visualize what life is like out here, is to realize that the Marianas Island is lots bigger than you think. There are many, many thousands of Americans scattered in camps and at airfields and in training areas and hospitals over the three islands which we occupy here.

Nearly one in every three people outside his own special unit. Even according to our own liberal Army standards, there're not enough women in the individual doesn't encounter them, for it would be as impossible for one man to see and know everybody in the Marianas as it would to know every body in Indianapolis.

You could live and work in your section, and never visit another section for weeks or months at a time. And that's exactly what does happen.

For one thing, transportation is short. We are still building runways here, such fast and fantastic building as you never dreamed of. Everything that runs is being used, and there's little left over just to run around in for fun.

And anyhow, there's no place to go. What little there was here has been destroyed. There is nothing even resembling a town or city on these islands now. The natives have been set up in improved camps, but they offer no "civilian" diversions.

As we drove around one of the islands on my first day here, we went through one of the Marianas towns that had been destroyed by bombing and shelling. It had been a good-sized town, with streets not too in a tropical way. It had a city plaza and municipal buildings and paved streets, and many of the buildings were of concrete construction.

In destruction, it looked exactly like destroyed cities in Germany. Only, the same legend half-standing walls, the stacks of rubble, the empty holes where houses used to be, the roofless homes, the deep craters in the gardens.

There was just one difference. Out here there was nothing green. And nature thrusts up her greenery so swiftly through rubble and destruction that the ruins now are festooned with vines and green leaves, and it gives them a look of being very old and time-worn ruins, instead of fresh modern ones, which they are.

An American soldier in Europe, given these islands, would say he was "off on the other side of nowhere." And all the other food coupons which were no use to him. He never consumed the word "morale" or "indulgence" is an occasional onion, or a can of beer.

Mr. Brannon said he took to his shack and thought matters over quietly. He came to the conclusion that "it is unworthy of man, who claims to be the highest form of life, to feed animals just to fill his own stomach." He decided to feed only at 8 o'clock every morning and evening, and to spend the rest of the time reading books and playing games. He set apart an hour in the afternoon for quiet meditation.

Only 10 Per Cent Rooms Available For Conventions

Ottawa, March 16 (CP)—Conventions booked for Montreal, Vancouver, Toronto, Montreal, Halifax and Ottawa will be allocated space approximating 10 per cent of the accommodation available in any one hotel, the Prices Board announced Thursday.

The announcement said an arrangement between the Board and the Hotel Association of Canada will be worked out to implement the accommodation of conventions. The 10 percent figure will be approximate to meet the ranks of particularly large conventions which may require more space, perhaps 11 per cent, of available bedroom accommodation.

The announcement said it will be a rule that delegates to all conventions will be permitted to "sign up" in rooms so that every bed will be occupied. All hotel convention bookings will be regarded as tentative so they may be cancelled without difficulty if congested conditions make such action necessary.

Agreement was also reached that no convention planned in the United States and Canada permit there would be transferred to Canada. Instructions governing the policy are issued to all hotels concerned through the Hotel Association of Canada.

The board statement said: Mr. Gordon Conant, president of the Hotel Association congestion which has developed in many hotels in the public in the five cities mentioned, and that the Association advised that every large hotel was prepared to provide emergency toilet facilities for guests attending meetings in their hotels and to assist those who could not be accommodated to find rooms elsewhere.

"Adequate information furnished," said the Board, "it became evident that a great deal of the pressure for demanding quotas in regard to the purpose of conventions. In, most every large convention there are many business meetings. Mr. Gordon was pointed out that in most cases, if a weight I reasure all readers that meetings were arranged during the day-direct with the board on this and related questions.

Pass the Grass, Please

(Hamilton Spectator Editorial)

Vegetarianism is not new; Mr. Bernard Shaw is not the only prophet of its adherents and frequently a fierce advocate of its benefits. Yet it is still the exception to meet vegetarians. Abstention from meat is not the only principle which most of them observed. Strict vegetarians never eat fish, eggs, milk or cheese, many of them appear to thrive. Now comes Mr. Bernard Shaw to say that nothing but grass, sugar and water for liquids an occasional onion—to be sure, Mr. Shaw is getting on in 78.

He is Mr. James Branson, of London, England, white-bearded, active, full of energy and intellect for the past twenty years and feels sorry for those persons who are not getting the same as many other foods. His system is certainly unconventional but the results he obtains prevail. About all he has to do or say to his friends nowadays is some chickweed or grass, and his friends think he is crazy. Actually, one of this grass is all he requires, with sugar and water. The sugar was a late addition, and he sometimes omitted it. Mr. Branson has an arrangement with the local food control officer whereby he was allowed four pounds of sugar per year in addition to all the other food coupons which were no use to him. He never consumed the word "morale" or "indulgence" is an occasional onion, or a can of beer.

Mr. Branson said he took to his shack and thought matters over quietly. PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

RESISTANCE WOULD BE FINE IF YOU COULD HAVE IT

There have been the usual number of irruptions into print this winter to warn the public to beware of coming with handkerchief to nose, getting wet feet, sitting in drafts and all that old hokum. Colds, grippe, health officers and "specialists" have to do with it little. Nobody has ever cheerfully written or dictated their views for the instruction of the public. Their fellows generally prove irregardless of contrary to the accepted dictum and try to impart to the public. You have your money and have your choice.

It seems to me that the reactionaries are more vehement about "resistance" this season. Maybe I flatter myself, but I take it that my harping on the theme that apart from immunity, such as immunity against diphtheria or immunity against typhoid fever or immunity against smallpox, which is specific and even to a practical degree permanent by applying the Schick test for immunity to diphtheria is no small gift and the "lowered resistance" or "good resistance" against the flu germ or even against all of the acute respiratory diseases is a health asset. Furthermore, health officers and "specialists" jump together as "colds" or "the common cold." I know that as I know. And all the professors, dietitians, doctors and nurses I know about it as what they get out of their own bodies. Their own inner resistance or in other words they know no more about it than you and I do.

Gordon Conant, president of the Hotel Association congestion which has developed in many hotels in the public in the five cities mentioned, and that the Association advised that every large hotel was prepared to provide emergency toilet facilities for guests attending meetings in their hotels and to assist those who could not be accommodated to find rooms elsewhere.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Potatoes are called "Irish potatoes" only in the United States. Although potatoes were native to South America, they were introduced into the United States from Europe.

The Irish were the first Europeans to recognize the potato as a staple food product. Under date of April 30, 1780, George Washington noted in his diary that he "planted Irish potatoes in the garden."

In London a person who sells fruit, vegetables, etc., in the street is known as a "costermonger," which is an old term literally meaning "apple-seller." It was used as a term of abuse in Shakespeare's day. In the Food Control Act, 1, Scene 2, Sir Charles Parkhurst says to the Duke of Norfolk, "Here's a lot of little regard in these costermonger times that true valiant deeds are graced."

Many people so wrong in pronouncing "epicure." It is correctly pronounced, "epi-ME-ure," not "epi-AY- tue."

Abraham Lincoln was chosen first President of the United States by the Electoral College which that he had to borrow 600 pounds of silverware from his wife's cousins in New York, then the seat of government.

In 1800, the year he was elected President, Abraham Lincoln delivered his "Inaugural Address" before the United States Congress assembled in this latrine the prairie lawyer said:

Adam's first discovery was the fact that he was naked; and his inventive genius has never since slept.

George Washington, the Father of the country; James Madison, the Father of the Constitution, and Thomas Jefferson, the Father of American Democracy, all married widows.

Post-War Construction Excluding Hydro Commission $400,000,000 Says Drew

Toronto, March 16 — (CP)—Premier Drew of Ontario, in an address prepared for delivery over a regional network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation last night, said the total volume of proposed post-war construction, excluding expenditure to be made by the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission, is estimated at $400,000,000.

Mr. Drew was one of the speakers in the free time devoted to political parties by the CBC. He said completed plans of his Progressive Conservative government call for expenditure of $125,000,000 and completed plans of municipalities will approximately equal that amount.

The government four-year highway building program, involving a minimum of 20,000,000 man days and including an extensive system of trunk and feeder highways throughout north and northwestern Ontario, would give an efficient means of fast highway transportation which would step up the tempo of expanding agricultural and industrial life.

Hydro Ready with Plans

The Departments of Public Works and Lands and Forests also had fully completed plans for improved public facilities designed to create employment, The H.E.P.C. was also ready with its construction plans.

"We are ready and anxious to proceed with power developments on the St. Lawrence. Then there are the five power sites on the Ottawa River which we wish to develop as soon as possible in co-operation with Quebec.

"The St. Lawrence scheme would give Ontario an additional 1,100,000 horse power and the Ottawa River development would add another 600,000. "The province was prepared to assume the full cost of the parts of both plans "which we recognize will be of direct advantage to the people of this province.

RUINS OF COLOGNE—FAMOUS CATHEDRAL STILL STANDS

Aerial view of the German city of Cologne reveals vividly the destruction that was wrought on this former industrial city during the fighting between the Allied and Nazi forces. Structurally undamaged, the famous cathedral rises from the destroyed buildings around it. In the distance, half submerged in the waters of the Rhine, is the Hohenzollern bridge, which was blown by the retreating Germans after they had crossed to the east bank of the river.

His Red Cross Mother

FIGHTING through the mud and icy slush of flooded battlefields, our boys in the front line have learned to bless the tens of thousands of devoted women who labor as volunteer workers for the Red Cross.

Through five years of war, these Canadian "Blue Smock" workers have knitted hundreds of thousands of pairs of socks . . . made millions of other comforting articles of clothing—packed millions of Red Cross food parcels. Other specially-trained volunteer women serve as drivers, as nursing aides, as office workers and dietitians.

Freely giving their time and labor, these hard-working volunteers make your Red Cross dollars stretch further. Thanks to their efforts, each dollar you give is multiplied three times in the value of food, clothing and medical supplies it buys.

GIVE—and give generously, to support their selfless work. Let your contribution to the Canadian Red Cross be the token of your thanks to these devoted women who serve in very truth, as "another mother" to your boy, or your friend or neighbor in the fighting line.

Belleville Branch of Canadian Red Cross on Campbell Street Regular Beehive of Activity

It can were to pay a visit to the Canadian Red Cross Headquarters on Campbell Street, Tuesday or Wednesday of any week, to really discover a scene of great excitement, a gigantic beehive and beats', a regular beehive of activity.

A large number of women, who have given of their time and effort towards this wonderful work of the Red Cross can be seen working diligently at their allotted tasks. The Belleville Branch can proudly boast of being highly commended by the Provincial Division at Toronto for its type of work and its packing. Another of this was also in the monthly magazine "The Dispatch". Out of the 400 branches in the province 25 of these are appointed to send representatives to the executive of the Ontario Division. Belleville is listed among the hundred fifty. Miss Josephine Yeksel acting as its representative.

Mrs. Cameron is convener.

The Canadian Red Cross is a compact, completely organized and co-operative association. England sends word to Canada, regarding the amount of clothing she desires. Canada then divides this quota requested among the different provinces of the Dominion which in turn divide it up among the various branches. The Belleville Branch of the Red Cross receives the requests from the Ontario Division at Toronto. Wool and material are obtained from the Toronto Division. A Day Book containing accounts of wool and material going out and coming in is an essential part of the organization. Donations received by Headquarters here are also inserted in the Day Book. Articles that are cut, the number of yards and the amount are tabulated. In this way, a complete summary of the work is kept on file for reference at any time. Gives Relief to all.

As well as aiding the three services, the Navy, Army and Air Force with knitted and leather goods, the Canadian Red Cross plays a large part in the relief of bombed out British civilians. All kinds of children's clothing can be seen at Headquarters. The beautiful woollen articles are, proof or long hours of time and work. Figurative laurel wreaths are due the Junior Red Cross of Deloro whose knitted baby things and afghans are the pride of the Headquarters' staff.

Quantities of turtle-neck sweaters are on display, but the appeal goes out for more and more to avoid their number. "The need is certainly great for more willing knitters" say the women at Red Cross Headquarters. "These particular sweaters average forty hours' work."

The packers are also a very important part of the organization. The different comforts are packed under various insignia. In the repair department, everything is inspected and when not found to be right are made over. All articles are then put together, boxed and shipped to Toronto. Headquarters here report very little repair work being necessary "very good." The Red Cross Workers are justly proud of their work. Much woollen shipment contains from 800 to 900 articles. Most of the gifts are brought in from the country districts.

King Confident Conference Will Be Successful

Returns to Ottawa After Conducting Lengthy Talks With Roosevelt

Ottawa, March 16 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King Thursday returned to Ottawa following his meeting with president Roosevelt at Washington and left in a confident mood as to the success of the San Francisco World Security Conference.

"I should think there will be very little difficulty in the different nations getting together on the Dumbarton Oaks draft for a permanent world organization," Mr. King said.

"I should be surprised if there isn't a very rapid joining together on this question of world security."

After an absence of a week during which time he had two visits with the President and a short rest at Williamsburg, Va., Mr. King looked fit and vigorous. He said he was delighted to find the President looking well and also optimistic about the San Francisco conference, which opens April 25.

Mr. King left Ottawa a week ago after a cabinet meeting. Most of the cabinet ministers as well as the senior officials in Ottawa were at the station to welcome him. A cabinet meeting will be held later. New Ambassador Arrives

He had the opportunity of shaking a newly arrived ambassador into Ottawa, Alfredo Barreiro first Ambassador from Peru to take up residence in the Canadian capital, arrived on the same train.

Mr. King was asked to comment on the joint statement of the Foreign Ministers' conference and agreement to seek association of world trade unions, and to what extent it aligns with a view to the removal of discrimination and the reduction of barriers to the exchange of goods between nations."

Mr. King replied it covered "a point of view rather than specific policies."

Must Sweep Away Barriers.

"If the new international organization is to succeed," he said, "it will be necessary to sweep away many of these barriers and discriminations which have made trouble in the past. I believe it will be necessary to bring about greater freedom of commercial and intellectual intercourse between nations."

The San Francisco conference, he said, would be concerned largely with the organization of the proposed security organization. During his meeting with the President he was able to get a pretty good picture of the mechanics and machinery for the conduct of the conference, information which was quite useful to him and which would enable him to inform parliament more fully on the matter when he speaks on a resolution the government proposes to introduce shortly.

He said he also discussed the Yalta conference with the President and obtained quite full information in its decisions and their bearing on the San Francisco meeting.

"As far as the feeling in the United States towards Canada," he said, "it is just exactly the feeling Canadians have for the United States. We regard ourselves as extremely good neighbors."

J.Fay, JamesBove Are Convicted On Two Counts

New York, March 16 (AP)—Joseph S. They face possible prison terms of up to three years on the conspiracy count and of 7 1-2 to 15 years on the extortion conviction. They were held for sentencing April 5.

The State Supreme Court jury of 11 men and one woman voted acquittal on five other counts.

Fay, 51, is vice-president of the International Union of Operating Engineers and Bove, 44, former vice-president of the International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers Union, is secretary-treasurer of Local 66 of that union.

The conspiracy charge was the first count in the indictment. They also were convicted on the seventh count, which charged they extorted $65,000 from the Walsh Construction Company between Feb. 15, 1939, and May 7, 1942.

The jury deliberated more than 14 hours in considering charges that the two men conspired to extort $700,000 from the contractors and that they extorted $420,000.

Justice William H. Munson told the jury the total sum paid to Fay and Bove, according to witnesses during the eight-day trial, was $368,000.

During the trial, John S. MacDonald, former vice-president of Associated Contractors, Inc., said the labor officials sought $250,000 from the firm, telling him, "if we did so along there would be no labor trouble." He said he gave Bove $50,000 in cash.

Another firm executive, Thomas J. Walsh, told the court he had given Fay and Bove $215,000, but that Fay and Bove later demanded and threatened him with strikes or picket lines.

Hilbe I. Kilmer, of the New York firm of Mason and Hanger, said he had paid men $96,000 and Louis Perini, President of a Wellesley, Mass., firm, testified he agreed to pay between $25,000 and $35,000 for a guarantee of "good laborers, good men, no strikes and no lockouts."

Wide Education Of Russian People Is Highly Praised

Toronto, March 15, (CP) — The Russian army probably has had a wider general education than any other fighting forces in Europe", Sir Bernard Pares, British authority on Soviet Affairs, said in an address here yesterday.

"This colossal success of the Russian in education is probably the greatest single achievement of the U.S.S.R., he said. "Today there is hardly a man under 55 unable to read and write.

The British man-on-the-street, he said, has "almost sacred respect and feeling toward, the Russian people, born out of recognition of their indescribable suffering and determination".

Mrs. Campbell showed no emotion as Earl Bowman, of London township, who acted as foreman of the jury, announced the decision.

Regarding the acquitted woman, Justice Keiller MacKay said:

"I hearing agree with the verdict on the evidence. I am constrained to say, however, that there is one person and one person only who knows how the child came to its death. Whatever the facts are you must for the remainder of your lives have as your constant companion the thought that a life which might have been useful to this country has been dissolved at the very early stage of four months."

Frood Mines Coming South With Stronger Team Than Last Year To Meet Hamilton

Teams Will Play for Senior "A" Championship of the Province

Toronto, March 18 (CP)—For the second year in a row the Hamilton Majors senior O.H.A. hockey team will play for the Ontario senior hockey championship, starting Saturday.

Manager Ago Frood won by three games to one. The present series is tentatively arranged as a total of seven affairs, with the second game set at Hamilton, March 19, third at Toronto, March 21 and fourth at Hamilton March 23. Other dates will be announced later.

Hamilton won the O.H.A. senior title over St. Catharines, and Frood won the N.O.H.A. senior crown. Then an exhibition against the Majors during the winter.

The Frood Club is much the same as last year's winning squad and in the opinion of Coach Frank Gruhala is stronger.

Frood has Stratford's Maurice Gerth in goal. Rollie McLanahan, a rookie last season, is on the defence with Alec Shigbush, who came from Montreal Canadiens. Manning, the Providence, New Haven and Washington centre of the A.H.L. goal scorer is Mickey Stahan of Brandon.

The team's key playmaker is centre Art Webster, who scored six goals and seven assists when Frood beat Porcupine All-Stars four out straight in winning the northern title. Veteran Jim Dewey, the other centre, may not be able to leave Sudbury.

Strong Wing Line

Hamilton has one newcomer to last year's team, Fred Mason, formerly with St. Catharines. He makes the second line with Robert Hamilton and Macombe. The first line probably will feature Clarence Shillington at centre with Frank Mc-Cright and Brady on left. Doug Bunting, speedy centre, is not quite ready yet for strenuous play after being injured a month ago in a game against St. Catharines.

On the rear-guard, with Childs in goal, Hamilton has a quintette of rugged defencemen. Bill Dingwall is back, still right man. Jack Groom, Bill Sherry and Paul Mc-Donald complete with Mickey Church playing big beat hockey this season. Gerry Cooper fills in on the defence in emergencies.

Along with Mason, the club has two more players not on the last year's final—Lincombe and Groom. Both were promoted from the junior to the finals last year because of the temporary conscription. Now they are awaiting discharge and are eligible.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

Following a conference with Col. J. Monroe Johnston, Office of Defense Transportation, at Washington, president Fred Field of the National League and president Will Harridge of the American, Tuesday yesterday jointly announced they have reached an understanding on all spring training games involving public transportation. In making this step known to their respective clubs, the loop leaders said it would affect further reduction in train travel.

Under the latest economy plan, baseball clubs would be permitted to play practice games on their way home from spring training camps, providing the parks for such exhibitions are on the direct route and no additional mileage was involved.

Dave Kerr, former N.H.L. all-star goalie, set at rest the rumors he would succeed Leo Dandurand as Maple Leafs in the coming playoffs by announcing last night he had signed a contract with the club because of business, family and other reasons. Kerr, 27, said he wanted to play in an exhibition game between Leafs and Hawks, in certain matches at Toronto Tuesday and in a bonspiel at Kitchener Wednesday.

With second-baseman Bi Stanky still in Alabama after a bout with pneumonia, manager Leo Durocher of Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday took over the pivot corner in the team's workout at Bear Mountain, N.Y. Goody Rosen was the only regular absentee, on hand for the initial drill outdoors.

President Jerry Martineau of Quebec Aces said last night his team would not play in the playoffs in the second playoff game with Montreal Canadiens on Sunday because he would have four members of the Royal Canadian Navy on the ice. He guarantees, Bill Robinson, Frank Dartnell, Doug Baldwin and Norm Lazaro, were being allowed to play out-of-town games.

Ridden by Ralph Neves of San Francisco, Dutch Raider of Bluebird Stock Farm won the junior stakes by a length and a half from Bren Streak, a Meadow horse, at the Hippodrome track, Mexico City, yesterday to pay his backers $4.20 to win.

In the first encounter of the Women's Inter-city basketball schedule at Brantford last night, Golden Girls of Hamilton defeated Watrous Ladies of the telephone city 31-18. Leading scorer for the winners was Mrs. Mitchell with nine points, a total equalled by Joyce Lewis of the Brantforders.

White Feather Sent In Letter to Airman Who Downed 13 of Enemy

Regina, March 15. (CP)—A discharged R.C.A.F. pilot who was awarded the D.S.O., D.F.C. during his service in British shot down 13 enemy planes and was credited with three "probables" in addition, has received a white feather sent him in a letter, he said in an interview, he said in a letter to a Regina newspaper yesterday. The pilot, who signed himself "discharged airman" would give no further identification, said he had been decorated with the distinguished flying medal before being discharged for medical reasons in June, 1942.

"I do not ask for anything but feel that I have been done an injustice by received the white feather of cowardice", he said.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

Toronto, March 18 — (CP)—Ever since Leo Dandurand donated the Vezina Trophy to the National Hockey League in 1927, the method of its being awarded has been under discussion.

Leo gave the trophy to the loop to perpetuate the memory of Georges Vezina, who played in the nets for Leo when he was boss of the Canadiens. Until now the award has always gone to the netminder having the fewest number of goals scored against him over the regular NHL season.

But year in and year out some column-writing sportswriter comes up with the suggestion that the trophy be awarded on a percentage basis. That is to the puck stopper who stops the most pucks and not to the one who allows the fewest in. To make the award that way would entail a little bit of mathematics on the part of the scorers and lop statisticians.

Every shot on goal would have to be recorded and the goalie getting the best percentage of stops would be declared the winner. Under those circumstances, a top-notch goalie like Bill Durnan of Canadiens might not get a look in on the award.

Some goaltenders have been quick to admit that the man to win the trophy might be the one with the best defence in front of him. Change of method in awarding the silverware is up to the N.H.L. and Dick Carroll, Montreal Gazette sports editor has suggested that the N.H.L. wants to do.

Training Camp Notes

Lakewood, N.J., March 18 — (AP) —In a humid atmosphere of rain, the New York Giants yesterday had their most exhaustive workout this season.

The value of practice at this time of year is determined by how much sweating is done," said manager Mel Ott. "And, believe me, the boys perspired plenty today."

French Lick, Ind., March 18 — (AP) — Arrival of infielder Roy Hughes and outfielder Andy Pafko swelled the ranks of the Chicago Cubs to 18 players. Shovers forced an indoor workout yesterday.

Cape Girardeau, Mo., March 18— (AP) — Don Gutteridge, veteran second baseman and team captain, arrived in the St. Louis Browns' spring training camp yesterday.

Washington, March 18. — (AP) — The Cubbies—nine of them—battled and took their first workout yesterday when Washington's Senators moved into their ball club. Ten members, at least, with 23 players on the field, including Jake Powell, veteran outfielder.

Pleasantville, N.J., March 18 — (AP) — Seven batters — men who were expected were on the scene yesterday when manager Joe Cronin started the Boston Red Sox training camp. They were pitchers Red Barrett and Mel Cecil and Catcher Hal Wagner and Cronin had to cut short his opening drill.

Frederick, Md., March 18 — (CP) — Big Lon Knode, pitcher from Toronto, who dallied just above the Double A baseball ranks last season with Fredericksburg Athletics, said manager Connie Mack: "He just didn't understand my thought him on approval instead of in an out-right sale."

KINGSTON ARMY TEAM WINS ROUND IN BASKETBALL

Local "Y" Intermediates Are Beaten at Home 56-34 and on Round 94-68

The tall boys from the Kingston ordnance depot defeated the Belleville "Y" Intermediates 56 to 34 to win the Eastern Ontario Army section of the O.B.A. play Thursday night at the armouries. Then they went to Belleville and after whitewashing at-home 44 to 23 earlier in the week, they won 94 to 68.

There is a catch in the series, however. First and foremost 20 armed services team should be playing in any civilian sports play-off during the war and therefore, due to the generosity of the Belleville "Y" management in offering the Army "Y" without cost the Y.M.C.A. took with the Eastern Ontario Intermediate Basketball Association playdowns which left Belleville with no team in the playoffs except for the possible right of continuing with the Army "Y" team. Which undowns if they so desire. (Rather a silly picture, what?)

Belly-Ful Lead

Starting a 13-point lead gained in Kingston, the elongated "Army" quintette raced through to a 35 to 19 at the half. They kept the intermediates in the initial half and to continue to play intermediate basketball added another 23 points in the second half as Belleville rallied effectively to cut the lead and practically keep pace.

Second it was elongated "Slim" Rodwell of the "Army" who carried off the honors of the night's play with 18 of his team's 56 points. Dawson added 13 more and Clayton 10 to help the total. Ken Ellis led Belleville up front with 18 scoring points and Ted Jones, garnet "Y" star, with Geed Sandker added eight. Then there were four and five points added two as did the veteran 'Spike' Pryke, playing his first game of the season.

The line-ups — Kingston "Army" (56): Rodwell 18, Dawson 13, Pryke 2, Sandker 8, Wood 2, Sgrilles 2, McAlpine, Shiffman 2. Belleville "Y" Intermediates (34): Ellis 18, Pryke 2, Sandker 8, Wood 2, Sgrilles 2, McAlpine, Shiffman 2.

Referees: Roy Menary and Ed. Short.

Local Girls Win

In an exhibition game played between the Kingston C.W.A.C. girls and the Belleville "Y" lassies the latter won 42 to 40 after a 40 all tie. For the first half, matters were reversed, the Kingston local "Y" girls were only out in front by at 19 to 18 count. However in the second half the Belleville girls ran roughly over and through the Kingston team, scoring 24 points and set up a strong defence, keeping the "Wacs" but eight points.

Dot Ronsky paced the local girls with an even dozen points while Ev Allison picked up 10 and Mary. Lacombe, who is also a regular on Salisbury and Ruth Oliphant added four each to the Belleville total of up to two. A Bowler with eight, M. Stone with six and U. Latsy with four headed the "Army" girls in the scoring column.

Some Salesmen

A motorist stopped at a lonely country road and was accosted to find it stuffed to overflowing with Victory Bonds. He bought a barrels of it, and stacks of it in the yard against the fence.

"Good gracious", said the motorist, "you must sell a lot of 'em".

"Not a single one", replied the storekeeper, "but you should see the ones I've given away since here last week. Now, he really could talk."

The Army Wins, Best

A strong R.C.O.C. "Army" team of hoopsters from Kingston invaded the Belleville "Y" on last night to beat the local Intermediate O.B.A. cagers 56 to 34. The "Army" highlighted with better height and after all they won the two-game series 94 to 68. Then add outclassed the heads of provincial sport in the Belleville "Y" and the local league champions were not eligible for provincial playdowns and provincial honors. But, like everything else in sports when and where there is competition, there's a catch in the story.

Last August a strong Kingston "Army" softball team beat Belleville "Y" twice

These are the middle ages for ridge experts. They kick around an good votes and then patch up fair mess, with exceptions.

Take a jump pedal in a previously ut suit. You couldn't ask for a better insult of jump bid. Just ex-ect to fill its utility with barrage nations and then say it is not fit-ess forcing.

Admittedly a jump bid is a sig-al for going to game. The jump ay be to a new suit. Or in your wn suit. Or in partner's suit. Or a no-trump. Any jump says not to top short of game.

So, by all that's sensibly logical, the above tricky conduct by bid-ders is a game. And a jump in your partner bid suit also promises that, but it also says your suit is better than you said before.

Therefore, a jump redid in your previously bid suit should be driving at game. Not only on occasion, but always. Despite any hot-off-the-griddle lack of bigdom.

North responds with one no-trump. That denies having a bidable suit or support for clubs. But it admits having three tricks. So, with his own eight, south now sees tricks enough for a game.

With no other suit to show, south rebids his own club suit. But neither bid nor rebid promises that, but it also says your suit is better than you said before.

Boston Bruins Gain N.H.L. Playoff Berth Defeating Chicago Hawks by 5-3 Count

Bruins Will Play Detroit Red Wings in Best-Of-Seven for Stanley Cup

By SIDNEY LEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Boston Bruins are in.

Chicago Black Hawks are out.

So ended the season-long reign of Paul Thompson's fourth-place play-off struggle as the predominate situation in the National Hockey League.

Hawks' hopes to step over Bruins into the final distinguished but night when they lost 3-5 to Boston at Chicago. And the defeat wrote in definite finis to the fourth-place battle which has been the only significant feature of N.H.L. action since Montreal Canadiens, Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs, in that order, sewed the first three positions in the standings early in the season.

The victory sewed Toronto, the champion, and Detroit Red Wings in the Stanley Cup semi-finals which will be played by the Leafs and Montreal Canadiens 3-1, their first victory since the Leafs defeated the Habitants in 1942 after losing the first two games.

Detroit meets Toronto in the other half of the Stanley Cup semi-finals.

Flutter Out of Picture

Chicago fluttered out of the picture when Bill Jennings and Armand (Dutch) Hasse, two of the Hawks in the second period effort, Rookie Paul Ebbs and Bill Cowley, then a 1-1 lead in the first period.

Ken Smith, Jack Shill and Otto Rosnisk beat Hawks' Goalie Mike Karakas in the last period to make it certain. The best the birds could do was goals by Don Grosso and Bromley Reid in the final night.

Eddie Bruneteau gave Detroit their first win in 10 starts against Canadiens with a goal early in the first period. Pat Egan and Joe Carveth put Detroit ahead 1-0 but Montreal Maroons tied the count on unsteady work early in the third period. Bruneteau's goal in it was Richard's 49th goal of the season and his 28th against Wings.

Detroit's Harry Lumley was assist to boost his season total to 23. Both were new N.H.L. records.

Moose Jaw Canucks Beat Edmonton 5-2

Edmonton, March 16 —(CP)— Moose Jaw Canucks, Saskatchewan junior hockey champions, last night defeated Edmonton Canadians 5-2 to enter a second of 6,000 in the first game in a best-of-seven serie in the Western Canada semi-final.

The 800 forward line of the Saskatchewan champions—Frank Ashworth, centre, Alex Butler and Clarence Mason, right—proved formidable. Butler, a left winger, bagged two goals. Cyril Denis also opened the scoring for Canadians.

In the third minute of the middle frame, Ralph Natiuzzi pushed the visitors up 2-1.

At the third frame opened, Bill Gadsby clicked to draw Edmonton within a goal of the hero Canucks smash home counters at 1:11 and 19:18.

Second game will be here Saturday night.

St. Louis Flyers Defeat Providence

(By The Canadian Press)
St. Louis Flyers won their first victory of the season on Providence ice last night when they downed Reds 4-3. Both clubs are in the battle of their respective divisions, are out of the league playoffs.

In the final minutes of the match Providence goalie gave Reds an early lead but, Bill Robinson evened the count three minutes later. Red Normandin put one ahead before Lavoie notched his second just as the period closed to tie the score again. George Bolton made it conclusive a few minutes later with his second counter of the game.

B.C.I. JUNIORS, ALBERT COLLEGE PLAY TO DRAW

Points Count in Two-Game Series With Return Game at College

It was a blazing battle between three ancient rivals when Albert College and the Belleville Collegiate In. Junior Bay of Quinte OCSSA. playdowns at the College on Wednesday when no decision was arrived at as the two teams matched quintettes raced through to a 26-26 draw in the first of a two-game, points-to count, final that will be decided at the B.C.I. College next Monday with the ultimate winner advancing to the OCSSA. provincial playdowns.

A capacity gallery saw Albert College drive through to an 11-9 half-time advantage, that was extended to a four-point lead with but seven minutes left in the final session. Although "Cam" Cameron matched basket for basket with the fast moving Alberts. It was Jim Watson's last two 'pots' that brought the Church St. "Collegians" to an even lead with Albert as the latter squad had had their stride definitely play early in the match.

Three-shooting Cam Cameron paced the scorers with 13 points for the B.C.I. to be followed by Jackie Jim" Watson, who notched 8 points, but it was the strong work of Bob Vaughan and the Collegiate defence that halted the Alberts late in the game. For Albert Coaches Sam Pisanko racked up nine points, while Ken Lindsay scored through for six and "Mac" Mockbaugh added four more, while setting up a strong defence with Christie. Vaughan's defensive play in the latter half was spectacular as the offensive efforts of the Townsend-ed quintette saw much erratic passing before they got the two basket brought matters even.

Canada Holds Favorable Position in Russian Esteem

By C. B. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Washington, March 16 (CP) — Canada holds a particularly favorable place in the esteem of Russians and probably will be the first country to receive the privileges of flying over and landing in the home of the Soviets, an observer recently back from Russia.

This information made the observation to support his argument that the Canadian delegation at the United Nations Security Conference in San Francisco would be in a delicate spot because of the diverse sentimental and practical interests of Canada in the world family of nations.

He suggested that the Canadian delegation would not want to support any amendments to the Dumbarton Oaks post-war security agreement—which is to be the basis of discussion at San Francisco—if such changes would displease the Soviet delegation.

Other observers here are interested in the position Canada would take in any dispute which might see the United Kingdom and the United States on opposite sides.

They see the Dominion possibly as the buffer between the Empire loyalty and love for the Mother country and her warm friendship and close ties with the United States.

In the larger field Canada is seen as a natural object of the sagacitions of the middle powers such as Russia and Australia and Belgium. They need an influential ally in either war. It is expected to make to obtain places of greater influence than those assigned to the nations other than the big five in the proposed world organization.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King sat with President Roosevelt on Tuesday's press conference and saw him. It was considered exactly as his own in essential details. The great difference is that the President holds them twice a week and King, now about twice a year, something he always admits with regret and apologies but does nothing to remedy although he handles press conferences as well as and perhaps better in a practical sense, than the President.

THE SECRET OF THE MARSHBANKS

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

CHAPTER 19

"She'll have ten thousand cliffs in it, why be one more thing to fuss about." Amy said indifferently. "She'll finish it, she'll do something, anyway. You know, Cherry, I've hardly been out with Jud since I've believed that she and Uncle Jud—"

"That's nonsense." Cherry said.

"I don't mean that she'd go down there and plan to shoot him," Amy said, "but she was perfectly wild that night over all that stuff that Emma told you, that revolver was lying right there. For that matter," the girl went on, "everyone in the place had a motive to kill him. But in this case look how my left hip simply bulges out like a watermelon. Isn't it sickening!"

"I can't see the slightest difference from the other, Amy, you're not going off with Gogo tonight!"

"I am going off with Gogo tonight. I am not sure when. But anyway, he's calling for me at half past seven, and I have to see Grace and have a scene before that."

So confident, so pretty, so instinct! Amy had a four days sentence every Cherry had. Cherry felt the older by that many years.

"Did they find out will of your father?" she asked almost involuntarily, out of thought, for Amy had hardly had long enough to assist with lawyers.

Amy shrugged indifferently. "No. No will." And she dropped a gown over her head, pulled it into place, jerked a shoe.

"But of course there was my grandfather's will," she said. "What my father left wasn't so much, it'll only bring me in—oh, maybe three or four thousand a year. So that his having left a will or not didn't count. I know how you feel, Cherry," said Amy, her speech somewhat impeded by the hairbrush she was carefully pressing upon her smooth head. "I know you believe that Emma said, of course I do! I mean, I'd trust you to say that on your honesty and absolutely believed was the truth, and so far as that goes, there isn't any statement on my part of any kind or description."

A few moments later Amy went to her grandmother's room, and when she emerged Cherry knew that her face was flushed and her eyes wet.

"I hate her!" she whispered, concluding with angry jerks the zipping that she had commenced earlier in the evening. "She and her chihuahua! She thinks there's a curse on this wretched family! If there is, she'll. Cherry, see my coat, and Martin will come up for the bag—" Amy murmured in rapid review. And then, with a sudden bite and hug: "Good-bye, Cherry darling, take care of yourself and graduate at the top of the class! Don't let all the news, but you tell you before we go, anyway; this rotten investigation may continue on for weeks, and Cherry, you tell Fran. She's out."

"She's back, Jud. Cherry, I just saw her come in."

"Well, you tell her anyway! Good-bye!" Amy was gone in a trail of excited laughter, Cherry heard Gogo's rich, low voice in the lower hall; then the front door closed, and Martin walked back alone.

"What's all the excitement?" Fran called through her half-opened door. Cherry went slowly in.

"Amy was married today in Reno."

"She wasn't!" Fran exclaimed.

"Yes, she was. The morning papers will have it, if the evening ones don't. There's no hiding a little like that."

"Pitiful little fool!" Fran said in a whisper. "Of course he's a complete rotter. Jud would have killed him. Old lady knows?" she asked with a jerk of her head in the direction of Mrs. Marshbanks' room.

"Amy just told her."

"Whist!"

"I imagine so. I believe she said that there was a curse on the family."

"I believe there is!" Fran said gloomily, staring into space. "They'll never find out who murdered Jud, but she's one. You can be pretty sure that the police are keeping an eye on that precious Gogo."

"Gogo had a motive," Cherry said. "Not only was the judge vicariously opposed to Amy's marrying him, but what he did was something that very night with her and with his mother and with me—you know something about that, Fran?"

"I couldn't be in this house without knowing something about it. It was some claim that your aunt made—something she said about Fred Marshbanks' will? Of course, that was all over before I came into the family, but Jud did mention Fred, and that—you don't mind my mentioning it?"

"That Fred Marshbanks was my father? Oh, no. I seem to have known that for a long, long time. But there was more to it than that. Then was a will drawn up by Judge Thomas Comstock. Nobody knew what was in that. But Mrs. Marshbanks burned it. She wouldn't risk Amy's being hurt or any of her money taken away."

"So." Fran said musingly, "Amy and Gogo had their motives for getting rid of Jud, and certainly old Mrs. Marshbanks had. If you believe," she said some old dock of an English judge once said, I had. He said that in almost every couple there might always be a motive, I don't see that you had."

There was a pause, then Fran said suddenly, "Kelly might have a motive."

"Kelly!" Cherry echoed, her voice suddenly failing.

"Well, if you're searching for motives, that is," Fran said quite as if it meant anyway," Fran said. "What I meant was that Kelly hates Amy's self or not didn't count. I know how you feel, Cherry," said Amy, her speech somewhat impeded by the hairbrush she was carefully pressing upon her smooth head. I know you believe that Emma said, of course I do! I mean, I'd trust you to say that on your honesty and absolutely believed was the truth, and so far as that goes, there isn't any statement on my part of any kind or description."

A few moments later Amy went to her grandmother's room, and when she emerged Cherry knew that her face was flushed and her eyes wet.

'Typical German Effort To Sow Dissension'

London, March 16 — (CP)—Authoritative quarters said today a German communique had approached British officials with a view toward an armistice but Britain had "firmly ignored" the overture and informed the United States and Soviet Russia immediately.

(A Washington dispatch quoted President Roosevelt as saying, on the reported peace feelers: the information has been received by us.")

It was said that Dr. Fritz Hesse, once German Ambassador to London, was assigned by Ribbentrop, German Foreign Minister, to make contact with a member of the British Legation in Stockholm.

The authoritative quarters, which cannot be fully identified at this time, described the move as a "typical German effort to sow dissension among the Allies."

Washington, March 16 — (AP)— President Roosevelt said today reporters took that the United States government has received nothing at all here in the way of German peace feelers. He said he understood the British Foreign Office had said it had nothing either.

He was asked if a news conference if he could give any information on rumors from Europe that there had been some peace discussions.

Anglers, Hunters Propose Many Recommendations to Fish and Game Com. of Legislature

Want More Pheasants Released in All Parts of the Province

Toronto, May 16 (CP)—Setting aside of a portion of one of the townships in the Nipissing District as an archery reserve, Thursday was recommended to the Ontario legislature Fish and Game Committee by H. J. Mitchell, President of the Hunting and Field Archers of Ontario.

Mr. Mitchell said that archers hunting in various sections of Ontario had just neither killed nor wounded a deer or moose.

Selecting a special area for archery hunting would preserve game and give safety to the archer, who must dress in appropriate woodland clothes for stalking, and is therefore in danger from gun hunters.

He gave the committee a practical demonstration of the power and accuracy of the bow and arrow by piercing repeatedly a tin-can target set up in the committee room.

His wife duplicated the feat.

Dr. Allen O. Seccord, representing the Ontario Federation of Anglers and hunters, warned that unless "there is a considerable increase in the number of pheasants released in southern Ontario, we won't have this type of hunting." He urged the Fish and Game Department to increase its annual release of pheasants by at least 100,000.

Wants Open Squirrel Season.

Recommendations in Dr. Seccord's brief, including resolutions from member associations throughout the province, included: That the sale of cottontail rabbits be prohibited in the entire province; that setting of snares be prohibited; that there be an open season in Waterloo county; that Wolfe Island, near Kingston, be closed to duck shooting unless there is a cessation of currently prevalent baiting practices; that a "learner's hunting license" be authorized for boys between 14 and 16 years of age, who would be accompanied by a parent or guardian and tutored in proper hunting practices; that Renfrew county be closed to ruffed grouse hunting next year; that a game warden be appointed for the Iroquois Falls district; and that the use of dogs be permitted in duck hunting.

Want Geese Bag Limited.

Another resolution, from the Kingston Rod and Gun Club, asked that the season bag limit for geese in Ontario be reduced to 20. This is aimed as a protective measure for geese in the Hannah Bay area, a concentration point for a majority of the blue geese in the world. It is claimed that Cree Indians are dependent on these geese as a winter food supply.

H. S. Chauvin, secretary-treasurer of the Essex County Sportsmen's Association, said duck shooting "is being eradicated in our district because it is not based on the flyways for migrating ducks." He suggested that the Joint Pelee National Park waters be planted with wild rice to re-establish the flyways in western Ontario.

The committee passed a motion by John H. Cook, C.C.F. member of the Legislature for Waterloo North, that copies of resolutions of local Game and Fish Associations be presented to legislative members before the committee meets to permit better consideration.

BONARLAW

Friends Honor Sgt. R. Radcliffe, Blinded Veteran

Bonarlaw, Ont., March 16—Sgt. Rynard Radcliffe, popular returned blind soldier, was honored a gathering of about 200 of his friends and neighbors in the Orange Hall at Springbrook Tuesday evening where he was the guest of honor and the guest speaker. The Sergt gave a resume of his life from the time he was born a few miles west of Springbrook, moved with his parents at an early age to Ottawa where he attended public and high school, enlisted there with the 59th Land Regiment, was in Prince Rupert B.C., for some time as an instructor, and finally landed in France. He wounded in a clear and pleasant voice many incidents, which were interesting and instructing, adding a humorous anecdote occasionally. He told of his accident, how he and several of his men who were wounded at the same time received first aid within ten minutes and within one hour and a half were receiving attention in a field hospital. Sergt. Radcliffe believes our men at the front are receiving the best medical attention that medical science can produce. Spoke of St. Dunstans.

He spoke of St. Dunstans School for the Blind in England where he was a pupil for three months receiving to it as a famous organization started in 1915 by Sir Arthur Pearson He will continue his studies in Canada at Exeter Hall, Toronto in the near future. He invited persons in the audience to visit the institute. The question concerning the Red Cross work being done in England was a welcome one. He thinks they are doing a wonderful work and cannot speak too highly of them. He also thanked the Springbrook Women's Institute for the grand work being done by that organization.

Musical Program.

Prior to the Sergeant's address the gathering was addressed by Rev. J. N. Holden of Springbrook and Rev. J. M. Brownell of Bonarlaw and a musical program was given by local talent under the chairmanship of Lorne Johnson which included instrumental numbers by Mel Gibson (accordion), Lois Mason and Barbara Middleton (piano duet), Mrs. Caldwell (violin) Murney and Lenora Bateman (guitars), vocal solo by Dorothy, vocal duet Mrs. Thos. Sarles and Sidney Mason, vocal duet Verna Woodbeck and Norma Mason, vocal duet the Ray sisters, vocal duet Rev. J. M. Brownell and F. F. Baker.—Given Force of Money.

At the close of the program Sergt. Radcliffe was presented with a purse of money thanking the presentation on behalf of the friends and neighbors of the community which he is held by one and all. The gift was made, he said, not that it could in any way compensate him for years of hard sacrifice but in the hope, that at some future date he would purchase therewith, something that he would call a memento of the respect and esteem as well as the good wishes for the future of his many friends of the community.

Recipient Thanks Friends.

The Sergeant thanked those present for the gift which came as a surprise and assured them that although he did not need a monocle in order to remember their kindness he would follow the suggestion given. He made the remark that some people like started at forty but he considered, that life started for him on July twenty-fifth 1944.

This was the Day he Was Wounded.

Led by Mr. Johnston, the chairman, the ex-vets given three hearty cheers and a tiger, which was followed by the national anthem.

Lunch has been served in the basement of the hall and a pleasant half hour of social intercourse was enjoyed by all.

A vote of thanks was tendered the Orange Lodge for the use of the hall, to those who assisted with the program and to the program committee Messrs. Lindsay Mumby, Frank Cosbey and Chas. Lough who made all arrangements.

Dutch Boy Tells of His Joy When Freed by Allies in Letter to Local Lad

Freedom, exemplified in the roaring tanks and marching feet of Canadian troops, brought untold joy to Dutch children and adults, forced to work under the Nazi heel for the past three and one-half years.

Feelings of the Dutch, liberated by Canada's fighting men are graphically described by a young Dutch boy writing to Master Gerald Mumford, son of Corporal and Mrs. Harry Semark of this city. Corporal Semark has been overseas for the past four years, is at present fighting in Holland, and relayed the letter to his son from young Herman Mulder, Dutch schoolboy.

"Your father," young Mulder writes in stark English, "is with his troop here in our building." Mulder is one of a number of schoolboys resident in a Dutch boarding school.)

"Holland is a nice country," he says, "but our enemies the Jerries, we call them 'Moffen' are still in the greater part of Holland. My parents are still under the heel of the enemy for they live with my brothers and sisters at Enschede, some miles from here. I think they will be very hungry and I wish I could send them food."

The Germans schmandered the school building in 1940 and the young students were forced to study in another building, Mulder writes. "I came back to the school in September last. The Allies were already in Belgium and the German troops came through our village flowing across the river. They were in great disorder."

"Two weeks before our liberators came, all the people in the village between ages of 14-60 had to work for the Germans. They had to make slit trenches and dug-outs by the canal, for the Jerries thought that the Allies would come from that direction. But they didn't. Instead they came the opposite way."

"On Oct. 1st the first grenades exploded in the village. We all had to go into the cellars. Grenades fell around us. We stayed in the cellars for two days. Then we went out and learned the Allies were in the next village about 30 minutes walk from where we were. Half an hour later the first Allied tanks were in our village. There were nine of us boys in the school because we had to stay when the railways went on strike. We rushed to the next street where four tanks were. We rushed to them. Never in my life have I rushed so fast. The first minute I couldn't say a word. Tears ran down our faces. People were so excited they didn't know what to do. The Allies could not go any farther and our people showered them with flowers and gifts."

"We jumped on the tanks and rode with them. It was a grand experience. Soon there were many Allies in the village. They gave our people cigarettes and chocolate. It made us so happy. We want to thank your country whose armies liberated a great part of my country, and in this letter I want to thank all the people of Canada."

The Dutch boy concluded his letter with a request that Gerald correspond with him. "I will look out full of expectations" was his final quaint remark.

Seven Are Killed As Transport Plane Crashes on Hillside

San Carlos, Calif., March 16 (AP)—The crash of a big transport plane on a storm-lashed hillside killed seven men and injured 16 others, the United States Navy said today.

The accident occurred last night a few miles southwest of here.

The plane carried 29 persons, headquarters said, all navy and Marine personnel.

The plane was flying from Olathe, Kas., via San Pedro, Calif., to Oakland, Calif., when it had been reported overdue. It pancaked in high wind and heavy rain on a steep, grassy hillside at about 8:40 p.m. breaking in half. One of its two engines was aborn off.

REINFORCEMENT

Of the war, the Defence Minister said that American, British and Polish divisions had fought under Canadian Command on occasions with losses in recent drives less than had been anticipated. This, he said, was due to a large measure to efficiency, dash and gallantry shown in the operations.

Policies Justified

The smaller losses plus reinforcements gave the Minister hope to carry out plans for getting men overseas now for 1 1/2 years or for shorter periods for their leaves. Members of the armed forces in battle for a long period should be returned, he said. Those returning in March numbered 1,500 and it was hoped the April total would be 3,000.

At this stage of his address Gen. McNaughton announced bluntly: "I can say now, in March, that reinforcement problem is solved."

He said that when he was called on by Prime Minister Mackenzie King to advise on reinforcements he entered the government for the purposes of seeing the men overseas were properly maintained. At the time, however, he was considering another job outside of Canada.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner, who introduced the General said men of the Home Defence Army overseas were being accepted as comrades in army by others there and that Gen. McNaughton's policies had been justified.

THOUSANDS OF GERMANS FACE ENCIRCLEMENT

Red Forces Within 5 Miles of Stettin

Heaviest Pressure Exerted Against Southern Flank

Fall of Griefhagen Assists Spanning of the Oder

Moscow, March 17—(AP)—Tanks and infantry of the 1st White Russian Army thrust forward again today to within five miles of Stettin and bridgehead at Stettin from within five miles of that vital northern gateway to Berlin.

Simultaneously, the Russians were reported bringing up pontoon equipment along the three-mile stretch of the Oder river in the vicinity of captured Griefhagen, less than 15 miles south of Stettin.

The heaviest pressure Moscow was exerted against the southern flank of the German bridgehead, which extends along the east bank of the Oder for about 40 miles south from Stettin's eastern suburb of Altdamm, on the edge of Dammascher See.

The remaining enemy bridgehead east of the Oder is only four miles deep at some points.

Fall of Griefhagen, Field Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's troops into another good jump-off point for widening the Oder. However, the main highway bridge across the Oder's eastern arm, the Dammer See canal, at Oder itself, from Griefhagen Ward the Russian Supreme Authority unofficially reported demolished before the Russians reached the town.

Meanwhile, the Soviet White Russian Army Group, liquidating the enemy's East Prussian fragments, pressed closer to Konigsberg and reached the outskirts of the port of Brandenburg, which already has been cut off from Koenigsberg, 10 miles to the northwest.

An unofficial war report from the most crucial of all sectors of the eastern front—the 36-mile stretch of the Middle Oder due east of Berlin — where both German and Russian troops continued to mass for an impending climactic battle.

Reinforcements for Rokossovsky and White Russian Army again today sustained the powerful pressure aimed at splitting the Danzig-Dybrin coastal strip against the strongest opposition yet encountered in eastern Pomerania and the Polish corridor.

In Western Hungary the massive tussle for Balaton oil fields appeared to have enforced at least a pause in the German counter-offensive that so far not only has failed to regain positions along the Danube south of Budapest, but, the Soviet account, has cost the Germans the best part of four Panzer divisions.

30,000 Yanks Home on Leave Every Month

Washington, March 17 (CP) — Some 30,000 members of the United States army forces overseas are being granted rotation leave every month, War Department officials announced today.

The system of rotating leave was instituted more than a year ago, and close to 300,000 personnel have come home either on rotation leave or regular furlough.

The former provides the recipient with 31 days in the United States, and if he desires, a tour of duty in the theatre ends with home establishments before he again is posted overseas.

Regular furlough, granted primarily to men who have been wounded or ill and have received decorations for distinguished service, provides 30 days at home followed by immediate return to his own unit.

Defence Minister Ralston Speaks

Ottawa, March 13 that an increase in the quota of rotation leaves for Canadian soldiers with long overseas service from 1,000 a month to 1,500 for March and 2000 for April. The minister said the increase was made because reinforcements were lower than estimated and replacements could be made from Canadians serving overseas (strength.)

Under the United States system, granting of rotation leave depends on length of service, the availability of transportation and the immediate situation of the unit to which the soldier belongs. Few leaves are attached.

For that reason no general rule is laid down by the War Department, officials said, the application strictly with the commander in the field.

Length of service, quality of performance, the extent of pressure being put on the enemy, combat or other factors are considered, officials said, so far not only has failed to regain positions along the Danube south of Budapest, but the Soviet account, has cost the Germans the best part of four Panzer divisions.

Iwo Jima Already Paying off With Quick Dividends

Guam, March 17. (AP) — Small, volcanic Iwo, won at a cost of 4,189 United States Marines killed, 15,308 wounded and 441 missing already is paying off with quick dividends.

It was disclosed today that two airfields are in combat operation there within fighter range of Tokyo. The second one, in the centre of the island-square-mile island — was completed by engineers who worked on it while the battle for less was attached.

For that reason no general rule is laid down by the War Department, officials said, the application strictly with the commander in the field.

Length of service, quality of performance, the extent of pressure being put on the enemy, combat or other combat conditions, are all taken into consideration.

AMERICANS CUT OFF JAPANESE ESCAPE ROUTE

New Amphibious Operation Tightens Pinch on Enemy in Southern Luzon

Manila, March 17 — (AP) — The U. S. 32rd Division has moved its heavy artillery to within 8 miles of Baguio and today can drop shells into the former summer capital of the Philippines.

The 43rd Infantry Division meanwhile is delivering a heavy doublepronged blow against the Japanese in the Shimbu Line east of Manila while an amphibious operation has been made in southern Luzon.

Installations around Baguio, Gen. Yamashita's headquarters, have been bombed and shelled heavily. But the city has been spared.

The advance of the 33rd has been slow — 12 miles in a month — but the methodical gain has been made through difficult mountainous terrain filled with Japanese ambush parties.

New Successes

A communique announced the new successes today along with stepped-up air attacks on enemy islands between Luzon and the Japanese homeland, including Formosa.

The 43rd has destroyed the entire south flank of the Shimbu Line around Antipolo and Laguna De Bay, then swung back to the highway at Mabitac and Lumban, cutting off the seizure of a road network around Tresa, the action cut Japanese escape routes to the southern Luzon area.

In the amphibious operation, elements of the 158th Regimental combat team made a water jump from Lemery on the Balayan Bay in Batangas province south at Desalan on the west coast of Calumpan Peninsula. This action, a little over 50 miles south of Manila, strikes American domination over Verde Passage, along the main sea supply route through the Philippines.

Two-mile advance

Northeast of the original Lumon foreaten, beachhead at Lingayen Gulf, the 32nd and 33rd Infantry Divisions met strong enemy resistance in advances toward the Philippines' summer capital, Baguio, in the Bloomer mountains.

Today's communique reported an advance of two miles south of the Namon in the Zambonga area of Mindanao by elements of the 41st Division which invaded that southern Philippine island a week ago. The invaders now are 10 miles of the Zamboanga coast.

HUNDREDS MORE HOME FROM ALL FIGHTING FRONTS

Survivor of Arnhem Show Says His Company Was Shot Squeezed by Nazis

By The Canadian Press

Ottawa, March 17—(CP)—Another large contingent of Canadian soldiers and airmen have arrived back in Canada after months of fighting on the fighting fronts of the world. Some of them are back on relative leave, others come on "Tri-wound" leave plan, and some because they are over-age in group.

The contingent included R.C.A.F. women's division members, Canadian Navy and Canadian Merchant Marine personnel Canadian fire-fighters from Britain, C.W.A.C.'s and British wives of Canadian servicemen.

Included in a party of high-ranking officers led by Brig. Girard Vanier Bradbrooke of London, Ont., was Col. William McNeil of Toronto, former military secretary to Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton. He was Gen. McNaughton's secretary from the establishment of the 1st Canadian Corps in 1941 until early last year.

Brig. Bradbrooke was formerly Commander of an Army Group overseas and lately liaison officer with the British 8th army.

The party would not comment on the reinforcement situation but said he had "the greatest confidence" in Gen McNaughton.

"What Gen. McNaughton is doing is best for the army. Not only the army, but the country owes him a great debt," they said.

Among officers returning were Lieutenant-Colonels, W.B. Penwarn of Ottawa, P.O. Morse of Brockville, Ont., R.H. Rimmer of Camp Borden, Ont., D.E. St. Pierre, and R.H. Winters of Ottawa, R. M. Shields of London, Ont., and Lieut.-Johnson of Montreal.

Pte. D. H. Palmer of Brantford, Ont., one of the survivors of the Battle of Arnhem last fall, was among the returning troops. One of the 2,000 survivors of a force of 10,000 men, Pte. Palmer described the time he was in the pocket as the "worst 16 days in my life." Palmer was a member of the 1st Parachute Service Force landed at Arnhe, Carried "Pegasus" Emblem

B29S FIRE KOBE INSTALLATIONS IN HEAVY RAID

12 Square Miles of Shipbuilding Centre Set Afire or Reduced To Ashes

Guam, March 17 — (AP)—Twelve square miles of Japan's greatest shipbuilding centre, Kobe, was set afire or reduced to ashes by more than 300 Superforts today. Fires were visible 100 miles.

The conflagration, created by 2,500 tons of incendiaries, was second only to Tokyo's 17-square mile holocaust in the Mar. 9-10 attack on Japan's homeland war on the Japanese homeland.

In eight days, Superforts also have destroyed five square miles of industrial area and 20 square miles in the heart of Nagoya.

Col. W. E. Blanchard, operations officer of the 21st Bomber Command who flew over Kobe in the 314 g. m. Superfort while the raid was in progress, reported that as his observation B-29 left the target several square miles already had been reduced to ashes. Fires were devouring more miles of factories, shipyards and other war plants. Smoke Rose 20,000

That 12 square miles represented about 75 per cent of long, narrow Kobe's total area. The 1,000,000 population city contains 16 miles along the inland Japanese Sea.

Among the flaming targets were the Mitsubishi Aircraft plant, the wasaka locomotive plant and the shipyards.

It was reported that a reconnaissance plane today observed new fires were still burning in Osaka, presumably the result of Wednesday night's incendiary attack by 300 B-29s.

Radio Tokyo said Osaka also was the target of B29s again today but that report was not confirmed here.

No Ferts Lost

Returning first returning pilots said 45 to 50 enemy fighters harassed them over Kobe, none of the American planes was known to have been lost.

Kobe, unlike Tokyo, Nagoya, and Osaka, has no large rivers or canals. Three large railroad yards and its 16 depots for water were believed dangerously low in fighting large fires.

American Columns Lunge Behind Huge Saarland Triangle

Patton Sends Ultimatum To Coblenz Says Paris Radio

By JAMES M. LONG
(A.P. Staff Writer)

Paris, March 17 (AP) — U.S. 3rd. Army tanks lunged to points 40 miles southeast of Coblenz today in a race against time to block the retreating Germans in the huge Saarland triangle and were rapidly closing a trap on thousands of Germans between the Rhine and Moselle Rivers.

Lt.-Gen. Patiog's armored columns burst forward another ten to fifteen miles today southeast of Trier, 25 miles south of Coblenz and 45 from the Remagen bridgehead.

Other units drove to the Rhine south of Coblenz, isolating the city of 54,000, and pushed up the east side of the Moselle to the outskirts of the ancient citadel.

The Paris radio said today that Lt.-Gen. Patton had sent an ultimatum to Coblenz asking for the surrender of the city in order to save it from destruction.

There was no official Allied confirmation of the report.

Halfway to Mainz

Patton's tanks, already halfway from Coblenz to Mainz, threatened to pocket perhaps as many as two Germans armies in the triangle formed by the Rhine and Moselle, and now poised to drive to the Rhine from U.S. 7th. Army men pushing up from the south.

Americans who swept over the Rhine at Remagen had taken the towns and villages east of the river, cut the Autobahn superhighway at two points, crushed the first large armor-supported German counter-attack.

First army troops had won more than 20 square miles, some 12 miles in the triangle formed by the Rhine and Moselle, and now pushed to within 25 miles

Fri. Temperature Breaks Century Record Here

When Belleville awakened Friday morning it was to find that the mercury rose with many appearing on the streets clad in their lightest attire. During the week, it is stated, the temperature has been on the rise, with many commenting the statement that March comes in like a lion and goes out like a lamb" in reference to the month of March.

At the noon hour Friday, a check of the Belleville Water Purification Plant thermometer registered 64 degrees. This marks the highest temperature recorded for the month of March for more than one hundred years.

Local weathermen claims that Ontario is experiencing a warm weather to a warm wind which has been blowing northward with the Mississippi Valley and the southwestern States. And as they also call the weather for us a few days in advance they say that the warmth of early next week today will be partly cloudy and mild with possible showers during the evening.

In the western part of the province, it is stated, the warm weather has been even more marked with the mercury climbing to the century climbing to 68 degrees at Toronto. In Ottawa the high temperature recorded on Friday, was only 36 degrees.

Department of Highways Under Attack by Hepburn in House; Doucett Takes Up Challenge

Minister Says First Letter Sent to Oil Companies Cancelled by Another Directive

Toronto, March 17 — (CP)—Premier Drew's Progressive Conservative administration fought for the second week under fire of Liberal Leader Mitchell Hepburn in the Ontario Legislature. Object of the attack was the Department of Highways.

Hepburn charged Minister Doucett, defending himself on implications of favoritism in the Mc-Hepburn that he had used his position in favor a Toronto bonding company, and "certain leaders of officials of the department" had sent a letter to oil companies April 14, 1944, with regard to furnishing bonds for certain gas tax payments. They had been in error.

Minister Doucett denied this and Hon. William C. Webster, chairman of the Ontario Liquor Control Board, and Hon. Leslie M. Frost, K.C., acting with the Reeve of Port Stanley were interested in the case. The latter told him the Church of England had granted former reeve Webster authority the company to lay the pipeline. In addition, the former reeve had been employed by the Imperial Oil Company for undisclosed reasons.

Told as Agent's Fees

Rising before adjournment, Mr. Hepburn said Joseph McManus had just told him by telephone that the $5,000 had been paid the former reeve as an agent's fee for McManus property on which he held an option. "This was paid after the council was defeated," the Liberal leader added.

White-Coated Bunny May Be Indication Of More Cold Weather

Those wishful thinking people who believe that the chirping of a few robins and the appearance of faint tracks of a caterpillar crawling up a dusty window, the thaw of the ice from a tiny stream around through the grimy snow, are real indications that the winter season is due for a jolt, if the spring psychology of a local transport driver can be taken as true.

It appears the driver, in question while driving through Foxboro early yesterday morning, noticed a large jack rabbit cavorting near the entrance to the Foxboro Cheese Factory, on Highway No. 2. This is a common sight these days but this particular buck was snow white in color.

All of which doesn't mean a thing of a winter weary public, but the truck-driving prognosticator insists that there is now no doubt but that snow always

Whether the immaculate jack rabbit, had worn snowshoes and had been seen by the driver, the result would have started to change the color of his coat, and not a single mottled grey, which is the last stage in summer wear for buck and other rabbits, would be in evidence.

So there it is. While the driver, who is speaking, passed the buck, he may not be doing so in another series of the word.

Lt. McKay Writes His Impressions Of a Soldier's Life at the Front

"Lieut. Lloyd Carlton McKay of Belleville did on grand job in the fray at Moaiker during early November," writes Major Strome having reached its objective was pinned down by extremely heavy mortar fire and machine gun fire from enemy forces. Young McKay refused to take cover but stood dir- ing the fire of the enemy. He then personally led three attacks to meet the enemy's counters and completely destroyed them.

About this time he was wounded in the chest and legs. Although his wounds he climbed on's supporting tank and under stiff enemy fire, directed it into buildings held by the Germans."

The above is war correspondent's story of the heroic action of Lieut. L. C. McKay, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. McKay, 36 Turnbull Street, and who at present is recovering from his wounds in No. 2 Canadian General Hospital somewhere in Italy.

Transferred to Infantry

A former sergeant in the 34th Field Battery here, Lieut. McKay went overseas with the 32nd Field Battery in June, 1941, as a gunner. In May, 1944, he was commissioned and later promoted to lieutenant, unable to go to France with his battery, transferred to the infantry and was posted to the Queen's Own Rifles, of Toronto, with which he has been fighting since. He is a former student of Belleville Collegiate Institute.

Letters from his hospital bed to his parents bring some slightly interesting highlights of the twenty-two-year-old soldier's life at the fighting zones, and he makes some very pertinent remarks about the opinion of the enemy and the country in which he is fighting.

"The year 1944 is over," he writes, "but it is the same old story. The British and Canadians have the lodge and the American armor does the bashing. It will be cold back up there. Lying in a bed won't with the war. At time will come when I will lead. I owned the score for two of my section commanders and a couple of other fellows."

Loves His "Work"

"You know," he adds, "it takes an enormous amount of self-control to take some German prisoners after they have killed a couple of your pals. They are a curious bunch. They fight like hell when a hundred yards away then they start to whimper. Their paratroop troops are the fight ers. They don't holler "Mir, nix."

I guess I shouldn't talk so much the first I know you will think I don't enjoy this work. I love it. The men of those guns have fight to the end, the fewer there'll be when the war is over, to start on other one with. There are only two types of Germans. Live ones and dead ones. The more of the latter the better."

"From a wee spot in the country of the Superman, I send you greetings," Lieut. McKay writes in another letter. He commanded the first platoon of Canadian infantry to cross the Rhine River.

"As much as I like Germany and her polities I certainly admire the country as a section of land. The farms are in wonderful condition. The buildings are, or were in good condition. "The cattle, pigs, chickens are the same as our counters in relation to the size of the country.

Plenty of Stolen Food In Rome

"Rome was a wide open city. It was shot up, and die Deutche took with from Holland."

"One of the most amazing things I saw was the state of stored food in Rome. Almost 500 yards away, over the German border there are enormous amounts in all the houses, shops, etc. There are talking through my hat but I have seen it and that convinced me. In places in Germany where no orchard existed for miles there are canned apples, plums, cherries, pears and other fruits in all of the houses a number of friends called to extend felicitations.

Thoughts by the Way On St. Patrick's Day

By Helen E. Anderson

THE EMERALD ISLE

There's an island green and sparkling,
Far across the ocean foam;
Irish hearts in days of mourning
Wherever their footsteps roam;
And old Erin, dear mother-country,
Watches from her sea-girt shore,
Hoping for their safe return home,
When their pilgrimage is o'er.

Green her tides and meads and mountains,
Rhine her rivers that o'er them flow;
How her lake's bright gleaming waters
With a glory, grand, sublime;
Bless the Irish eyes where laughter
Blends so deftly with tears,
Sad her songs, yon, tender music
Echoing downward through the years.

Tara's Hall no more resounding
With the tuneful harp and song;
May no longer notes of discord
Oer the Shamrock Isle prolong;
Come again, O good St. Patrick!
Bring to her your blessings rare,
Breathe once more the Gospel Message
Then old Ireland will have peace.

—Helen E. Anderson.

On St. Patrick's Day, thoughts of Irishmen the world over, are turning to Erin the land of their birth. To those of us, who have Irish only from the pages of history, it is a land of strife and dissension, but to the Irish it is a land of beauty far they may roam, it is the fairest land on earth. . . . It is to believe what we read in Irish songs and story, the love of home is the land is a characteristic of the Irish race.

I recall a sad story that my mother used to tell of an Irish youth who came to Canada to make his fortune to make his home near the present village of Wellington, and having become homesick, he returned home into the woods and died. His body was found by some children and they told the story to the people of Wellington. Afd I am sure the late Archie McPhail, one of the first settlers, held his memory in pioneer settlers, held his native land in kindly remembrance when he named the beautiful country residence that he built in East Wellington, "Erin Hall" after the home of the ancient Irish Kings.

Did he dream of becoming a ruler in this new western land?
O Tara Hall the soldier dream as he planned each turret and tower and gable
That an Irish King would relgn in thee
As in old Tara across the Sea?

Another instance of the blending loving instinct of the Irish race is found in the lines of Thomas Campbell's "Exile of Erin," written by the Irish poet. Oliver Goldsmith, who left Ireland to speak his love for his native home. And we learn too that Ireland's beloved poet, Moore, was inspired to write the won fame and honor did not blind his loving heart to Erin.

And letters that I receive from an occasional correspondent in Ireland the same loyalty. A lady in an Ontario town after reading my poem "I've Never Been to Ireland", writes

That although Canadian born, Ireland seems dear to her as after the stories of Erin as told by her father and mother. She writes, Then a letter from an Irish lad in service in Egypt, Private Stevens reveals a loyal heart, when he writes of the beauty of his native Ireland and of his heart's longing to visit it once more. I sincerely hope that his wish may be gratified. Then a letter from Montreal, attracted by one of my poems, from a lady in which she tells of her visiting the Emerald Isle and of the friendliness of the people. That when Christmas time arrived she sent me a pretty gift, a beautiful sheet tea cloth. Bless her generous Irish heart!

And now about St. Patrick. I believe Scotland claims to be the place of his birth but we are told he died on March 17, and is buried in Ardmagh; He brought the gospel message to Erin, and it is said he plucked a Shamrock from the sod to illustrate the Trinity. Blessed Trinity. Surely in these days of warfare and strife, we need more than the spirit of St. Patrick, we need the spirit of Christ. His is a message like St. Patrick to inspire a world of peace.

Ayesha interested in the Ahmadi Ida will find H. V. Morton's book In Search of Ireland, a fine description of the country and its people.

A low round hill with earthen mounds for spread
Covered with waving grass and purpling heath
Looks down upon the rotting plains of Meath
And this is Tara — all its glory fled —
Here Kings and Chieftains met in days long dead
And famous champions sought the Warrior's wreath.
While music from the pleasing harp of Heathdale
To lead the living and extoll the dead!

Now sounds no harp by Tara's mouldering mound
Like Tyre and Nineveh in dust it lies around
The plaintive curlew o'er it sadly calls
And the gray bat above its ruins flits;
But when the midnight wind makes mournful sigh
Then ghosts of mighty heroes gather nigh!

Says Church Should Welcome Chaplains In Trade Unions

Toronto, March 17 —(CP)— The part of the church in Canada's industrial relations was outlined yesterday, March 17, by Minister of Welfare, in an address before the annual meeting of the Board of Evangelism and Social Services, United Church of Canada.

The church should accept responsibility if development of Canada's leadership in industry, Dr. Frazier said, adding:

"The church should send representatives to labor meetings, availing itself of the opportunity to conduct devotional exercises and bring fraternal greetings. It should welcome the appointment of chaplains to local unions and use the pages of union papers for church news and notices.

Right of trade unions to take political action should be defended and pouted. The church should assert there was nothing evil in democratic trial unionism.

British Columbia is the begining drinking province in Canada, with Alberta and Ontario second and third respectively, Rev. Hugh Dobson said in an address to the Board.

Quebec came fourth on the list, Dr. Dobson said.

The Board decided to protest to Hon. C. D. Howe, minister of munitions and supply, against "the unnecessary loss of manpower and labor to provide additional brewing capacity in Ontario and Quebec."

The protest followed reports received by the Board that additional brewery will be built in Quebec and a 500,000 extension to a brewery in Ontario is planned.

Eleven Tons of Destruction

Something new has come to strike Hitler's war machine, the 11-ton "city buster" British bombs being borne to Bielefeld, Germany and there used. These concentrations of explosive are capable of knocking out from seven to eleven blocks in a single blast but their main purpose is to get at secret arsenals underground and Ruhr strongholds.

Here is a weapon that goes to the target. It is not like the V-1 and V-2 Hun flying bombs of the enemy which strike indiscriminately but it is designed to get at subterranean plants of the Hitler regime. The massive explosive will uproot Hitler's underground factories and plants.

So the war moves on against the enemy, who has been forced to dig under with his planks. The huge bombs will open them up with a destructiveness that the Hitlerites never expected.

Mr. Churchill on the War

The world now has Prime Minister Churchill's word that the war will end in many may end "before the summer ends or even sooner" and that "victory lies before us—certain and perhaps near." It is ten years since a British general election was held and Mr. Churchill said in addressing the British Conservatives that with victory "war conditions will no longer prevent us as they have hitherto the holding of a general election." He sees a year ahead in the war to end Japanese aggression and tyranny. In this latter struggle Britain will carry on as an ally with the Allies, to defeat Japan and right the wrongs that Japan has done and also to regain territory the Japanese had wrested from Britain in the early days of the war.

The British Prime Minister paid a glowing tribute to the manner in which Britain and the Empire had stood alone at one time against the Hitler menace, "We held aloft the flaming torch of freedom when all around the night was black. It is thus we gained the time for the continental tyrant, Hitler, to make a deadly blunder. Thus we gained the space for the United States to begin the marshalling of its great, unmeasured forces in the realm of science and valor." He referred to "another glory" of the Empire and Commonwealth of its own free will, from the greatest Dominion to the smallest colony in spontaneous resolution to die or conquer with us in a righteous cause." This record he called "unparalleled."

He quoted a former Prime Minister of Britain, Lord Beaconsfield (Benjamin Disraeli), who had used the maxim "Imperium et Libertas" (Empire and Liberty) is still our guide, and he remarked that "without freedom there is no foundation for our Empire, without Empire there is no safeguard for our Freedom."

Mr. Churchill who has so clear a conception of British democracy was able to give a definition of freedom which cannot be excelled and one that must inspire every British subject with the sense of the privilege and responsibility which is his as a subject of the King and Empire. By freedom he said, "we mean freedom for all states and nations within the circle of the Crown. By this we also mean freedom for individuals within it, broad and ever advancing conceptions of the British Constitution and the British way of life."

From Seaweed

Common brown seaweed is the subject of an intensive study by a new Scottish Seaweed Research Association. In addition to iodine and potash, brown seaweed has infinite possibilities for use, both commercially and medicinally.

Gums, glues, size, textiles, plastics, paper and jellies are only a few of the substances that can be obtained from it. First-class wallboard is another. Boiled with soda and other substances the seaweed turns into a kind of cement which, when reinforced with fibre, makes wallboard that will hold nails and take varnish and paint.

A transparent paper somewhat similar to cellulose can also be obtained by extracting the algin (a gelatinous substance) from the seaweed and treating it with caustic soda and tannin. Treated with vulcanizing agent the algin yields a rubber-like material which can be used to make typewriter rollers.

Mixed with a metal, algin can be spun into a lustrous rayon that is not only of great strength but also completely water and fireproof.

Alginic acid and its salts are already used in protective colloids, jellying agents in foodstuffs, in cosmetics, in pharmaceutical products, and in paper coating.

An alginate is used in forming the moulds that give the shape of the eye for fitting of contact lenses. This suggests the possibility of similar use in dentistry for making moulds of gums.

Films of calcium alginate are used in brain and eye surgery, and the injection of sodium alginate and a lime compound in bone-setting has been found to give excellent results.

In the eighteenth century the seaweed industry in the United Kingdom was a flourishing one. In days of sparse pasture it was used as a fodder for sheep, while "tangled tangle"—an edible variety like dulse—was a familiar cry in Edinburgh streets; but the bulk of the weed was gathered and incinerated for kelping by the "kelpers" and crofters from the lonely shielings of Scotland. Then Chilean iodine was produced in great quantities and the British industry languished.

The Research Association, with its survey and ecological division, its engineering division, and its chemical division, is in a position to give the industry not only the blessings of revival, but is opening up possibilities undreamed of in the past.

Education in Sudan

The first meetings of the Council of the new Gordon Memorial College at Khartoum have just been held. The college buildings, opened in 1902 by Lord Kitchener, will be handed over to the University College, which, it is hoped, will eventually develop into an independent university. The six acres of the college grounds, including after secondary school, already established by the Sudan Government, will be incorporated into this University College, and there the only two existing institutes of teachers' training college and the Kitchener School of Medicine—will be brought into organic relationship with the new foundation.

In the first educational year in the Sudan, 1899, there were only 300 boys at school. By 1940 the numbers attending Government schools had risen to over 30,000, plus 20,000 in khalwas, and another 20,000 in missions and private schools.

From the beginning the Education Department has had a first claim on the Sudan's expanding revenue. The new college is a tribute both to the men who have formed the educational policy of the Sudan and to the Sudanese people who are today taking their full share in the development of education in their own country.

His Auto Roads

(New York Times).

The six-lane Rhine-Berlin superhighway which has been under construction our First Army's guns is one of the express roads which Hitler built, so he said, for his German people to drive their low-price Volkswagen on when they sallied forth in pursuit of Strength through Joy. But in practice it never got as far as that; the war intervened. For that matter, it never got as far as the German people taking delivery of the joy-creating Volkswagen for which they paid in advance. Their money was put to other uses than building pleasure automobiles for the masses. It went into the construction of Nazi tanks and self-propelled guns on which several million adult Germans have done a great deal of riding, but not for pleasure and certainly not with much reluctance. Hitler told his people he would make them a nation of Volkswagen motorists and he ended by making them a nation of Volksgrenadiere and Volksurlauber, who by common report are neither strong nor joyous.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY, 1945

Because he cleansed the bogs and swamps of Erin, years away,
They made a saint of Patrick and for him they named a day.
Now who could cleanse the human heart of envy, hate and greed
And all that causes war on earth would be a saint, indeed.

Guns thunder round the world today,
and masses for the dead
At every altar of the land by priests are being said.
But people need a saint once more, it
grieving is to cease,
To free them from the clutch of war and lead them back to peace.

We used to keep St. Patrick's Day with feast and dance and song,
But how can gladness ever be while evil stays so strong?
The harp is stilled in Tara's halls and sorrow dwells with men;
"The minstrel boy to the war is gone," and mothers weep again!

"Hope you don't mind my reading over your shoulder—And do you mind translating as you go along?"

Pyle Boards Aircraft Carrier And Heads for Iwo and Tokyo Area

By ERNIE PYLE

In The Western Pacific.—(Delayed).—Now I've had my first experience at a Navy carrier operation. I'll try to tell you about it in a few thousand words, if you're interested.

This article will be about life aboard an airplane carrier. In this carrier was part of that first strike on the Tokyo area, and we helped in the Iwo Jima show.

Well start right at the beginning. I will say this much for the Navy—security. I'll try to tell you what it's like to go to sea aboard a warship, and how a big task force works when it goes out after the enemy.

First we boarded a plane and flew for a long time. We saw Iwo in the tiny coral island, white and glaring in the blue ocean. Then all distant ship trains were waved their green fronds from their toptknots.

The island-of-war loomed in a wide circle of bright green water. And that was bordered by a thin line of snow-white surf, where the rolling waves beat themselves to a froth over the submerged reef at the edge of the bright, warm sea. And on beyond that, everywhere as far as the eye could see, was the heavy dark blue of the deep Pacific ocean.

And out there on that dark blue water lay the United States fleet. Hundreds and hundreds of ships. The Navy says officially that it was the greatest concentration of fighting ships ever assembled in the history of the world. It was something to take your breath away.

Then I learned my biggest fleet. Both in our invasions of Sicily and of Normandy, we had some ships. But they were not predominately fighting ships. They were landing craft and troop-carrying vessels.

But now here were fighting ships—the world's mightiest battleships and cruisers, and carriers and uncountable destroyers, and all the swarm of escorts and tugs and oilers and repair ships that go with all convoys.

And this time, the only fleet. Others started from other anchorages scattered out over the Pacific, hundreds and thousands of miles from us. They started on a timetable designed so that they would all arrive in the upper Pacific at the same time.

If you had felt lonely and afraid of the immensity of the ocean upon which you were setting out, it disappeared when you came upon the sight of this mighty armada.

For two days we drove down upon the waters of Japan and Iwo Jima, we were nearly a thousand ships with us. Sometimes there were a million men!

Whenever happened to you, you would sure have a hell of a lot of company.

A small fast motorboat, its forward gun crew sitting on it like a prairie schooner, took me from the island to the carrier, to which I would be attached. It was a long way out, and we were half an hour bouncing over the waves before the spray.

Ships were so thick we had to weave in and out around them. The boat was speeded up with small boats running from ship to ship, and back and forth to the island. The traffic was hot and scary. Sometimes you stood up and took the spray full in the face.

No ship in wartime has its name painted on it. Instead, they go by numbers. Every ship in the Navy has both a name and a number. Its name is kept secret for the duration. All carriers look alike to the newspaper men. They just call them the number on the bow.

But I was to be put on a small carrier, rather than a big one. The reasons were many. For one thing, the big ones carry as immense and carry such a huge crew that it would be impossible to see the whole Central Station. I felt I could get the "feel" of a carrier more quickly, could become more intimately a part of it, more quickly, if I were to go on a smaller one.

Also, the smaller carriers have had very little credit and famous no glory, and I've always had a sort of yen for the little ships that have been neglected.

And again (although this of course had nothing to do with my choice, of course) there was also an old wive's superstition to the effect that the Japs always went for the biggest fish, and ignored the little ones.

Capital Closeups

By JACK McEVOY.

(Ottawa Correspondent)

Ottawa, March 17.—(CP)—In an uncomfortable "interim office" on the top floor of the Confederation building sits the Great Seal of Canada, set in a glass cabinet to which only two men have keys.

The four-pound block of steel which authenticates the proclamations of the land will be brought down from its high perch and given to Ridout Hall when the Governor-General, Field Marshal Viscount Alexander, has left office in June. He will ceremoniously hand the seal to the minister of state for safekeeping until the arrival of a successor.

Governor-General are theoretically responsible for all acts of the executive council, but in practice the responsibility of the Secretary of State and its official care for the seal is W. W. Chalmers, chief of the registration branch. It is in daily use, its face—both heavy wax pressed into great blocks of sealing wax to make the word of government official.

Beside the chair that seemed to be a prize to the floor, other precautions include a guard of Mounties at the door of the building. But if anybody did steal the seal they would have a problem.

"Attiring it so paper might make a man a millionaire in days for a few hours, but he would have a tough time explaining how he came by the seal," Mr. Chalmers said.

Contrary to a widely-held belief, the seal seldom is attached to the wax of the Queen, not bears, the robe and crown figure of the King seated on the throne.

Here's the Soldier: The capital takes pride in the new arrangements for welcoming home Canada's fighting men. Civilian receptions are a successful plan which removes the problem of the returned man and facilitates the meeting of the men and their loved ones.

Civic receptions are held at the station. Instead, the men are bussed to military camps. Meanwhile, their relatives have plenty of room in a modern reception centre where refreshments are drawn up in forms of a military band. They hear welcoming speeches from the Mayor Stan Lewis—who has met seven times in two months—and the city officials.

The station "break ranks" sees them in the arms of their families. They have doughnuts, coffee, cigarettes, cigars and soft drinks. Lately they form up to run through an obstacle course, a mental set-up designed by Brig. F. Logie Gwatkin, director-general of this military district. The process is so ordered that no man could be rushed through in a few minutes. It means the troops are immediately in the hands of their loved ones instead of having to hang around until their papers are filed and passes issued.

Fur Valet: To those who have wondered about the reports the Queen Mother is purchasing furs on a yard from Col. A. P. Dupuis, M.P., Montreal, comes a denial of order.

The citation may be an extract from a field dispatch amplified by reports from men who have seen a deed in battle, or the nomination may be a special dispatch attached to the recommendation. In either of the most cases, however, the first report is not considered final. It is written by men who have been witnesses—by privates or officers.

The report is checked on its merits, checked for accuracy and checked for duplication. There are many such reports and they are carefully considered before that in the case of one action in which the name of no man is noted only the 15 most outstanding might be chosen to be forwarded to headquarters.

The field commander—General Sir Bernard Montgomery in Canada—has the final say on recommendations. Finally, they reach the King. The recommendations without change are the ones which he is likely to have "signed" a. Distinguished Conduct Medal, for instance, is sent to a Victoria Cross. Usually the list is pretty good through the screening formations and moves at speed.

In the case of men originally recommended for awards but who have been killed in action, they are usually watched for future mention and, if worthy, recognized in New Year's and Birthday Honors lists that follow.

Huns Call Bridgehead 'Biggest Concentration On Narrow Front'

London, March 17 —(CP)—The German radio, which previously estimated that 100,000 troops had been poured into the Remagen bridgehead, declared today that seven divisions were being moved into the area, making it the largest single concentration of power on a narrow front ever seen in war.

"Even during the invasion in Normandy there was nothing in comparison to this," said a German war reporter Frau Westhoff. "The attack is being driven under maximum pressure and power. It explods from pent-up energy."

Further investigation revealed that the Germans know what they don't know at the time doesn't hurt you, and I don't know this at the time. So gally I climbed aboard my new home—surface, but admiringly. Here was my first taste of naval warfare in the Pacific.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Big Noise Coming

I am nearly-six and expecting my first baby, and full of questions, but my doctor lives twenty-six miles away from me and is so overworked I hate to detain him with my questions. (Mrs. H. V.)

Answer—Perhaps many of your questions are answered in my booklet "Caring for Maternity" and "The Brady Baby Book". Either send me a postal card asking for them and inclose stamped envelope bearing your address.

My father and I thank God that you sent us Dr. . . . 's name (physician stilled in injection treatment of hernia and hemorrhoids). All our family read your column and find it always informative and helpful. I can't agree with your idea that bathing once a week is enough — working in an office one hour's bath only nothing. I O. sometimes and one can't take a chance of having it. (A. S.)

Answer—I have never suggested that bathing once a week is enough. Make it as often as you have as you like — it has nothing to do with hernia. Many thanks for your letter from a pleased patient of your doctor's and I have had many letters of such letters — I blush. It reminds me that some years ago I treated a lady suffering from prolapse (now deceased) a quack because he, too, gave injections. I treated. At that time I was as sure as a lot of old fogies are today that hernia today that hernia and hemorrhoids could be successfully treated only by operation in hospital.

Paralysis Agitans

After 36 years of practice I am hesitating to say that I have cured cases of Parkinson's syndrome. I would be grateful for a copy of your booklet on paralysis agitans. You are doing a fine work and you have my best wishes. (. . . M.D.)

Answer—The pamphlet is on the way, Doctor. I know one method who operates successfully for cataract despite your Parkinson's syndrome — a nose and throat specialist who performs many nose and throat operations without his tremor. Don't let it get you down.

THE SHAMROCK

There is evidence, however, that the shamrock has been regarded as sacred in different parts of the world since remote antiquity.

According to Greek mythology, a goddess, three-leaved, immortal, sprang from the foam of creation, and such plants were fed the horses of the sun.

Triple-leaved plants, resembling the shamrock, as well as triple branches, triple fruit and triple figures have been found on Persian and Assyrian vessels and Egyptian temples and pyramids.

Pliny, the Roman, gives explanation as to what the original Irish shamrock may have been. There is no plant specifically called the shamrock. It is the name applied to what has been the lesser hop clover, the common white clover, the wood sorrel and the black medick. The leaves of all these plants are used in great extent as shamrock in Ireland.

"Shamrock" is derived from Gaelic "seamroc," diminutive of "seamar," meaning "three-leaf."

Attache Named Hesse Identified by Paper

Stockholm, March 17 —(AP)—The Swedish newspaper Svenska Dagbladet yesterday identified as Oberregierungsrat Hesse, 50, supposedly a former attache of the German embassy in London, the agent it reported had relayed Nazi peace proposals to British authorities.

An unofficial British statement issued here after publication of the Svenska Dagbladet story said it

German peace feeler had been conveyed to the British Legation in Stockholm, but that a third party did not identify him. The feeler, the statement said, was flatly rejected.

The newspaper Aftonbladingen, meanwhile, reported that there were rumors that German representatives had presented peace proposals to Madame Alexandra Kollontay, Soviet minister to Sweden, but whether she is supposed to deliver to Premier Stalin.

Both these statements Aftonbladingen, however, said that as far as they know there was no basis for the report beyond the fact that Madame Kollontay probably will go to Moscow soon.

Pantry Shower Given by Class

Rawdon—Mrs. Gerald Thompson (nee Dorothy Hinds), a recent bride, was honored Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dunham and daughters, when the members of Wellington Wide-a-Wake Sunday School Class held a Pantry Shower in her honor.

The rooms were nicely decorated in the class colors, green and yellow with white streamers and bells. There were twenty-nine in attendance and all enjoyed a jolly evening.

The program opened with "A Floral Wedding" contest. Miss Mina Dracup and Mrs. Frederick Beckett sang "Beautiful Obie".

Mrs. T. F. Townsend recited two selections.

The teacher, Mrs. Burton Morton, presided over a series of relay games all in keeping with marriage bliss.

The boys tried their hands at sewing on buttons this being the first test of a good husband.

Mrs. Morton wrote an appropriate verse for each gift and these were displayed on a table daintily decorated basket. An interesting contest was enjoyed when the prizes were read and the guests guessed the gift which each prize belonged.

Miss Dorothy Dunham read an appropriate address and the Misses Mabel Sharp and Doris Dunham presented the gifts on behalf of the class.

The bride of a few weeks opened the parcels and read a nice scrap of grandmaster, tea towels and a mouse trap were displayed.

Both Dorothy and Gerald spoke briefly saying how much they liked their gifts. They invited the class to pay them a visit at their new home in Belleville.

Partners were chosen in "Cinderella" style for supper and sandwiches, chocolate cake, ice cream and tea were served.

The white bride's cake was made in a heart shape and iced in white and had on it a miniature bride and groom.

The Experts Say

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 17 (CP)—Last year's shortage of onions made everyone realize how much one can do with a few onions, and now that they are in good supply, they can be used generously. Try them in soups, salads and sandwiches or as a vegetable.

Onions are almost a year-round food," Laura Pepper, chief of the Agriculture Department Consumer Section, told me. "The yellow cooking onions can be used at any time in a main dish too, any time except late in the summer when the new Spanish crop is available."

Miss Pepper added a tip about Spanish onions. "Be sure they are clean and firm, with dry skins. Signs of mouldiness in the neck may indicate decay at the heart," Store onions in a cool, dry place. Overcrates, net bags or woven baskets are good containers. If left in a moist atmosphere or piled closely together without free circulation of air, they are apt to sprout or rot.

Onions are important to persons on limited meat rations, because since their food value is not high, it's fact they don't rate very high nutritionally since they contain only small quantities of protein and vitamins, she said Grace Duggan, chief nutritionist of the Health Department of Canada's Pensions. "Because of this we class them as one of the protective foods which should daily in addition to potatoes."

Miss Pepper suggests recipes for spiced onions, delicious as part of a Lenten vegetable plate, and baked onions with cheese toast, a main course for lunch or supper.

SPICED ONIONS: Six servings in the soup. Peel and slice onions one tablespoon of butter, two tablespoons of brown sugar and 1½ spoon of cinnamon.

Follow out the tops of the onions and cook them in boiling salted water until tender. Then drain well, add the butter, brown sugar and cinnamon, and place a thin slice of onion on each. Garnish with a small sprig of parsley and serve at once.

BAKED ONIONS WITH CHEESE ON TOAST: Six servings call for six large onions, four slices of buttered toast, 1-3 cup grated cheese, one cup milk, one egg, ½ teaspoon of salt, 1-8 teaspoon of paprika and one tablespoon of melted shortening.

Peel the onions, slice crosswise and boil until tender. Drain well. Place the buttered toast in the bottom of a baking dish and place the onions on the toast and sprinkle with the grated cheese. Heat egg and milk and add salt and paprika. Pour this mixture over the onions and bake until firm in a moderate oven, 350 degrees fahrenheit, for about 40 minutes.

Because of hot dry weather during the hatching period last year, about 50 per cent of available canned peas are of poor standard quality....not quite so attractive as fancy or choice peas when served alone. However, says the Agriculture Department, they are quite acceptable splendidly with other foods and vegetables and are particularly useful in casseroles and creamed dishes.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Plans Treasons Tea

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1. I am planning to have a trousseau tea a few days before my wedding.

Since our apartment is very small, I thought it best to have the tea say from five to seven, inviting different groups of friends for different hours. Is this very frivol who is to be my only attendant remain for the entire time and help me receive, or should she perform at the tea, does she serve? Also the groom's parents are giving a dinner for the entire time? And is it proper to have the groom present at this time during the tea course?

2. Of course I should not like to wear my wedding gown at my trousseau tea, but I would like to show my gifts and my clothes. Is this proper? I have been to so many that I think this is not done, but I don't think it would be wrong to do so.

3. Is it proper to give my attendant her gift before the wedding? Since it is to be a surprise, I think perhaps she would like to wear it to the wedding as a gift, when she would it be given to her?

Betty

1. Since the groom's parents and your attendant are such particular friends, I suggest that you have the trousseau tea, you should give them the honor of receiving guests for the first hour of your party. I don't approve of the idea of the groom's mother to be for any length of time at the tea, however she should be free at all times to be, if not with you, to be with your self. Then you can conveniently introduce all your guests to her. And I think this would be the best plan for your attendant. To preside over the tea—serving. Suggest you invite some of your other friends, two for either every hour or half-hour of the tea.

2. Since you particularly wish to show your going-away clothes, I think you should.

3. It is customary for the bride-to-be to give her attendant a present before the wedding. And sometimes this is a wedding present is a particularly thoughtful gift!

Acknowledging A Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

A friend and I disagree, and we are hoping you will settle a point of question. This friend received a gift from a mutual friend, and one of the acquaintances of his did a favor for them). In acknowledging the gift, should he write his note to "Mrs. So-and-So" feeling that "Mrs. Jones" or "Mrs. Smith" seemed awkward, although in his letter to the acquaintance he refers to "them" for the gift. I contend that the gift, coming from both, should have been acknowledged to both and that "Mrs. Jones" and "Mrs." is not an awkward salutation. What is your opinion?

A. C.

Either form is proper, but the one you suggest is much more customary.

Who Speaks First?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Every morning I have to go to the office with my employer, a gentleman of high rank. Who should speak first? He always keeps his head bowed in thought therefore we can't say "good morning" simultaneously.

Faithful reader

You should speak to him first. Be patient, and wait for him to greet you, don't you mind if he is too preoccupied with his thinking to look up to greet you, don't mind if he seems to be annoyed with getting on with the business of the day. Just say cheerfully "Good morning". You job is to cooperate with his apparent whims, not to interfere with even a greeting.

A Prospective War-Nurse

Here's a letter from a reader girl, Alice Jane X., whose nurse's course is nearly completed and who writes of desire is to finish it and if possible go overseas and nurse our wounded much needed.

But she writes me that her mother opposes her plans. "My father died a few months ago", she tells me, "and mother is very much upset that I must give up nursing altogether and stay at home with her. As she is entirely well, and only fifty-two, do you think I am justified to do this?

"I've a good nurse, they tell me, and I think I ought to help out with the wounded soldiers coming in. Fiance is in the South Pacific and we don't think he'd marrying until the war is over. When that day does come for us to marry, I don't think my mother will object to me. But at the present she thinks that she needs me and that I must give up everything to be a companion to her. Do you think I am justified in my plans? Please tell me the right thing to do."

I'm afraid, this is just another place case of parental selfishness and I am advising Alice Jane to stick to her own plan, however difficult it may be to do so. She is a child no of fifty-two should not think of sacrificing her daughter's career to the sorrow of her husband's death easier to bear. The Red Cross, for instance, needs nurses very badly and I feel sorry for her daughter's accomplishments in some war area. And when the war is over, there are at least free to marry she will agree with me, I am sure, that she will make a far wiser wife and mother because of her helpful training now too soft and pleasant experience she Naggers Leak the Part.

Of all human pests deliver us from the naggers. There is no health in her, there is no living with her. She will tell you that she suffers, that she is a martyr, that every hand is raised against her, that she has troubles. Well, everybody has them of one kind or another. She will not get over. They fall into a ditch of continual grumbling and harvest the gumption to crawl out.

Getting down to cases, let us say that the nagger has appeared on a nice dinner for her old man, and she doesn't telephone. Sooner or later she will. She calls up his favorite hang-outs, can't find him. She frets here and there, has her hair in and there is heavy weather in the family circle. There are arguments and accusations. Next day she phones the office that he is in bed in a nursing home. She is a complete wreck. She has had all emotional disturbances do to one.

When same situation faces Mrs. Happy-nagger, she tells herself that Daddy has evidently met some of the boys and has forgotten to telephone, and what the heck Mrs. Happy-nagger, let's go out and get good dinner. While she eats it, she reads her evening paper at the same time. When Mr. W. b'oys, in she does not wheal him, but greets him with a cheerful remark which makes him feel like a dirty dog and apologize for the whole business. After all, husbands are usually pretty good fellows, and if they are not thoughtful. And all wives aren't angels.

Such a lot of things Mrs. W. has found out! That you cannot wheedle, threaten or bully a husband into you married, nor should you ever try. That when he comes home to home, it is no home at all, just a boarding house, a convenient for a celemate. That when a woman uses her feminine charms to gain endearment for nagging and upbraiding, she learns to hold her tongue. She has insurance against many difficulties—sleepless nights, worry, loss of good-looks.

There's many a lonely woman who would like to have them would like she herself ruined her married life by nagging. Many a woman with a scolding shrew never wins out in a domestic war. Her technique is all wrong.

Emotional control is worth gold and precious gems, especially to the woman who must adjust her life and marriage to the ideas, peculiarities, notions and habits of the man she married. In happy homes you find serene, tolerant, intelligent women, steering the domestic ship along a straight, safe course.

Frank McCool, Toronto Goalie, Wins Calder Trophy as N.H.L.'s Outstanding Rookie of Season

Oldest Competitor to Ever Win Award and Given Hard Battle by Kep Smith of Bruins

By FRASER MacDOUGALL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

There isn't a better day than the 17th of March for Irishmen to spread the good word that Frank McCool, Donald and Irish, from the old sod, has won the Calder Trophy as the National Hockey League's outstanding rookie of the season.

Frank himself will probably call it the luck of the Irish. But the writers in the six N.H.L. cities who participated in the annual selection for the Canadian Press his performance in goal for the Toronto Maple Leafs this season — he had four shutouts and was gunned on 151 times in 48 games — was solid enough to make him the choice.

At 36, McCool is the oldest rookie to win the award. His closest competition came from 20-year-old Ken Smith, promising left winger of the Boston Bruins whose home is in Regina. The 28 writers who participated in the selection gave McCool 1,434 of a possible 3,024 points, 341 more than Smith's 1,093. Third place went to Elmer (Moose) Vasko, in whom there's a bit of the Irish too. Limited to 24 games with Kirkland Lake and plays left wing with Detroit Red Wings, had 846 points.

Army Discharge.

McCool, a Canadian army discharge, has one distinction among rookies. He is the first sports writer to win the award. He is the sports staff of the Globe and Mail in native city of last year and since he came to Toronto has written several sports stories for the Toronto Star.

He is the 13th winner of the rookie award which got its start in the 1936-37 season. Carl Voss of the Detroit Red Wings was the first rookie of the year and first Appe of Toronto was the first rookie to get the Calder Trophy.

McCool's choice brings the trophy to a Toronto goalie for the third year in succession. Last year centre Gus Bodnar was the winner and the year before Gaye Stewart, now a lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Navy, took the honors. The Leafs have another former winner on hand at present in Bruce Richardson who was rookie of the year with the old New York Americans in 1934-35.

Hockey Start in Calgary.

After getting his hockey start in Calgary, McCool went to Gonzaga University—it's the alma mater of another well-known goaltender, Ring Crosby—at Spokane and played with the Gonzaga team on the United States Inland Coast. During his two years in the army he played for the Calgary Army Commandos. Stomach ulcers brought him his army discharge and also prevented him from catching a place with the New York Rangers a year ago. He came to the Toronto training camp last fall, caught a place immediately and by the end the Leafs won the first six scheduled games both management and fans had forgotten all about Paul Bibeault whom they had wanted to see back in goal again this year.

Smith, a native of Moose Jaw, played junior hockey with Regina Abbotts and Oshawa Generals before joining the navy last year. He was discharged last fall and lost no time making good with the Bruins, playing on their all-rookie "Typhoon Line" with Frank Mario and Bill Ohlund.

Lindsay also had a hand in helping the Generals win the Dominion junior hockey title season, joining them for play-off games after his own team—Toronto St. Michael's College—was "eliminated." His father, Bert Lindsay, was once a goaltending star in the Canadian loop.

Other rookies mentioned in the voting included Bill Durnan of the Montreal Canadiens; Butch Bouchard, Jim Peters and Jim Henry of the Chicago Black Hawks; Steve Wochy and Phil McKim of Detroit; Mario of Boston; Weiller (Alph) Ataras of New York Rangers.

Scott Kennedy of the Leafs also drew mention but as he played all last season with the Toronto team he was ineligible.

JIMMY BIVINS, MELIO BETTINA BATTLE TO DRAW

Decision Given on New Point-Scoring System Devised by Commission

New York, March 17 — (AP) — Lt. Eddie Eagan, new chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, probably will give renewed consideration to his previously suggested point-scoring system of judging fights following last night's 10-round bout between Jimmy Bivins of Cleveland and Melio Bettina at Madison Sq. Garden.

A crowd of 13,000 (gross gate $76,-260) saw Bivins, a Negro veteran regarded by many as the best uncrowned heavyweight champion since Bettina, pit to four. Judge Jack Gordon called it a draw, five and five, Referee Arthur Donovan voted for

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 621
By ALBERT GORDON
The Kibitzer

Some bridge players know all the rules of everything and use the rule for nothing. Just when they think they've got a sure rule up their sleeve for every hand, they run into a situation that calls for judgment instead.

Sometimes their judgment works okay, but sometimes they were right and should have played partner with enough extra to take up the slack and usually lost. Here's one spot that, to do it again.

Players like that do not reckon their luck. Nor do they count the times it's due to partner's lack of normal confidence. So, there is no convincing them of expert deviations that are wrong.

Start with an opening bid of one club when you have this hand:

♠ Q 7 4 3
♥ A
♦ 9 5
♣ A K Q 7 4 3

Suppose partner responds with a bid of one spade. You have a respectable club suit. You also have adequate support for partner's spade suit. Which should you bid first?

Bids follow the order of preference listed in "A-N": takeout, game, no-trump, takeout second. Therefore, your first choice is a takeout to your redoubtable club suit.

By this time you have learned that your partner has at least three tricks. With your own eight, you can see strike enough for game. So, your second bid is a one-jump raise to three clubs.

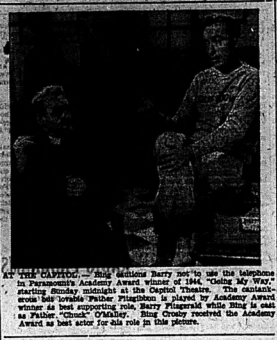
You could have avoided rule here and substituted judgment. That is, you could have supported partner's spade suit instead of first showing your redoubtable club suit.

That might have turned out as well as following rule. Then again it might have been more important to let your partner know your club suit was redoubtable.

Fact is, following rule permits partner to get a better picture of your hand. Rule works better in the great majority of cases.

Some codgers exert themselves to avoid the truth.

The film, adaptation of Daphne du Maurier's best-selling novel. In the able supporting cast are Basil Rathbone, Cecil Kellaway and Ralph Forbes.



AT THE CAPITOL — Bing Crosby stations Barry not to use the telephone in Paramount's Academy Award winner of 1944, "Going My Way," starting Sunday, midnight at the Capitol Theatre. The cantankerous old lovable Priest of Bing Crosby received the Academy Award as best actor for his role in this picture.

Slump in N.Y. Show Business Causes Much Wailing on Broadway

By MICHAEL O'HARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, March 17 —(CP)— Broadway is in a slump, and the horrendous wailing and gnashing of teeth-among producers and showbreakers is heard even above the usual mid-town hubbub.

Most others blame it primarily on the recently-invoked curfew ruling which sends most Manhattanites home at the unheard-of hour of midnight. When there's hardly any use going to the theatre at all, reason the analysts, if the patron has to go straight home without spending a couple of hours in a night-club or bar afterward.

Another reason is the brown-out which now dims exterior lighting displays, the wise boys call this a negative psychological factor" which is a grandiose way of explaining that all the theatre look alike and a playgoer is apt to get into the wrong one if the signs aren't legible at night.

Most others shrewdly subscribed to the theory that figuring out income tax returns—they were due Thursday—may have kept a lot of revellers home lately. Another reason given for a let-down in entertainment trade is the current Lenten season.

The new shows bowing onto Broadway have a rough time trying to lift the gloom.

Walter Hampden's appearance in "And Be My Love" was both misguided and short-lived. The actor-producer closed in five performances. The farce had a fast and furious cast, with Ilka Chase, movie actor Louis Jean Heydt and Greta Meehein, who fled the Berlin stage a few years back, did some admirable clowning. But public and critics, for the most part agreed that one act still doesn't make a full-length play.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, March 17 (CP) — The losing streaks that go with sport always seem to prompt rumors of consequent managerial retirement; and English football is no exception.

Take Notts County of the League North. They lost a dozen successive matches and the whispering forced Mal. Frank Buckley her best-paid team manager in professional football, to deny he had resigned.

"Things are certainly not going well from a playing point of view," said Buckley, whose team holds the cellar position in the 88-club league. "But I'm not worried. After all, I'm not an Aladdin. I can't rub a lamp and produce star footballers."

Perhaps the major has no magic lamp but his pre-war ability to discover stars and his unorthodox training methods have labelled him something of an unpredictable genius. Just a year ago he created wartime soccer's biggest sensation by leaving the top-notch Wolverhampton Wanderers for the lowly Notts County club at a salary said to be around $18,000 a year.

Certainly the County has been doing no better since, but the major is a non-worrying philosopher.

"Nothing in football disheartens me," he said. "And nothing surprises me.

"I haven't been here long enough to get a team together and I still have a lot of hard spade-work to put in. It's like going to a derelict farm. I've only reached the stage of trimming the hedges."

Buckley, 52, was released from a contract which still had three years to run when he left the Wolves. All Wolverhampton he introduced giant therapy treatment and had a quadrant chiropodist in the ground each week to attend to the feet of players. He found and sold stars to the extent of nearly $340,000, among them Wolverhamton Bryn Jones who went to Arsenal for $61,000.

Sport in general and football in particular has taken a leap in France since the liberation. Many international games have been extended to professional English teams to play there and there's a possibility Glasgow sea will be the first British club to visit the continent since the outbreak of war.

Chelsea, league soccer club, has been invited to meet the French professionals, Red Star Olympic, at the Paris Stadium May 1. Chelsea will accept if government consent is obtained. The match would be part of the celebrations planned by France for Labor Day, May 1.

Like other clubs, Chelsea made many overseas tours before the war, including a jaunt through South America.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

The revision of the Spring training schedule of major baseball clubs to effect further reduction in the use of U.S. transportation facilities in the north seems to have resulted in elimination of sixty per cent of the exhibition games according to an Associated Press checkup at New York last night. The Philadelphia Phillies have cut their pre-season list from 34 to four games. It was found, and other big league clubs have lopped off from five to ten games.

Least affected, under the new plan, to reduce the spring training mileage, are the two St. Louis Clubs which had drawn up a series of practice contests within their home city.

Cpl. Arthur Danahar of the Imperial Army (all that declared Sgt. Charles Pyle, negro boxer of New Waterford, N.S., for the Scotland and England welterweight championship of the British Army, Navy and Air Forces at a card which was staged at Aldershot, England.

Boston Olympics won their seventh straight hockey game in the U.S. Eastern Hockey League last night when they trimmed back Philadelphia Falcons 7-3 at the Boston Arena. Russ Kopak scored three for the winners.

Word was received from Italy yesterday of the death in action while serving with a U.S. Army unit of Sgt. Torger D. Tokle, one of the greatest skiers of all time. A native of Norway, Tokle went to the United States in 1939 and had established himself among the leading skiers of the country.

Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va., shot a seven-under par 65 to set the pace in the first round yesterday of the $10,000 open golf Burney Championship, N.C., but he was only one point better than Harold Mc-Spaden of Wilkes Barre Byrd of Detroit carded a 67 for third place.

Manager Charlie Offtum of St. Louis Cardinals last night announced at the Club's Training Camp, French Lick, Ind., he did not have enough players to field two full teams as yet but expressed optimism over 1945 chances. "Ivy wartime standards."

The Hamilton, Ont., big four softball league yesterday accepted the entry of a Guelph nine for the coming season but it was said a team from Brantford had failed to materialize. The application marked the return of the Royal City to Ontario Senior "B" softball.

CANADA'S AIRWOMEN

There now are more than 14,000 women in the Royal Canadian Air Force, compared with 15,000 in the army and 8,000 in the navy.

Armored Division Enters Salvaro

Rome, March 17 —(AP)— Troops of the U.S. 1st Armored Division yesterday broke into the village of Salvaro near the Bologna-Pistoia highway behind the German-held road-creating town of Vergato, but later were forced to withdraw, Allied Headquarters announced today.

The Germans have clung stubbornly to Vergato for months, it controls the southwest approaches to Bologna. Allied capture of Salvaro would virtually isolate the Vergato garrison.

The Americans entered the town after driving from Serra, captured the day before. For a time they controlled a number of buildings in the town. They withdrew after suffering a number of casualties.

AWARDED DAMAGES

Toronto, March 17—(CP)—James H. Stephens, of Negro descendent, yesterday was awarded $300 by a civil sudge court jury in a suit of damages he had brought against three Toronto policemen whom, he charged, falsely arrested him and assaulted him knocking out four teeth and inflicting severe leg injuries. Mr. Justice Lebel expressed the view the jury had been lenient in the matter of damages.

THE SECRET OF THE MARSHBANKS

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

CHAPTER 30

"Why does it spoil everything?" he asked gravely, still holding her tightly with both hands behind her shoulders. "Look at me, Cherry. This doesn't spoil anything. Do you mean that you don't want to come to Bausatito now?"

She smiled up at him through tears.

"Oh, Kelly, but it makes it all so horrid!" she said, even though hope was dawning in her voice.

"Cherry, you said you knew I'd cared—or that at one time some months ago, I thought. I was crazy about Fran. I never asked her to come to Bausatito and run her; I never thought of her doing any such thing. I think I always knew that she wasn't in earnest, and I hadn't seen you very often when I knew that I wasn't. What's the trouble?"

"Didn't she tell you about the letters?"

"Of course she did. She took me up to her room to tell me. She stopped at the library and told Higgins—the assistant D. A.—he's here this evening—that I was arrived. I don't know why. Perhaps you can tell me why."

"You—you comfort me by just s-s-saying anything!" Cherry said, laughing with a hiccup. She seated herself in a big fireside chair, and Kelly came to sit on the broad arm, holding tight to her hand.

"Let's have it. What about the letters?"

She had them, Kelly. And a day or so ago the police found them."

"So what?"

"So what?" she echoed dazedly. "Can't they see them, Kelly? Can't they make it seem that perhaps if you loved her—"

"Why," Kelly said, "what on earth do you suppose was in those letters, dear? Plans for murdering Jud Marshbanks?"

"You comfort me," Cherry whispered, "you—you do! What do you don't know how you rest me, Kelly!"

He twisted about a little so that he could get an arm around her. "What was in them?" she asked faintly.

"Well, I suppose the usual thing. That I was—oh lord—perhaps that I was having my new friendship for one of the most fascinating women I'd ever known," Kelly said hair aimed and half impatiently. "And here was a book that I knew she would like, and thanks for a wonderful talk yesterday afternoon, and did she know what an inspiration a woman like herself—that sort of stuff. The kind of thing she knew I'd been missing, met me that I would be writing her lovely notes and the kind of thing I knew the moment I met her she'd like. Shoe-off stuff, about Dante and Beatrice, and Love in Diana's Lap."

"There must have been more than that because she was so frightened."

"I'll be damned if I know what scared her," he said, in a genuinely puzzled tone. "She was beside herself, 'Kelly,' she said,'it isn't for my sake that you're here—you'll be ruined.' And she wanted me to take her back. 'Take me away and marry me!' she said over and over again.

"And what did you say?" Cherry asked, pulling.

"And I said that I loved you."

Her eyes filled again. Cherry could not speak.

"Then she said that I didn't know what might happen," the man pursued, still in the tone of one completely bewildered, "and I asked her what on earth she was afraid of. She said, 'You don't know, you don't know how they sound! You're not seen them for months.' It was the darndest thing I ever knew! But as far as the police and the press exploiting them and lasting me in jail, why, it's bad stuff."

"She didn't really ask you to marry her?"

"Indeed she did, but she wasn't in earnest as far as caring for me goes. That was perfectly obvious. But what was she after? She said that that man downstairs would beat me as I went out. If she didn't come down too; she went with me to the front door and said, 'This the good-bye, Kelly,' with Higgins standing right in the library door. 'I've not kissed Fran for months; I never kissed her at all except once by train.'

"And you don't really think there's anything dangerous in these letters?" Cherry asked on a long sigh.

"I know there isn't. What gets me is that she thinks there is."

"And now that you could marry her," Cherry mused, "you don't want her?"

"Cherry, it's as if it never had been. She was always playing. I think, and the moment I got onto that it seemed to cool me off."

"Remember the time that I thought she had been to Bausatito and the judge thought so, and she had given him to understand that I had been with her?"

"The night he was murdered, Cherry."

"Oh, so it was, so it was!" She was silent a moment. "It all happened at once, didn't it?" she said reflectively; "Amy wanting to marry Gogo, I telling him what Emma had told me, and Fran lying—for it was a lie, Kelly, a deliberate lie about where she had been."

"I was thinking of that. Where had she been?"

"And I was thinking of that too. Is there somebody else?"

That certainly had occurred to the police. You can bet they're asking questions of her crowd in Burlingame. It's clearing, Cherry. Get on your coat and rubbers and tie something over your head. We'll go for a walk."

"If I can keep my feet on the ground!" she said, adding in a longing tone, "Oh, Kelly, it'll be so good to get out of this house some day and into the free, open air and to forget everything that's gone before!"

Then't you think sometimes of the fact that if things had gone just a little differently you might be rich woman, Marchioness?" he asked, as they walked along the wet sidewalks, heading against the wind.

"No; I never thought of it, really. I wouldn't want it. I'll feel so rich as your wife, Kelly," Cherry said, "that it would just be a bother to me. What could I do with it? Furs, jewels—I don't know what women are like who buy pearls! To be rich would be fun," she had stepped on a windy street corner, and now she gestured toward the northwest over fields waves when the far hills were beaten under rain.

"Just to be over there, alone with you," she continued; "there's no money in the world that could tempt me to give up a minute of it!"

"It's going to be a great adventure," Kelly said, his eyes all for her.

"It's going to be heaven! I can't believe it yet."

They paced along together, facing the wind.

"And forgotten, what with Amy and everything," Cherry said suddenly. "Yesterday when I was in Fran's room, and she was showing me the overnight case that the police had broken open when they got your letters, she went into the bathroom to take a shower and while she was there the wind blew in through her closet—and I went in to close the window—and one of her creasing gowns blew against my hand,'and Kelly—she wiped a pistol barrel on it! No mistake. Grease and gunpowder, and it was all in her clothes!"

"What are you talking about, Cherry?" he asked, startled. "Fran had wiped the barrel of a revolver on one of her dresses?"

"Yes, and I'm sure that she wears. And that was why she was so upset when she saw you the night—who will be charged with murder, Kelly? Not Fran, not to our doors. The minute I saw it I remembered it. Although it's not going to help Fran."

"Forgotten, what?"

"Forgotten that negligee was what she had on."

"And someone would have found her if she'd phoned me, or—"

"Not necessarily. We were all drinking champagne, and I'm sure, on—impressively, laying a gloved hand on his shoulder, "that is the strange thing. Fran did have that negligee on at first, but when the police and the doctor and all the others got there she didn't. She had on only her nightgown, for she was shivering with cold, and one of the maids went and got her an overcoat from the hall closet—"

"Hal!" Kelly said, his brow knitted, "Sure of that?"

"I'm absolutely sure. The first thing I saw when I opened my door was that the halls were lighted, and Mary and Minty and Helene, the maids, were coming down from the upper floor, and Fran halfway down the stairs and it was nothing, that we gustan't get excited and stupid about, but she was shivering with cold, and one of the maids went and got her an overcoat from the hall closet—"

"Then it's clear!" Kelly said, his face alight. "It's clear! It's clear! It's clear!" he repeated, in a shout, as he caught Cherry in his arms and kissed her. "Cherry, it's clear! It's clear! It's clear!"

"Clear of what?" she asked, laughing and crying.

"Clear of everything! Cherry, you're not going to be Mrs. Marshbanks! You're not going to be Mrs. Anybody! You're going to be Mrs. Kelly, and we're going to be married tomorrow!"

"Tomorrow!" she echoed, in a daze.

"Not necessarily. We were all drinking champagne, and I'm sure, on—impressively, laying a gloved hand on his shoulder, "that is the strange thing. Fran did have that negligee on at first, but when the police and the doctor and all the others got there she didn't. She had on only her nightgown, for

U.S. Tankmen Irked by Washington Praises of American Equipment

The following dispatch, on United tank is by a correspondent who just arrived in Germany from the U. S. 9th Army front.

By WES GALLAGHER
(AP War Correspondent)

London, March 17 —(AP)— The reaction of American tank soldiers who have had to do the fighting is that they have tanks on the battle line and less talk about them in Washington, (Rerunners rewrote censored item this paragraph.)

(Gallagher's dispatch was written in response to information that there had been much discussion in Washington about the new General Pershing tank, equipped with guns of 90-mm. calibre, nearly four inches.

(Navy Secretary Stimson said last week the General Pershing "is an answer to the German Royal Tiger in the sense that it is an improvement in line with the American concept of offensive warfare.")

(Gallagher apparently was not permitted to say whether the Pershing has been in action in Europe.)

Better Wet-Weather Machine

A new wide tread and increased flotation has made the General Pershing a better wet-weather tank than the General Sherman, which forms the main dependence of United States armored forces. (Jeff words deleted before and after this paragraph.)

(The United States Sherman and British Churchill tanks are in use in Canada's armored forces. The proportions of each type employed vary according to the type of action.)

"Give us enough gas to knock out the Tiger and we can carry a second on trucks," is the tank man's answer.

Most tank officers alike who have seen battle action day after day say tonight in dispatches by two years say they are fed up with the distortion coming out of Washington praising American equipment.

Among the most pungent of a dispatch about a month ago which quoted the United States Chief of Ordnance as saying the Germans lost two tanks for every one the Americans lost and that American equipment was superior in every department. It was carried by Stars and Stripes, the army newspaper.

One American colonel who has fought across Western Europe summed up the attitude of the tank men when he said:

"I would like to have him in the next tank during one of our attacks on the Siegfried. He would damn soon change his tune."

May Not Get Good Test.

By ROBERT RUNSON
(AP War Correspondent)

With the U. S. 9th Army, Germany —(AP)— The General Pershing tank may be superior on paper to the German Royal Tigers, but the consensus among American tank men on this front seems to be that the war probably will be over before they get a chance to prove it.

A statement from Washington that the new tank has gone into mass production brought little consolation to the men who have been getting belted around by German tanks for two or three years.

"We fought them and licked them with inferior tanks all the way up," a high-ranking officer said in a splendid division said yesterday, "and it looks as if we'll still be fighting with inferior tanks when the war ends."

COMMUNICATIONS RESTORED

Stockholm, March 17 —(AP)— Telephone and telegraphic communications between Stockholm and Berlin, cut at 2 p.m. Thursday, was restored Friday by a radio cable from Hamburg. The main line in Germany apparently had been badly damaged in an air raid.

Expect Mr. King Will Confer With Other Party Leaders

Ottawa, March 17—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King is expected to confer with the Progressive Conservative House Leader, Mr. J. Coldwell, C. C. F. National Leader, and John Blackmore, Social Credit House Leader, to decide on procedure before the Budget is introduced Monday. It is unlikely Monday's throne speech will forecast any legislation before the Budget speech, participation bill and the estimates. Accordingly, opposition circles expect the debate on the address in reply to the Throne Speech will be short, possibly concluding Tuesday.

It is reported the government plans to bring about a debate on the San Francisco Security Conference by moving a motion that would state the government's policy of having representatives from the opposition and the senate in the Canadian delegation.

The government will propose that the Commons vote five-twelfths of the total sum voted last year, a sum equal portion of the civil estimates, it is learned. This would provide the government with funds to carry on for five months—to the end of August—the assumption being that a general election will be held in the meantime. No budget will be brought down at the session.

Progressive Conservative circles today expressed the view the session would last almost until April 17, when the life of parliament ends. They said the government were doubtful the business could be concluded in time.

Home from a German prison camp rests these Canadian soldiers. As they walk down the gangplank of this "happy ship" each one may find the sergeant, whose name was not disclosed, was put in the local jail and charged with impersonating an officer, intimidating civilians, wearing a uniform without authority, desertion and fraternizing with Germans.

His blond friend, whom he appointed chief of his welfare and Morale department, was found she was a nurse, went back to her parents.

U.S. Sergeant Had Real Week As Impostor

Munchen Gladbach, Germany, March 17 —(AP)— Military occupation was no trouble at all for one 23-year-old sergeant of the U.S. 9th army. He simply went A.W.L. and took over the government in three adjoining towns as well as the best-looking blond he could find.

He ruled firmly, albeit generously, for one wonderful week. Then rather military government authorities caught up with him after hearing of several liberties granted to the German civilian population.

England Under Fire, Of Hun V-Bomb

(London Evening Standard Depicts Tragedy, Death, Courage, and Heroism in Nazi Vengeance Weapon Strikes in London)

This is a close-up report on life and death in an English street, written during Germany's "regalia" two weeks ago, by the London Standard, Britain. It sets out to tell you what happens when very ordinary men, women and children come face to face with the death and ghoulish calamity of a major V-bomb incident.

A few seconds before the bomb came the ordinary, normal, typical. What were the people doing? Outside the fishmonger's there was a line. In a tobacco kiosk on the corner Malcolm Wright was standing, chatting with a few customers. Percy Garrod, store manager, was in his office checking up accounts. Wally Bynon, war jobber, was delivering at his heavy rescue station. The chain store was opening a special sale of sausages and kettles. Traffic rumbled along the street. Where traffic lights flashed red and the automobiles ceased, green lights flashed yellow.

Then at second the V-bomb crashed.

Within second the street these people had known for a lifetime became unrecognizable. Blood lay in the road and in bases and buried in the store debris. Assistant Percy Garrod's store the flour collapsed and part of the building fell on counter, buying vegetables Garrod, a civilian and a shopkeeper from the start few hours digging in the store's ruins for injured housewives and children.

Beatrice Warren, her face, hands and body cut by splinters of flying glass, emptied the till, checked the takings, put them in the safe, then left the store manager and said: "I thought I'd better go home. What shall I do now?" Then she swayed, weak from loss of blood. Garrod took her arm and she joined the long line of people en route for the hospital.

Before the dust settled the heavy rescue squad, Wally Bynon was on the site with his party. The first casualty they saw, lying on a silent heap of smoking rubble. Most of the customers were buried. The assistants, too. Of the latter, eight were a tangled unrecognizable ruin. The fierce gases outside the fishmonger's had gone most of the people in it to their deaths. Only the store manager and said: "I thought I'd better go home. What shall I do now?" Then she swayed, weak from loss of blood. Garrod took her arm and she joined the long line of people en route for the hospital.

went into the chain store to buy her child crackers. She had arranged to meet her husband outside the store and his friend been seen since. Her husband could not remember what she was wearing. He was given a dead woman's pair of shoes for identification. He was joined to take to the local shoe store to see if they could identify them for him.

Here was tragedy, death, courage, horror. But this is not the real story of a street of England; it is something more than all these. You will see it if you walk down that street today. Where the bomb fell there is a deep crater and the store basement. The tawdry remnants of the merchandise are carefully piled up and checked —shoes, Christmas cards, toys, soap, cereals, dried fruit and sausages. Traffic flows again and the streets are full of shoppers. Over the fish shop another line has formed. The special offer of herrings again. Everything is normal. Wally Bynon is back at the rescue station—his job well done. Percy Garrod is looking for new premises further down the street. Beatrice Warren is in hospital, but soon will be back at work in another store.

This is England under fire.

80,000 GERMANS RETREAT FROM SAARLAND

New Russian Drive in Hungary, Nazis Report

Hun Driving Power In West Hungary In Utter Collapse

Struggle Mounts as Reds Battle for Oder Estuary

London, March 19 (CP) — The German high command said today a new Russian offensive in Hungary has advanced to the north of Mezo Kovesd and Eger, 75 miles and 96 miles from Vienna.

In another bulletin, the Germans said the 1st Ukrainian army of Marshal Ivan Koner has plunged forward for gains of 15 miles or more, reaching the area of Neusalz, less than three miles from the border of Czechoslovakia, and attacking on both sides of Guben, 18 miles northwest of Neustadt, Reustadt is 97 miles southeast of besieged Breslau.

In the north Marshal Gregory Zhukov wheeled Russian divisions westward from the operations around Landsberg on the Baltic to add impetus to the battle for Stettin and the mouth of the Oder.

Bolster Elsaber's Forces.

Moscow, March 19 (AP)—Russian divisions, having conquered the Baltic port of Danzig, Gdynia, wheeled westward today along the Pomeranian coast to bolster the seaside flank of Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's 1st White Russian army troops fighting for control of the mouth of the Oder.

Kilburg, disturbed by a 13-day siege, fell yesterday, a Russian communique announced, as a savage struggle continued for the eastern suburbs of Stettin and for positions in the Oder estuary.

Marshal Zhukov's infantry and artillery today were pressing home new attacks in this flank drive, a preliminary to the grand assault on Berlin.

Meanwhile, German forces trapped southwest of Koenigsberg in East Prussia reeled back into final defensive positions on the outskirts of Brunsdorf and Heiligenbeil, the cities' crack troops punched ahead in southern Slovakia in the low Tatra mountains to within 12 miles of Zvolen.

It appeared that German offensive power in western Hungary had collapsed completely before the Russian counter 800 tanks and 20,000 men. The Russians again seized the initiative north of Lake Balaton.

Stepping Up 'Kessels'

Reduction of the German garrison at Koblenz and its two bridgeheads across the Rhine into strategic mopping up the "Kessels," a German newsmen's syndicate declared, is stepping up the process of liquidating pockets of troops.

Already the Allied general "Kessels" still remain, including Danzig and Gdynia on the south and west shores of the Danzig bay, and the coastal towns of Brunsberg and Heiligbeil, farther to the east.

Besides these there is Koenigsberg, East Prussian capital, which is still holding out against a swiftly-converging arm of Russian armies. The Red Army, which already narrowed the coastal strip held by the enemy to 60 miles, is pressing extending more than nine miles from the sea.

Pressure Mounts

Marshal Stalin announced the fall of Kolberg, Pomeranian seaport with a pre-war population of 33,170, in an order of the day. Kolberg is 62 miles northeast of Stettin.

In smashing the last resistance of the naval base, Russian artillery shelled the port from the west and sent several German vessels trying to enter the harbor to evacuate troops, it was officially announced. The fighting later shifted to the eastern part of the city, where the Russians made a decisive attack.

Russian frontline correspondents are not giving any time-table for the enemy's benefit, but they make it fairly clear that an all-out drive from the Oder toward the Elbe is due to begin in early summer, "the gathering storm" is their favorite description.

Weather Forecast

27th Straight Night Raid on Berlin Leaves Capital Smoking After Record Day Attack

London, March 19—(CP)—R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. heavy bombers ranged over German communications centres behind the western front last night while the Americans delivered their 27th straight night raid on Berlin, still smoking from a record-breaking daylight assault by 1,300 United States bombers Sunday.

Night targets of the British heavies were Witten, 8 miles east of Duisburg in the heart of the Ruhr Valley, and Hanau, about six miles east of Frankfurt-on-the-Main. Canadian heavy bombers joined the Witten attack.

Four R.C.A.F. bombers are missing.

Both blows apparently were carried out in great strength. The Berlin and Hanau attacks on Germany were being continued in daylight hours today.

2,000 Tons Dropped

U. S. bases, from which hit Berlin Sunday rained 2,000 tons of bombs on the battered capital at the cratering rate of one ton every 3½ seconds, it was the 24th successive daylight assault on Berlin.

Remagen Bridge Falls Carrying Many to Death

By HOWARD COWAN
With the 9th American Armies Across the Rhine, March 19 — (AP) — The central span of the 1,300-foot Ludendorff Bridge at Remagen collapsed Saturday, carrying many engineers to death in the Rhine, but it was announced officially tonight that the gap can be repaired and the bridge soon will be in operation again.

The collapse, launched on a weakened steel supporting girder that had been damaged by a German demolition charge before the Americans seized the bridge March 7th, proved to be less of a catastrophe than had first been indicated.

Many of the 200 engineers who were working on the bridge and were plunged into the river when the span gave way were rescued, it was announced. There was no official tally of the dead and injured.

Passing of Money Bills and Discussion of Canference Chief Business

Ottawa, March 19 — (CP)—Members of the Commons and the Senate gathered today for the opening of the eighth session of the present 19th Parliament, a four-week sitting at which the chief business will be the passing of interim money bills and discussion of the proposed World Security organization.

With an election coming before another session is held, many of the Commons Members will be making their last appearance. A number plan to retire and not contest the next general election. All of the members of the Commons have to face the test of public opinion and all of those who offer themselves as candidates experience proves that a fair proportion will meet defeat. Will Lose No Time.

At this session the members will lose no time in getting down to work. With completion of the reading or the Speech from the Throne in the Senate shortly after 3 p. m. E.D.T., the Commons members will return to their Chamber and tackle preliminaries.

Garfield Case, newly-elected Progressive Conservative Member for Grey North, will be introduced and it is expected that the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne will be moved and seconded.

These speeches may take most of the afternoon. However the individual estimates are expected to be brought down before the adjournment hour, leaving the way clear Tuesday for Prime Minister Mackenzie King to bring in his resolution regarding Canada's delegation to the San Francisco Security Conference.

A War Parliament.

The Parliament now meeting is wind up its career as a war parliament. It was elected under the shadow of war more than five years ago, March 26, 1940. In the ranks of many members is the expectation that, the new parliament, under whatever conditions it may be elected, will be a peacetime parliament and that, at least early in its life, the war will be brought to a close.

BRITISH TROOPS CLOSE THE RING ABOUT MANDALAY

Japanese Ordered to Die "a Glorious Death" as There is No Hope of Relief

By MICHAEL McDONAGH
(Reuter's Staff Correspondent)

Advanced Allied Headquarters, Burma, March 19 (Reuters) — Troops of the British 14th Army have closed the ring around Mandalay, capital of the ancient Burmese kingdom, clearing FortAva on the north bank of the Irrawaddy and on one side of the city and driving to the north end of the Ava bridge on the other.

The gap in the ring is formed by the river itself. Japanese troops cut off inside the ring were ordered "to die a glorious death as there is no hope of relief." They were still fighting desperately today to retain their hold on motorable roads leading from the city.

Outside the ring drawn round the city other troops of the 14th Army, across the escape roads to the south, beat back desperate Japanese counter-attacks. They slay their heavy equipment, it was announced today.

Attacks Repulsed.

Calcutta, March 19. (CP) Increasing enemy counter-attacks indicated today that trapped Japanese forces in Central Burma may be making a break-through effort in the vicinity of Meiktila, 75 miles south of Mandalay.

Reports from the Allied positions in the Meiktila area have been received which indicate heavy Japanese pressure. The enemy has no armor to match the British concentration of General Sherman tanks, which are taking a heavy toll.

"The Allies now hold Mayzo, Hairpaw and Kyaukpadaung, three miles from the north downs on the Mandalay-Lashio road, and in the area around Kyaukpadaung are astride the Japanese communication lines southeast of Mandalay. The fall of Mandalay appears imminent.

TWO AIRMEN KILLED

Kentville, N.S., March 19 (CP)—Two airmen, members of Dunn, Edmondson, were killed Friday night when their plane, a Canso, crashed and crashed during training operations from the base, it was announced by R.C.A.F. base, it was announced last night.

CARRIER PLANES AND B29S STRIKE HARD AT JAPAN

Tons of Incendiaries And High Explosives Dropped on Negoya And Kyushu

Guam, March 19—(AP)— Hundreds of carrier planes and probably 250 superforts—flying more than 3,000 combat sorties—dropped more than 2,000 tons of incendiaries and high explosives on Japan Sunday and Monday.

The giant B29s, paying a predawn return visit to Nagoya to finish up the destruction started a week ago, loosed 500 tons more of incendiaries on Japan's sixth largest city and principal aircraft manufacturing centre.

White-hot pin-points of fire dotted presidents' estimate of Nagoya were "spreading and merging into a solid mass of flame that pretty well covered the whole target area," pilots said. Several reported great explosions.

Admiral Nimitz reported in a communique that a large carrier task force bombed Kyushu, southern most of the enemy's home islands Sunday. He said air bases and factities were the targets.

Third Challenge in Month.

The carriers launching the fleet to remain overnight within 200 or 250 miles of the Japanese coast, constituted the third challenge in five weeks to the imperial fleet to come out for battle.

This was the first carrier attack of the war on Kyushu, site of the huge Yawata steel works and other vital plants, and the first since the Japanese homeland in from more than a month.

Carrier planes probably equalled or exceeded the B29s' 2,500-ton bombing. They and Kyushu in wave after wave for eight hours Sunday and a second for the attack for at least 5½ hours today.

Without confirmation, Tokyo broadcast that the Japanese Kamikaze (Suicide) special attack squadrons had flown their first mission —one battleship, one carrier, one cruiser and one tanker were damaged—and damaged nine others. The enemy said seven planes were lost in the 19 attack sorties; two unidentified.

Two Jima Captured

Capture of two Jima, 750 miles southeast of Tokyo, was contributed to the success of incendiary raids, Admiral Nimitz said. The island's value was production of ships, planes, arms, ammunition, machinery and other war materials. The Allies have landed in two's airfields because which Superfort and fighter planes developed mechanical trouble.

Tokyo said 1,000 to 1,200 337-ton bombing of Japanese positions around Iwojima, supported by battleships and cruisers. Yamashita "in Luzon, highlighted a series of heavy aerial blows from Formosa to Dutch Guinea.

Allies' Most Important Decision Was To Wage War on All Fronts at Once

By JOHN KIMCHE
(Reuter's Staff Writer)

London, March 19 (Reuters) — Probably the most important single decision taken by the Allies in this war was the one which led to the simultaneous prosecution of two major wars in Europe and the Pacific.

Whether this decision ultimately can be justified by history cannot yet be determined. What seems certain is that the divided effort ordered by the Pacific war contributed greatly to the Allies' inability to defeat Germany before last autumn.

The full measure of this diversion of effort only now is becoming public. "The successful conclusion of the battle for Two Jima emphasizes this diversion.

This battle, conducted action required more shipping than the Allies employed in landing in North Africa in 1942 and Sicily in 1943, and the number of Axis soldiers ultimately had to be overcome.

The monthly maintenance requirements of the troops on the twelve islands and divisions on Lunor Island in the Philippines equals the entire British expeditionary force in about forty United States divisions in the Pacific theatre.

Progress has been impressive when measured against the general view taken earlier in the war of the attack on Japan. But space is not the defence covering the Japanese homeland.

The Japanese army now is made up of 70 front line divisions with a divisions in reserve. That is considerably more than the German army had to the entire Western front. Manpower is no problem to the Japanese.

Moreover Japan's industrial capacity been materially affected so far by the Allied attacks on sea planes, tanks and weapons than are lost in battle. Her stocks of aviation gasoline are estimated to last her army for years.

This over-all picture of the situation on the Pacific front qualifies somewhat the undue optimism based on the successes of the United States air on the Japanese mainland during the last nine months. The great task of defeating Japan's Japanese power still remains.

It is in this connection that the knowledge in assuming a new strategic role.

Speaking on Monday's broadcast a significant new development in the war against Japan. The view of Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters, it was said here, is that the conquest of Mandalay will mean virtual reconquest of Burma. The fall of Mandalay delayed the road to Rangoon will not open the whole Japanese position in Burma will be jeopardized.

U.S. 3rd, 7th Army Groups Closing Trap on Enemy

Kaiserslautern and Mainz Threatened by Advances

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, March 19 —(AP)— An estimated 80,000 Germans are in the Rhine today in desperate daylight retreat under perfect strafing weather which found the northern half of the Bavarian Palatinate into a slaughter ground and the rich Saarland into a death trap.

Swift tank and infantry columns of the United States 3rd and 7th armies surged within 15 miles of each other between Wendel and the Zwei-Brucken areas' of the Saarland and within 42 miles of a junction farther west in the Palatinate.

Tanks, shot within 14 miles of Mainz on the bend of the Rhine.

This was the last debacle west of the Rhine an dthe German 1st and 7th armies were losing terrific numbers of men and machines in their route.

Threaten Rhine Valley Cities.

"Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton's 3rd army threatened the great Rhine valley cities of Mainz, Frankfurt on the Main, Wiesbaden, Ludwigshafen and Mannheim.

The assault troops crashed into St. Wendel, closing all but the extreme end of a death box in the Saar 15 miles south along the whole Saar line.

From the south, Lt.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch's 7th Army lobbed through the fortified city of Saarbruecken and pushed into Wissembourg and the French Maginot Line fortress of Lauterbourg, nine miles southwest of Karlsruhe.

Between them, Gen. Patton and Gen. Patch were using at least 27 divisions, including 10 crack armored, or about 360,000 troops. Expanding Gateway.

Both of the two powerful assault armies, the United States 1st Army fought alone within the Reich, the eight-mile east Rhine bridgehead beyond the collapsed but repaired Ludendorff bridge at Remagen.

Lt.-Gen. Courtney H. Hodges's forces were within 37 miles of the Ruhr and hard upon the vital Cologne-Berlin railway in the greatest of European industrial areas.

The 4th Armored Division captured Sprendlingen, one mile northeast of Mainz, and Lt.-Gen. Patton's 10th Armored Division spiked all within 14 miles of Kaiserslautern, a key German base 120 by 30 in the Palatinate.

The 7th Army, moving more slowly at about 10 miles a day, captured fortified line fortifications between besieged Saarbruecken and the Maginot Line within 15 miles of Kaiserslautern.

Encircling Manoeuvre

The 3rd Army captured Dillingen and its great steel mill, which was undamaged, only 18 miles from 7th Army troops fighting in the Saarbruecken area. A meeting of the armies would trap all Germans in the Saarland, including the 19th and the Saar Rivet where virtually all the Saar steel mills are located.

This trap, within the larger trap west of the Rhine, would virtually conquer the whole compact Saarland, leaving only the Palatinate to the German west of the Rhine.

The 7th Army threw armor into the battle for the first time and sent its tanks pretty into the border cities of Wissembourg and Lauterbourg in the Palatinate — and Lauterbourg, nine miles southwest of Karlsruhe as the extreme northeast corner of Alsace.

The 14th Armored Division's advance up to eight miles were clearing swiftly but the last big of eastern Franco Allendorf near Wissembourg also was entered. The entry of Lauterbourg was made in a dash down the Rhine clearing 30 miles of its west bang north of Strasbourg.

Abandon Gens, Tanks

The German retreat was so confused and disorderly that tanks, self-propelled guns and artillery were being abandoned. It was clear this last debacle west of the Rhine was costing the Wehrmacht a great array of men and weapons.

The U. S. 1st Army, firmly entrenched east-of the Rhine behind the collapsed but repairable Ludendorff bridge at Remagen, moved north, south and west in a bridgehead which Allied Supreme Headquarters said was 15 miles long and eight wide. Pressure from east-of the Rhine supplied this attack which already was within small-arms range of Cologne and Bonn-east-of Bonn and Bad Godesberg, leading Nazis have fled.

The 4th Armored Division moved nearest Cologne on the city of 58,000, Germans combined within 39 miles of Frankfurt on the Main (546,646), 17 miles southeast of the city of 116,000 in the Ruhr cities of Ludwigshafen (161,000) and Mannheim (283,000).

On the south, the 7th Army moved forward up to a half dozen miles in the Saar steel and concrete fortifications. They were within eight miles of the Palatinate bastion of Zweibrucken (47,300) and two of Zweibrucken, a steel city of 18,800.

On the west end of the contracting trap, most of Dillingen where the huge steel mill stands, and Saarlouis, was cleared and Merzig and Wadern were all Nazi Saar towns.

Fanatics Trap Within Trap

A trap within a trap was being fashioned at the west end of the Saarland pocket where the 3rd Army at, Walhausen and the 7th Army at Wissembourg were only 20 miles from a junction which would encircle Saarbruecken and Saarlouis and the huge steel mills of the Saarland.

Behind the collapse of the central portion of the Ludendorff span Saturday, Lt.-Gen. Hodges' engineers set in all directions from their bridgehead, crossing the stream in assault boats at 26 points in place and capturing an airfield east of Remagen.

An official announcement said the bridge, over which thousands of troops poured into the bridgehead area, could be repaired quickly.

(A broadcast by the American Broadcasting Company from Paris recorded by CBS declared the bridge "has been almost completely repaired.")

COULD HAVE LOST WAR

New York, March 19. (CP)—The Allies "might well have lost the war" in the Indian ocean in 1941 if the Japanese fleet, instead of retiring after the fall of Malaya, had driven across the ocean to sever communications with the Middle East up the east coast of Africa, Admiral Sir James Somerville said last night. He is the British admiralty representative in Washington and former commander of the eastern fleet.

After first explaining some of the circumstances that preceded his capture, Mr. Hume went on to tell of the poor conditions in the camps where he was confined and how these conditions were improved only through the tireless efforts of the inmates.

Valentine Eve.

The boys who are going to Toronto, the newly formed Octette, are being heartily assisted by their fellow students in the hope that we see the student body this week to secure the necessary funds. With first of these was a rollicking song entitled "Rolling Down to Rio" and of an encore the boys sang an arrangement of Finlandia to set the words of the beautiful "Land of Home." This organization is getting material for its appearance at Massey Hall in April and any help from their partners since this week, they should bring many honors to the school.

A Day in Toronto.

The entire girls' senior basketball team was the band for assembly on a humorous manner the means by which they would travel to Toronto; should they not have sufficient funds to pay their way. Of the attempts the girls have organized a tea-dance for Wednesday afternoon, March 21st. The girls resort to hitch-hiking, we know they will get to Toronto "the easy way."

Compulsory Announcement — This Means You.

At last the date has been set and preparations are under way for the Spring Formal which will be held on our own campus. The services of a fine band have been secured, Decoration and Invitation Committees have been appointed and all that you guys and gals need do is to get out your best brush off the old formal, and remember the date—April 6th.

COMING EVENTS

Monday, Mar. 19—In the boys inter-form semi-finals, 13-3 meets 11-4, 12-1 meets 12-2 in Belleville & Upper School Championship.

The R.C.I.V.C. Basketball team earnestly requests the presence of all Collegiate students at the final game of a home and home series, to be played at Albert College at 7:15 this evening. Monday, March 19, 1945.

This is the most important game. With the series tied our fellows will be fighting on Albert floor which they have had to play on, since the walls are not enough support. Rooters are badly needed to back up our team. The game only lasts an hour. Surely you can relax from your studies for that length of time to show the team you're right behind them.

Tuesday, Mar. 20—At noon today the winners of the 12-2-1-4 classic will face off with X-B, the inter-school champions, in the final game of the season. The contenders will emerge school champions of the 1945 basketball season.

Wednesday, Mar. 21—Boys' inters again—those befuddling brain-wracking final exams. Let's get a waste of badly needed midnight oil. Remember, cramming is out. It's also the first day of spring. I personally consider it shameful that anyone should have to write exams on this day, or any other, for that matter. It's the first sign of spring in the year, when the sun begins to shine again, when spring showers take over from snow and hail and breeze chase away the clouds of winter, that what must be most ill. Kinged.

Notice in Upper-school who are interested in going on to University next September, interview Mayor of Queen's who will pay her annual visit to the school this afternoon. Please leave your names at the office, and have your questions ready in advance.

Thursday, Mar. 22. The school Theatre will have their last practice before stepping on the floor at Toronto. So not one this practice at any cost, it should be good.

Friday, Mar. 23—School Team leaves for Toronto at 4:00 o'clock Friday afternoon for last minute instructions. Then straight through to Toronto. Lots of luck. This will be your last column till after Easter, so good bye 'till then.

BOYS' SPORTS

Basketball—Toronto Here We Come.

That's the watchword around the R.C.I.V.C. these days. Seniors are practically diligently and this week they will be playing X-B in their last some conditioning outdoors. The Junior will be directed tonight at 7:15 p.m. at Albert College, when they meet the Juniors of the Toronto. Our Juniors have a hard-fighting team and certainly deserve to win out. On March 26, the exam time-table for this week, your support of the College will be appreciated. That's all the sport news for this week. Have a Happy Easter. Watch your local paper for news of Friday's games in Toronto and in the meantime we would like to pay especially hard around eight o'clock on Friday evening.

General Election To Be Held Shortly After Parliamentary Term Expires on April 17th

Members Will be Asked to Vote Necessary Monies to Carry on War Until New Parliament Convened

Ottawa, March 18 (CP).—A general election will be held shortly after the parliamentary term expires April 17, it was announced today in the Speech from the Throne read by the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General at the opening of the sixth session of the 19th Parliament.

The session, the Speech said, was called for the dispatch of business which it was in the national interest to conduct before the expiration of the present parliament.

As a single paragraph devoted to the war the Speech said the country has continued with "relentless fury" in Europe and Asia. In Europe, the Allied forces were advancing to what it was believed would be a decisive victory. Canada is making a notable contribution to the achievements of the fighting forces.

Members of the House of Commons were informed they would be asked to make the "necessary financial provisions for the proper conduct of the war and to meet the ordinary expenses of government for the period between the end of the present year, March 31, and the opening of a new parliament".

Members of the Senate and the Commons were informed that a joint resolution of both houses will be submitted with a view to affording the Canadian delegation at the San Francisco World Security Conference the "widest possible measure of support from parliament".

Bodies of Two Men Found in Port Hope Area

The bodies of two men were found in the Port Hope area, according to Provincial Police. Inspector Harry Storey of district headquarters, Cobourg, went here today. Both bodies were found on Sunday.

Apparently having been covered with snow for the past two months, the body of 46-year-old Clarence Thompson, whose national registration card gave, Hamilton as his address, was found lying alongside a fence in Manvers Township, Durham County, five miles from Penitypool. Provincial Constable Pollard of Bowmanville, later was informed Thompson had been previously in Manvers Township, but when he disappeared it was believed he had returned to Hamilton some week ago. It was only when the snow recently melted that children found the body lying in a fence corner. An inquest was immediately called.

Lying alongside the Canadian Pacific Railway line, five and one-half miles west of Port Hope, the body of Clarence Livingstone, whose registration card indicated he resided in Long Branch, Toronto, was found early Sunday morning. There was a deep gash in the deceased man's head indicating he had either fallen from a train or had been hit by one while walking along the tracks. Inspector Storey stated here at noon that efforts to locate relatives of Livingstone at Long Branch had not proved successful up to that time. Here, also, an inquest will be held.

Lt. Jack Stock Escapes Injury By Short Stroll

Dug in with his men in a corner of one of the few green fields left in the Gothic Line defences, Lieut. Jack Stock son of Mr. Harry Stock of this city, strolled to a spot fifty yards away to relieve his "pee" and covered still trench for his lunch. Then small arms fire began and when his life or at least saved him from serious injury. Lieut. Stock had "planted one about fifteen feet from the tent, riddled it with shrapnel, and then went back to eat and two other men."

Writing home,and, Lieut. Stock says in his letter, is feeling the full swing of Allied might. "This has been a rich farming country and now there is scarcely a building or farmhouse that is not shattered. And the towns—well—the most of them have ceased to exist."

Most of the country is churned up with fresh tracks made by heavy vehicles grinding about. The mud has been terrific, he said. It was only yesterday that we finally found a field covered with grass where we are able to pitch our tents. It was a relief to see something that looks good, so untouched and alive again."

Gliders Sallen.

There are only a few civilians left, he adds, and they appear dazed and stunned. "I saw one of the older chaps when he saw one of our carrier planes pass by waving a silk top hat."

"All of the boys are eating well as there are plenty of pigs, chickens and cattle. Most of the animals have been killed in the fighting and carcasses are lying around all over the countryside."

Lieut. Stock paid tribute to the fighting qualities of the enemy and German troops. "The fighting has been tough and the Canadians have run up against some of Germany's best soldiers. Many of the paratroopers are young, tough, fanatical and cocky, even in defeat. They don't seem to know what is happening in any but their own section."

Lieut. Stock is serving with an armored unit in Germany.

Police Blotter

An inebriate caused so much disturbance at the Belle Theatre, Saturday night he had to be removed by police after refusing advice from theatre attendants. The man was held at the police station until in condition to return home.

Called a Dog.

Percy Livingston, driver of a city bus, reported to police he had struck and killed a dog on Station Street, over the weekend. The dog ran directly in front of the bus, passengers related.

Mrs. Angus Asselstine, Shannonville, complained to police that some sneak thief had stolen her purse while she was shopping in the city last Saturday. Ration cards and $15 in cash were in the purse.

Theft of Car Reported.

Kingston police reported the theft of a 1941 model Dodge sedan and R. Brockhurst, 31 Earl Street, complained that his bicycle had been stolen off Front Street, Saturday. Police also investigated reports of a family disturbance at 13 Dunbar St. The matter was found to be purely a civil matter that in no way concerned police. There was a decrease in the number of inebriates apprehended in the city over the weekend, when only three such persons were placed in the local bastile to sober up.

Text of Throne Speech

Ottawa, March 18 (CP)—Following is the text of the Speech from the Throne read today by the Earl of Athlone, Governor General, to members of the House of Commons and Senate:

Honorable members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

You have been called into session for the dispatch of business which it is in the national interest to conclude before the expiration of the present parliament.

Since I last addressed you, the forces in Europe and Asia have continued with relentless fury. In Europe the Allied forces are rapidly advancing to what there is every reason to believe will be decisive victory. Canada is proud of the part ever of the splendid achievements of her fighting forces, at sea, on land and in the air.

The government has accepted the invitation to Canada to send representatives to a conference of the United Nations to be held on April 25, at San Francisco, to prepare a charter for a general international organization for the maintenance of international peace and security. My ministers are of the opinion that the Canadian delegation at San Francisco conference should be assured of the widest possible measure of support from parliament. A joint resolution of both Houses will accordingly be submitted for your approval.

Members of the House of Commons:

The term of the present parliament will expire on April 17. A general election will be held shortly thereafter. You will be asked to make the necessary financial provisions for the effective conduct of the war, and to meet the ordinary expenses of government for the period between the end of the present fiscal year and the opening of a new parliament.

Honorable members of the Senate; Members of the House of Commons:

May Divine Providence guide your deliberations in this solemn moment in the history of the world.

Bombing Attempt on Hitler's Life Told to Newsman by Participant

BY LOUIS P. LOCHNER
(Copyright, 1945,
By The Associated Press)

Bonn, Germany, March 18 — (AP) —A man who is a fugitive from German authorities today told how he participated in the July 20 bombing attempt on Hitler's life has told me that the Fuehrer, fully sure that the war is lost, now pegs himself up from time to time, watching reviews showing the purging of generals and nobles who died for their part in the plot.

My informant, who gave a complete story of the bomb plot, is a man I have known for years and in whose integrity and veracity I have a firm belief.

The bomb attempt failed because Hitler did not receive his officers in a concrete bunker July 20 but in a wooden shed to above ground limit and high Italians he was not afraid of air raids. The Italians were scheduled to attend a ceremony incorporating remains of the Fascist army into the Wehrmacht.

The bomb's effectiveness had been calculated on the assumption the explosion would occur in a much smaller room than where Hitler at this time met. The bomber with executive walk, was to heighten the impact of the blast.

Secondly, it failed because at the moment of the explosion, Hitler stepped to a colleague to look for a magnifying glass. The bomb had been placed under his chair.

Even so, Hitler was badly hurt. His hearing apparently has been impaired permanently, the right arm was injured, but posted back to health by Professor Morrell, noted Berlin physician. He also suffered some burns.

As an aftermath of the nerve-wracking experience, Hitler left Berlin early in the second half of September, since then he often loses his memory, and he says is unable to function as chief of state and supreme commander of the Wehrmacht. Occasionally he swoons. Frequently speech fails him, or he pronounces words only with great difficulty.

These facts my informant said, explain why Hitler's radio speeches of Jan. 1 and Jan. 30 aroused so much controversy as to whether the speaker actually was Hitler. Recordings, my informant believes, are made during Hitler's lucid moments and the best parts put together for broadcasting.

Hitler not only knows the war is lost, but since last July 20 has been aware that he is opposed by what my informant called the "elite of post-Bismarckian Germany"—the nobility, military caste, big industrialists, the bankers and intelligentsia among labor. Their weight on him even more heavily than the

Hitler Knows No Bounds

His hatred for them knows no bounds, my informant believes. He has shown "a repulsive, revolting film of the hangings of Field Marshal Erwin Von Witzleben, Ulrich Von Hassel and the others bondsmanby a cinematographer. He then added out of his fits of despondency, deriving a vicarious, sadistic satisfaction from the sorry evidence of his triumph over his adversaries at home.

The technique of the hangings was unspeakably cruel in two aspects. The victims were hanged naked in violation of all tradition. A wire instead of a rope was used and the condemned were hoisted slowly. Their strivings lasted at least five to eight minutes, during which time of blood, profusely.

My informant estimated that from 1,200 to 1,800 persons were immediate victims of the plot's aftermath — convicted of complicity by the people's court. Beyond them, he added, many thousands of Germany's "better people" were implicated, many noble families wiped out.

THREE DISTRICT BOYS HOME ON FURLOUGH FROM BATTLE FRONTS

Officers and other ranks of the Canadian Army who arrived in Belleville on furlough during the weekend for duty in Canada and on rotation leave included a number who have been in the thick of the fighting in Italy, France and the Low Countries.

Corporal H. D. Vandewater, of Wellington, Dist. of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regt. who sustained shrapnel wounds and bullet scar above when a shell burst three feet from him at Cesena, Italy, was included in the group.

Wounded three times, and home on the furlough after 2½ years in the W. Friar, and Private P. C. Minnes Baker, of Stanley Park, both of Picton, arrived on the same train. Lindsay and Peterborough veterans were also included.

35 NUNS EVACUATED

Mandalay, March 19 — (Reuters) — Thirty-five nuns, 30 priests and a number of orphan children, housed in a leper asylum in Mandalay, have been evacuated by a village north of the city after Japanese shelling had killed one priest and injured four others. Bishop Pallere of Mandalay and Major Gordon of Shans remained behind with the religious staff of the asylum.

Nazi Officers Die For Failure To Destroy Bridge

London, March 19 — (CP)—Three German majors and a lieutenant were executed after court-martial for cowardice or neglect of duty in American seizure of the bridge at Remagen over the Rhine, the German High Command reported Sunday.

A fifth officer, Capt. Brahlke, who commanded the Remagen garrison, was sentenced to death in absentia, the German Command added, implying he had fled or been captured.

The five were sentenced "some on charges of cowardice, others on charges of grave neglect of duty in the field, for neglectful failure to blow up the Rhine bridge at Remagen in good time, or else to defend it with determination," the broadcast communique said.

The sentences of all but Brahlke were carried out immediately, it added.

The officers were "Major Shrobel of a supreme regimental headquarters, Major Scheller, adjutant of an army corps, Major Kraft of a land defence battalion and Lieutenant Peters, in command of anti-aircraft corps" exposed for cowardice in the span.

The blunder gave the United States 1st Army a firm bridgehead on the east bank of the Rhine without a bloody, contested crossing.

Quick Thinking Saves Corvette Lindsay in Channel

A British Port, March 19 (CP) — Only quick thinking by her first lieutenant, Bob Casement of Montreal, prevented the Canadian corvette Lindsay from being torn in half recently when she was rammed by a Royal Navy destroyer in the English Channel.

Lindsay, commanded by Lieut. G. A. P. Thomson of Victoria, was escorting a convoy in early morning darkness when Casement swung her hard to starboard just in time to prevent the destroyer's bows from tearing into the heart of the ship. The destroyer struck Lindsay a glancing blow under the forward part of the bridge, and raked the port side from bridge to stern. There were no casualties in either ship.

"It was a very close call," said Lieut. Casement, "and I guess we were lucky. Visibility was poor and although I knew he was off our port bow it was up to him to give way. I couldn't see him until he was 1,200 yards away and heading straight for us. The only thing I could do was order hard to starboard and full ahead. I had already turned on the navigation lights but nothing happened."

Lindsay's company was ordered to stand by boats and floats because it was not known how extensive the damage was. Within an hour from the time she was hit, however, she was under way again on the convoy.

Tokyo Says Allied Subs Move To Cut Jap Supply Line

San Francisco, March 19—(AP)—Tokyo radio today said a fleet of Allied submarines has moved from waters off China's coast into the China Sea to cut off Japan's tenuous supply lines from her conquered southern territory.

The broadcast, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, said the subs were trying "to get near to keep a proper and interrupt the Japanese supplies to the southern areas."

Japanese planes were sent out to attack the undersea fleet.

TWO HASTINGS COUNTY SOLDIERS WOUNDED

Names of two Hastings County soldiers are contained in the Canadian Army casualty list released for publication today. Member of an Eastern Ontario Regiment, Rfn. IT HAPPENED ON THE MORNING OF DEC. 16, 1942

REMEMBER? It was on that winter morning, two years ago, that the consumer subsidy of 2c. per quart on fluid milk, paid by your Wartime Prices and Trade Board, came into effect. If it were not for this subsidy, your milk today would still cost you 2c. a quart more—just as it actually did in November 1942.

Why did the WPTB decide to take this action? Because, in the face of an all-time high demand and rising prices, it was essential in the general public interest to hold the price of this basic food at a low level which would keep down the cost-of-living index.

In the face of this all-time high demand for fluid milk, the dairy farmer and your own neighborhood milk distributor have co-operated to provide a daily supply of this fine food, under most trying and difficult war-time conditions. Only by such splendid teamwork and by intelligently expanding both dairy herds and distributive services have Canadians everywhere been supplied with this essential nourishment whenever and wherever it is required.

Municipalities' Position Improved

Annual report of the Municipal Statistics for 1943 recently issued by the Department of Municipal Affairs of Ontario is one of the greatest importance and interest to improve the public interest and knowledge of municipal affairs of the Province. One of the outstanding facts brought to light is the splendid financial position of the vast majority of Ontario municipalities.

A summary of the report for 1943 shows that the assessed population of all incorporated municipalities increased by 34,450 persons, or 1.7 per cent. over that of 1942 and now amounts to 3,580,301, the increase taking place very largely in the cities.

Assessed valuation rose 1.6 per cent during 1943 to $3,063,227,526, the increase due mainly to additional and increased assessment in the cities. The per capita assessment of the Province for the year 1943 was $855 compared to $850 in 1942. The 1943 assessment represents $127 per assessed acre.

Tax levies rose $1,269,479 and reached the figure of $111,546,480. This 1.2 per cent increase results in a per capita tax levy of $31.16. The increase is entirely accounted for by additions to the levies for educational purposes. The levies for other than education of $43,022,745, showing clearly the trend of educational costs in the province. County levies for education are included in county rates and form part of the general levies of the local municipalities. If the 1943 county rates are distributed functionally, says the report, and the $2,249,960 levy for education added to the local levies of $68,102,767, then the total proportion of local tax levies attributable to education amounts to $45,272,705 and forms 40.6 per cent of the total.

In 1943 total tax collections amounted to $114,331,179. The total represents 102.5 per cent of the current levy compared with that of 104.6 per cent in 1942. Current tax collections increased. Improved conditions have led to higher collections of these taxes.

Tax arrears have again declined and at the close of 1943 amounted to $11,215,985, representing 4.75 per cent of taxes and 15.2 per cent of the 1943 levy. If this trend continues and an aggressive tax collection system is maintained, the tax arrears, in future years, will be primarily those of the current levy, the report states. In addition to this improved collection Ontario municipalities have also set aside $6,257,804 in reserve accounts against arrears of taxes. When these reserves are applied against the $7,093,706 of other than arrears of the current levy it is clear what ample provision has been made to cover possible losses.

A trend of the times is seen in the increase of the amount of property acquired for taxes which has been reduced from a total of $13,557,022 in 1942 by $684,500 so that at the end of last year the municipalities held $12,872,522 of such properties among their current assets; liquidation of these assets will make funds available for the reduction of future tax rates of the municipalities, the report points out.

Bank loans and overdrafts have been reduced by $694,654 to $4,263,908 by the municipalities and this with the $406,997 set aside in post-war reserve funds is further proof of the strength of the current position.

The report indicates that the outstanding achievement of the year respecting municipal finance in Ontario was the continued and extensive reduction in gross and net debenture indebtedness. At the close of 1943 the gross debenture debt was $78.60 per capita, the reduction of $23,982,758 being equivalent to a 7.9 decrease from that of 1942. Gross debenture debt at the end of last year has reached the lowest in 23 years or 1920. After deducting the book value of the sinking funds from the gross amount the net debenture debt represented $65.56 per capita compared to $71.67 per capita at the end of 1942.

More Than 100 Million Words

Since June 6 last, known as D-Day, more than one hundred million words have been sent by correspondents in dispatches, which is equivalent to a library of some 1,700 average-length novels. In the same time 50 or more million feet of newsreel film was used up and a million and a half photographs were dealt with. Censorship of dispatches eliminated only one to one and a half per cent in "bulk."

Never was a world working on the home front and even a world fighting on the actual front so supplied with news and pictures of its own greatest struggles. And for the future historian there will also be preserved millions of documents for record. The United Nations will have no reason to destroy their documents and files will be preserved for all time. But as for the Huns, especially those guilty of atrocities, there is the likelihood that the enemy will destroy in a wholesale way any documents that might incriminate them. However even if the Huns try to destroy documents which might incriminate them, there will be ample record of the enemy's misdeeds from Allied witnesses of the crimes the Germans have committed.

Allied leaders like Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt have done much in their own speeches to interpret not only for our own age but for the future history and custodians of the heritage left by this age the course of events which have kept the world engaged for not only the duration of the war but for the years that preceded the outbreak of the Hitler assault upon civilization.

"Return to Nature" in Drugs

(Newsweek Magazine, New York)

In contrast with the search for synthetic drugs a few years ago there's now an increasing "return to nature." Pharmaceutical manufacturers and others engaged in making penicillin are working feverishly on new molds which may yield drugs superior to penicillin but capable of combating germs like tuberculosis, not reached by known drugs. As a result, the profession of mycologist, or authority on fungus growths, has become one of the most lucrative as manufacturers bid for the services of trained men and women.

SIX-YEAR-OLDS

Oh, I'm well enough, I fancy; just a trifle worn and frayed,
And if one were free this morning I could use a nurse's aide.
Why the rush for early meeting? What's the cause of such fatigue?
Well, the truth is, fond inquirer, I've been in too fast a league.
I am sure that actual warfare no such downright terror holds
As a merry birthday party for a group of six-year-olds.

Yes, I know his grandma warned me, when I said I'd stay about,
But I scorned her gentle counsel and I vowed I'd stick it out.
Though I wondered at the doorway, as I greeted each with pride,
Why their mothers seemed so happy as they shoved their young inside.
But I quickly learned the reason. Through yon cabin they've turned Six-year-olds, the terror of the summer of 1943.

Pyle's Small Aircraft Carrier Has Earned Proud Record in Pacific

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Western Pacific (Delayed)—An aircraft carrier is a noble thing. It looks after everything that seems to denote nobility. Yet deep nobility is there.

A carrier has no pride. It has no grace. It is top-heavy and topsided. In fact it looks like a well-fed cow.

It doesn't cut through the water like a cruiser, knifing romantically along. It doesn't dance and career like a destroyer. It just plows. You feel it should be carrying a hod, or maybe hauling a red sash.

Yet a carrier is a ferocious thing, and out of its heritage of action has grown its nobility. I believe that today's proud navy in the world has as its No. 1 priority, the destruction of enemy carriers. That's a precarious honor, but it's a proud one.

My carrier is a proud one. She's small, and you never see it put on unless you have a son or husband on her, but still she's proud, and deservedly so.

She has been at sea, without returning home, longer than any other carrier in the Pacific, with one exception. She will break that record in 1943.

She is a little thing, yet her planes have shot 22½ of the enemy out of the sky in air battles, and her guns have knocked down five Jap planes in defending herself.

She is by no means big enough to sink any of little ships she destroys, but she has sent to the bottom of the Pacific scores of them. Her bombs and secret torpedoes have smashed into everything from the greatest Jap battleships to the tiniest coastal schooners.

U.S. Cuts Meat Supply to Britain By 87 Per Cent

Trudeo, March 18—(AP)—British housewives, startled by a Washington announcement that meat rationing in the United States would be cut 87 per cent during the next year, found little comfort on the brisk of perhaps the greatest food crisis of the war in the government's announcement in Washington that, starting April 1, there would be a cut of 13 per cent in the meat ration for American civilians, reducing it to 2½ pounds (one point in 16 rams).

Newspapers treated the announcement as sensational news and one, the Sunday Dispatch, devoted all its editorial space to a discussion of British needs and a continuance of American generosity, which it said was necessary in this sixth year of the war.

Food Minister, J. J. Llewellin said this would be the tightest year of the war for food, adding:

"Out of our accumulated stocks we have made considerable amounts available for liberal areas, and we are now in nearly every instance living from hand to mouth in proper distribution in this country."

Volunteer Italian Troops Active

Rome, March 18 — (AP)—Volunteer Italian troops fighting beside the Allies held out today in a captured German counter-attack between Cisterna and Rislo in Bagni, five miles south of the Bologna-Rimini road hub of the Italian front, along the rest of the Italian front was confined to patrolling.

Japan Modifies Education Laws

San Francisco, March 18 — (AP) —Japan's blackout of education for the duration of the war, including grade was modified to a brownout today.

A Sunday broadcast said that beginning April 1 all Japanese students would be mobilized for war industry.

Modifying that statement in a broadcast intercepted by the Federal Communications Commission today, radio Tokyo said the "compulsory mobilization" will be carried out unconditionally" and "students will stop studying for the duration of the war; they are called out by the mobilization laws."

Mobilization regulations and their enforcement are now being prepared by the Education Ministry, Minister Count Hideo Kodama told the Lower House of the Diet.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Protruding Ears

Our two year old son's ears stand out from his head very noticeably. Would a cap of some kind worn constantly to keep the ears flattened against the head correct it? (Mrs. R. S.)

Answer—It might in a child's first months old, hardly in a child over a year old. Plastic operations for faulty ear formation ending ears in a child over 18 months of age. Those earlier any plastic surgery is done the better the result is likely to be.

No Paraffin

I was born with a very flat pug nose. Recently a girl friend told me I have it reshaped by a plastic surgeon. I am married and 23 years old. (Miss C. M.)

Answer—Selection of parents after a degree and generally unsatisfactory—and once is in surgery of the nose that you've stuck with it. That is not plastic surgery, but plastic. If you have anything done, have real surgery. You are not married until the past year or two I fear I'll look a sight in a bathing suit.

(Mrs. G. E. A.)

Answer—Mention age, height and weight — if that you should reduce I'll send you a pamphlet "How to Lose Weight." But perhaps you need to adopt a regimen to take up slack. Send 3c stamp and mention hearing your address for booklet "The 7 Keys to Health."

POLITICAL BOURBONS

Why are ultra-conservatives in politics called bourbons?

The name comes from a royal family that ruled France from 1589 to 1848, with interruptions caused by the French Revolution and the Napoleonic regime.

Members of the Bourbon family have ruled for centuries in Naples, Parma and Spain.

Louis XVIII was first heard of in the ninth century when its head, Martin Almy, was lord of the castle and seigniory of "Bourbon-l'Archambault" in central France in the present department of Vilier.

Through the centuries the Bourbons became noted for their opposition to all political change and their firm adherence to "the old order, regime," "old order."

The Bourbons loved learn anything and never forget anything," which dates from about 1800, is attributed to Talleyrand and various other Frenchmen.

Why do Bourbons in Helena in 1871, said, "The Bourbons are a set of imbeciles."

The England's national debt, Richard Brinsley Sheridan (1761-1816), described "half of it has been incurred in putting down the Bourbons, and the other half in setting them up."

In the United States "bourbon," or "BOOR-bun," is applied to a reactionary in politics, a standpatter, a reactionary, "to the Guard," an ultra-conservative, one who clings stubbornly to the established order.

Rabbi M. De Vera, writing in 1872, said "we find the names of the royal Bourbons applied, now politically, to the high-handedness of regime," "old order."

In 1894 the term was defined as "a Democrat behind the age and satisfied."

upon Germany by American planes.

Seven hundred U. S. fighters accompanied the bombers on the raid.

While American bombers concentrated on railroad yards in the heart of Berlin and on transport plants on the industrial suburbs, one group of Liberators struck at Rostock, Germany and teamed up with 15 Russian fighters which escorted the bombers held airfield east of the Oder River from German dive-bombers.

The Rostock aircraft plant fleet was met by a hail of flak over Berlin and the bombers were forced to take evasive action.

A radio broadcast said Rostock was the third largest producer of rockets, flying bombs and jet planes for seven German planes destroyed and two probably destroyed. Eight American planes were knocked out by anti-aircraft fire.

The English—From A Polish Viewpoint

Polish seamen sailing in British convoys received their overseas ideas of the English from the Women, the English and gunmen. As 'were the Britishers' conceptions of democratic conversation, the Poles were rather strong on attacking strip in a Polish freighter.

By ARKADY SWINLEY,
in "The Polish Review"

Our ship that was the commodore's but the convoy and kept a sharp look-out. We had to help maintain order on the assigned route.

It was apparent from his manner and the way in which he gave orders that he was an old seaman. For an Englishman, he was unusually talkative and in the service of all sailors, frequently gave orders that had to be relayed down the line of ships by semaphore.

He also had a satisfactory sense of humour. One of the sailors told me that, once during a previous voyage in a thick pea-soup fog, all ships fearing collision, began blowing their foo-horns frantically and incessantly. When the fog lifted several hours later, the commodore signalled them:

"Ships caught in a fog should blow their foo-horns, not their whistles and blow their heads."

One day our ship received instructions in a convoy. For a long time the Britishers were unable to cope with the situation. The black smoke coming out in long streaks onto the next ship whose crew thought they had received signals and replied accordingly.

"We beg of you, let us breathe!" said the captain of the leaders but self took a hand in the matter. Finally, always liked to use highly colored words, described the problem as follows:

"Hitler, like a hysterical monkey, will wear himself out and will shortly die from lack of holes before the English will look around to see what's happening in the world and realize that there's a war on."

One of the ships lagged behind, losing sailing of the following night.

When Churchill was received during the news of Singapore's fall, and all of us officers were listening to the broadcast. A British port officer was there with us, doing on a coach apparently unconcerned. He made frequent comments in a cawing. For a long time we could not make out what he was saying. Then we heard:

"Bloody Japs fallen! Oh! Bloody Japs captured! Oh! Bloody Japs dead! Oh! Bloody Japs turning over to hell! Oh! Bloody Japs burned up!"

And today the English officer in charge of the convoy, Commander Hall, was dead regarding the pilot. What else was he supposed to do? Tear his hair? Or beat his head against the wall and weep?

Everyone started talking at once. The conversation grew livelier as the evening progressed. Then the captain took the floor to relate an adventure of the morning and, I was also invited along. After exchanged our experiences of the day, the talk got around to the English. Although most of felt deep affection for them, still at times their conduct puzzled us, so that we made up a lot of jokes at their expense.

That was still during the period when we, along with the rest of the world, were rather impatient with their slowness in becoming lack of interest in the war.

Our commander led the lively discussion. Bolka the first officer, always liked to use highly colored words, described the problem as follows:

"Hitler, like a hysterical monkey, will wear himself out and will shortly die from lack of holes before the English will look around to see what's happening in the world and realize that there's a war on."

One of the ships lagged behind, losing sailing of the following night.

When Churchill was received during the news of Singapore's fall, and all of us officers were listening to the broadcast. A British port officer was there with us, doing on a coach apparently unconcerned. He made frequent comments in a cawing. For a long time we could not make out what he was saying. Then we heard:

"Bloody Japs fallen! Oh! Bloody Japs captured! Oh! Bloody Japs dead! Oh! Bloody Japs turning over to hell! Oh! Bloody Japs burned up!"

And today the English officer in charge of the convoy, Commander Hall, was dead regarding the pilot. What else was he supposed to do? Tear his hair? Or beat his head against the wall and weep?

Everyone started talking at once. The conversation grew livelier as the evening progressed. Then the captain took the floor to relate an adventure of the morning and, I was also invited along. After we exchanged our experiences of the day, the talk got around to the English. Although most of felt deep affection for them, still at times their conduct puzzled us, so that we made up a lot of jokes at their expense.

That was still during the period when we, along with the rest of the world, were rather impatient with their slowness in becoming lack of interest in the war.

Our commander led the lively discussion. Bolka the first officer, always liked to use highly colored words, described the problem as follows:

"Hitler, like a hysterical monkey, will wear himself out and will shortly die from lack of holes before the English will look around to see what's happening

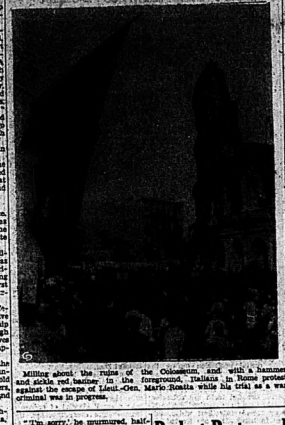
ROMANS RIOT AS WAR CRIMINAL ESCAPES



Milling about the ruins of the Colosseum, and with a hammer and sickle emblem on their caps, Italians in Rome protest against the escape of Lieut.-Gen. Mario Roatta while his trial as a war criminal was in progress.

"I'm sorry," he murmured, half-smiling at us as if to beg our pardon for all the trouble he had caused, and silently slipped back into the ocean."

That smile of the drowning British officer haunted us all that evening in the mate's cabin.

YOUTH WELFARE PLAN

Scientists say the mental activity required in "counting sheep" deters rather than encourages sleep.

Budget Postponed Until Election

Ottawa, March 19 (CP)—There may be a lot of talk at the coming short session of parliament, but it is not expected any concerted effort will be made to have the House of Commons refuse to vote the money the government needs to carry on public affairs during the interval between the start of the new fiscal year, April 1, and the assembly of another session of another parliament after an election.

The interim money bills to be introduced will probably call for approval of the expenditure of five-twelfths of the non-war estimates and the war appropriation for the fiscal year starting April 1.

That would take care of the government's commitments up to the end of August. If an election is held in late June or early July it is expected the regular 1946 session of parliament could be started some time in August.

Since an election is not possible before the end of the fiscal year members of the Commons will have the choice of approving the financial appropriations or forcing the government to finance on Governor-General's warrants without its approval.

Adopt Former Course.

It is expected the House will adopt the former course although there will be criticism of the government for not having the election on earlier so that the whole question of money appropriations for 1945-46 could be dealt with by a new parliament.

The short session will have no budget. That presentation, which covers the annual report of the Minister of Finance to parliament for the previous year and his estimates of revenue and expenses for the new year will be left for the regular session which will be held after the election.

With no budget there there will be no changes in the taxation structure since these are normally brought into effect with the budget.

By the time the budget is actually brought down six months or more of the 1946-47 fiscal year will have passed and it is expected that the country will probably experience no important tax changes until 1946.

Serious War Situation Changes Set-Up Of Jap War Council

San Francisco, March 19 (AP) Emperor Hirohito of Japan, facing a war situation so serious "the fate of the empire is at stake," broke precedent last week by empowering Premier Kuniaki Koiso to join in meetings of the Imperial general staff, Domei agency said in a Tokyo broadcast.

The enemy radio report, heard by the Federal Communications Commission, said this "fusion of the administration of strategy and of governmental problems of war" was the result of a decision made after the Emperor had called Koiso and his military chieftains to the palace for instructions.

Never before has the head of Japan's civil government been permitted to participate with the top military and naval leaders in deliberations on strategic matters. The Imperial staff is composed of the emperor as supreme commander and chiefs of the army and navy general staffs.

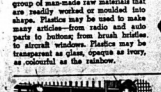
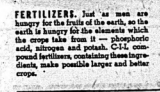
C-I-L explains to you the purpose of some of its PRODUCTS

● Here are just a few of the products of C-I-L — and how they serve Canada.



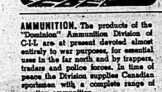
NYLON is still front page news. Its adventure into the field of hosiery brought a flurry of excitement. Its war use in man-bearing parachutes has saved many lives. To date, all this nylon yarn made in the C-I-L plant at Kingston has been devoted to war purposes. Tomorrow may see nylon in everything, from dress goods to draperies.

PLASTICS is a general term for a group of man-made raw materials that are readily worked or moulded into shape. Every day may be used in many articles—from radio and auto parts to buttons; from brush bristles to shrunk windows; some may be transparent as glass, opaque as ivory, as colourful as the rainbow.



"CELLOPHANE" starts as Canadian timber; ends as the tough, transparent wrapping that protects so many of the important foods and articles you buy. In the conversion of the wood pulp into "Cellophane", quantities of C-I-L made caustic soda, sulphuric acid and chlorine are used.

FERTILIZERS. Just as men are hungry for the fruits of the earth, so the earth is hungry for the elements which she needs. She gets them from phosphoric acid, nitrogen and potash. C-I-L compound fertilizers, containing these ingredients, make possible larger and better crops.



EXPLOSIVES made by C-I-L help build our railways; our hydro-electric developments; our roads; our airports. Canada's vast mining industry depends on commercial explosives.

AMMUNITION. The products of the "Dominion" Ammunition Division of C-I-L are, at present, mainly devoted to war purposes, for essential uses in the far north and by trappers, traders and police forces. In time of peace the Division supplies Canadian sportsmen with a complete range of sporting ammunition.

Don't Skip Trip to Dentist

Mary Ashworth of Ted Steele's orchestra has beautiful teeth.

By HELEN FOLLETT

CONSIDER the laughing cuss, the girls who see him, the wide and winsome smile. You're envious? Well, it's a gift from dentist; all in good order, pearly white. The poor dears whose bits are there but out of form, in any way seldom smile. The unsmiling countenance is the mark of a dental defective. Don't make her unhappy.

Rapid strides have been made by the dental profession during the last twenty years. Devitalized teeth are extracted, understudies take their place; nobody is the wiser. Crooked teeth are corrected, broken ones are repaired. The X-ray reveals infections within, taken in hand early, are treated and healed; gets to the source before the infection may spread to other portions of the body, do damage to the health.

Remember, your beauty budget if you must, limit the cute little numbers of your wardrobe, but spare no money when your teeth are concerned. Go to the dentist twice a year for examination and such repair work as may be necessary.

When the gums bleed, there is a possibility that tartar has formed, causing them to recede. These crusty growths can be removed only by a dentist. Brush your teeth often, but when brushing goes on three times daily.

Helpful Diet.

Many dentists believe that what one eats has much to do with the health of the teeth. To be on the safe side, they suggest that you take a small glassful of orange or tomato juice every morning. Once you have an egg for breakfast, eat it at least every other day. Remember, or dinner. If these foods are good for your teeth, chances are they will bolster up the fingernails, the hair and the complexion. They supply calcium, phosphorus, especially vitamin C, of which every human mortal is in need.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

SHOULD A WIFE FORGIVE?

"Could there be a more unhappy girl than I?" writes Alma C. A young wife whom I dearly love has been sent home from Italy, badly wounded. Let me tell you her story.

"He seems hardly himself," she says, "he has suffered so terribly. But he has been beautifully taken care of and his progress has been successful and now every day he is getting better and later he gets well, his wound won't be a serious handicap, they tell me. So I suppose he could go back to work again at least after the war is over and we and I with our two children could have more or less the kind of life we used to live.

"Only I am afraid it could never be the same. Georgo has told me about the violent flirtation he had with an Italian girl in Southern Italy. He hasn't spared me anything. And he says he wouldn't blame me if I got a divorce. Only now that he is back again and has seen the children and me, he doesn't love the Italian girl any more but he loves me as much as ever.

"Shall I believe him? Can I trust a man who couldn't be faithful to me for a few months, even? Can things ever be the same between us?

"Of course I can't help being sorry for him when I see him lying in bed week and pain and helpless. But my suffering is something to be considered too, and if I have a lawyer asking me would attend to everything for me and get a divorce. If I only knew what to do! (Signed) Alma C."

My dear child, forgive him. It's evident you still love him, or you wouldn't suffer so much. Divorce, which would deprive you of a husband and your children of a father, would in this case be quite the wrong course to take. Here at home there will be nothing to remind the soldier of his Italian experience. It will all be blotted out. You will be the reality. And I believe that when he gets well, things can be the same as ever between you.

So try to forget all that you can. I'm sure there is still happiness ahead for you.

Fashion Flashes

ALL OF A SUDDEN it's Spring and the urge for a real Spring hat won't be denied. In the mood is a little sailor of pin straw cloth appliqued with green leaves full on the crown and with a wreath of shaded purple and mauve flowers tied with a green satin bow.

IT'S NO USE trying to dodge chocked fashions. They're all over the country this season and the fillip for a solid color coat or suit, appliqued with green or pin-checked taffeta in black and white, consisting of a pastilion sailor, waskit blouse and bag.

THE BEST EVER is the report of the new prints. Nice for afternoon wear is a rayon shantung in mesh pink with a splashy black flower-and-plume print. Black eyelet lace binds the square neckline and the short sleeves. Buttons all the way down the front.

IT'S EASY to hold on the new bags because so many of them feature solid, substantial handles. Red calfskin is used for a handsome bag with a pannier handle that extends from a semi-rigid flap and carries down into sections on the side of the bag.

AN ENDURING FASHION is the one-button jacket suit which ranges from the man-tailored classic to the simple cardigan style. Broad shoulders and a slim waist mark a one-button cardigan suit in caramel beige woolen with brown silk edging matching the V-shaped pockets—two at the bustline two at the waist.

SOMETHING NEW in the lopped-off line-up is the fur-cuffed model. Paisley beige woolen is used for a three-quarter topper with one-button closing at the high neckline and huge, wide cuffs of deep beige fox.

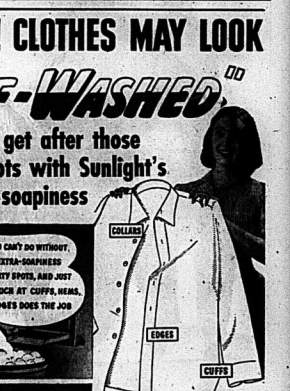
Ribbon Ties up the Mode

By ALICE ALDEN

SPICE UP your dark suit or coat this Spring with a dash of brightly colored ribbon. The shops are concocting ideas on ribbon bags, belts, bows, gloves and hats, with ribbon winding itself right around the mode. Robert-Dudley makes a handsome bow-trimmed hat and matching scarf which he calls "Bow Catcher". The hat is made in two sections, one white straw, the other in black straw with a sparkling bow of black and white striped taffeta ribbon which ends in streamers.



THE way Sunlight whips you into richest, deepest cleansing suds, is a joy to see. Best of all, no more "half-washed" looking clothes. With Sunlight on the job, everything—even your fussy washable colors and grimy work clothes—come brighter and cleaner all over.

25th Anniversary of First Flight to Australia

by SIR KEITH SMITH
(R.A.F.C. Press Service)

It was the afternoon of the 10th December, 1919—26 years ago—and it was the day we left Darwin to start on the first flight that had been made from England to Australia. Twenty-five years ago—and there's been nothing startling since then—and records have been made and broken; and many places in the world have improved out of all recognition—but I'm not going to tell of the one we tried to do 'way to Australia.

My brother Ross and I were over here from Australia flying Vickers Vimy bombers. We'd left Egypt and as soon as the last war was over—and, by the way, very keen to get back to Australia—we quite naturally wondered whether it would be possible to fly home.

A hundred and one study notes—all mentional notes—into our minds—it was finding the answers to those that was the difficulty. Anyway, how was the flight to be flown? Single machines—if any—were capable of standing up to the journey, where could we get such machines? Information—and not just about the route—particularly was needed. India, where we could get practically unknown, could we lay down petrol and oil every hour, all the things. Definitely no problem today, but in the final months of 1918—1919—we were all in the dark of it when the Commonwealth Government of Australia announced a competition for the first flight from England to Australia, with a prize of £10,000. The journey must be done in thirty days, machines and engines must be British and every Australian. No major spare parts were to be flown en route, and so the machine was sealed by the Secretary of the Royal Aero Club in five places—that is they screwed up every round nut and bolt in, say, the wing section, and sealed the ends of the bits with sealing wax and seal. My brother and I were fortunate in both being experienced pilots with a working knowledge of navigation—what we called navigation then—but I'm afraid laugh to the present-day navigator. And my brother had been back from surveying the only possible air route from the Middle East to India. We brought his two sergeant-mechanics with him from that theatre of war, Sergeants J. McBennet and W. H. Shiers they were.

Mr. Alcock and Mr. Whitten Brown's flight scares the Atlantic ocean. Because they were convinced the Vickers-Vimy Biplane bomber with two Rolls-Royce engines was the ideal machine for the job. Vickers threw the whole of their organization behind us, and the finest factory and flying staff organized us well for us that during the whole flight we never had to wait an hour for supplies. This was of very great importance, of course, because to make it in the time we had to arrive and depart from certain places and any-how-up would have been fatal to our chances. We see, our average speed was only 94 miles per hour. Yes, just 94 miles per hour! I was amazed when Mrs. Roosevelt's pilot said to me the other day, "Why, I don't fly my machine off the ground under 100 miles an hour!" Our speed of 94 miles per hour you can have a good look at the scenery and with a strong tailwind, and as we had all the way to the Persian Gulf, the scenery was almost permanent.

Maps Important.

Maps were another very important matter and for certain sections, particularly beyond India, it was very hard to get hold of what we wanted. We had Admiralty charts, French maps, Dutch maps—well, you could do something with them, but we had a Siamese map in Siamese characters and it looked to us like a mahjong set upside down.

At last all was ready. As we taxied to take off, sun shone on the scene and life had a very cheerful affair. We were really off home to Australia. But conditions at the airfields were perhaps our worst worry, as it turned out. At Pisa we lost a day owing to heavy rain and muddy ground, we took off by putting planks under the wheels, and on we went by Rome, Taranto, Crete and Cairo; anyway what was weather? Hadn't we a good machine, great engines and Australia at the other end? And so on to all stages to Delhi, where we took our second day off for inspections—and for reasons also the R.A.F. about what might be still ahead of us. So far we were doing well—we were already halfway with still half our time in hand. But the real test was coming. We hit a hawk getting off the ground at Calcutta, but luckily only the propeller stood the shock, although it was a very sticky moment. On by Akyab ash over the mountain ranges south of Rangoon in dense cloud—not at all a pleasant trip. Over Siam we ran into rough tropical weather with rain falling in sheets. Being in open cockpits we were exposed to the rain, and our eyes suffered as the rain beat into our faces. That was all our very worst flying days. At the end of it the weather lifted and we reached our next port of call, Singora, not far from where the Japs landed.

Here we got a very unpleasant surprise. We flew round observing the aerodrome closely—you always did in those days if you had any sense because they were very different affairs to the modern airport. Well, at any rate this place appeared to be partly waterlogged and dotted all over with small dark objects. However, needs must and we landed as slowly as possible in what looked to be the best area, and found ourselves running between and over tree-stumps which the makers of the ground apparently had thought unattractive enough. But we had very different views and thumped down, held our breaths and waited, and were exceedingly lucky not to break a tail skid fitting. We worked 36 hours repairing the skid, while enough tree stumps were taken out of the ground to provide a runway. Then Bennett spoke to the Dutes for reasons Arabic and a lot of Australian and after 36 hours he staggered out more dead than alive and so were the men he was dining.

Our next landing, at Singapore, which happened to be on the same course, completed the third stage of our flight and here, during a day's break, we off-loaded everything we could to save weight, and inspected the whole aircraft thoroughly. Nothing was ever done to the machine except by ourselves. No petrol ever went into the tanks that I didn't put in myself. We had diamonds leather in the fillers to keep water and grit out, so of course petrol went in very slowly. We dare not risk some other chap taking out chamois when no one was looking. No, we did absolutely everything ourselves.

Nearly Ended.

But the flight nearly ended at Sourabaya, just the same. I said soft aerodromes were our biggest headache, didn't I? Yes, well, the Dutch had light machines. But our Vimy weighed about four tons light, and when we landed there was a certain forward movement of the ground when we started to think. Then the crowd of people round the airfield rushed towards the machine and their weight split the surface of the ground, the mud welled up and flowed all over the machine, damaging our nearest wing. However, we got out of that one, getting a way off a low follow-through into the German forest. Although it was strictly commanded stores, a platoon before in action, he took over when other officers were shot down.

Mr. Frederick A. Tillson of Windsor, Ont., who attempted to succeed badly at command of the Essex Scottish Regiment, is in action in the Hochwald fighting, making a fearful advance of more than 500 yards over dry trips with three rows of trenches, for seven days, gaining a way for the follow-through into the German forest. Although he was strictly commanded stores, a platoon before in action, he took over when other officers were shot down.

Red Cross Report For Jan. and Feb.

The regular monthly meeting of the executive committee of the Belleville branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society was held on March 13th with Mr. M.F. Duff presiding.

The treasurer, Mr. Keran, reported the following balance of January and for February.

Receipts	$164.97
Bills	1,748.17

A communication from the Ontario Commissioner requested the return of the War Emergency Aid Fund, if not required, was read and referred to the matter.

The president welcomed three new members to the executive, Mrs. Irwin, Mr. Harry Rollins, Mr. Bush.

Mrs. Lazier, convener of Rev. Beauchamp Payne, Mrs. Ketcheson Fenwick, of the War Relief Committee. The use of the Board Room in the C.I.B.C. building was obtained for temporary night shelter and some supplies have been placed there.

Miss Lynch reported sending parcels for civilians to Hungary.

Office liaison work by Mrs. Atkins included advice and information for four special cases.

Mrs. Duff reported that the financial campaign now in progress is proceeding very well and that goods were shipped to the Ontario Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society. These contained 2394 articles made up of 46 leather and Grenville cloth jerkins for the navy; 79 quilts and afghans; 1014 articles of clothing for Russian Relief; 1 bundle of layettes; 1 bundle of socks for the army and air force; 697 for men, 281 for navy, 1 bundle of socks for 101 for Women's Auxiliaries and 22 for Red Cross.

Most of the clothing was for little children four years and under, and for the use of the Ontario Provincial Division. These consisted of boys' and girls' coats, boys' shorts, rompers, boys' and girls' combinations, boys' and girls' jackets, etc.

The different groups are now working on boys' suits (4 years), boys' and girls' overcoats (all weights), girls' dresses and of which the sky very proud. A new quota of 385 articles has been received. This means much cutting out from patterns. The branch is in need of cutters and people be pleased to have anyone who can help apply at the office of telephone 124 where information can be given and time planned for getting their services.

It is a joy to look at the finished things of the different types of work for they show that our sewers and knitters are making the articles in the best possible manner. The knitted goods are particularly well done and we realize the labor that the heavy sweaters, so much in need, are not easy to do.

Mrs. J. C. Fraser, the chairman of the Women's Work Committee in Ontario, is urging the women of Ontario "pick up their bundles and knit as never before" for the needs of service men and women and for bombed civilians thus proven to be a stumbling block. The same applies to clothing particularly for little children for the need of finished comforts is desperate.

Daylight Saving Time Continued

Ottawa, March 18 — (CP)—State Secretary McLarty announced Sunday night that the Government has given consideration to the possibility of reverting to standard time, but has decided that daylight saving time must be continued for the present because of wartime demands for fuel and power, and other factors.

A statement from Mr. McLarty's office said daylight saving time was adopted in 1942 to conserve power and synchronize Canada's time with the war time which was then adopted by the United States for reasons of transportation, and added that those requirements still apply with "equal or even greater force."

"It must be borne in mind at all times that this is primarily a war measure, and we must bear in mind we are still engaged in two wars," the statement continued.

"It is not the intention of the Government to maintain it (daylight time) any longer than the necessities of war demand, but to revert to standard time at the present time would be an acceptance of a fact that is not correct, namely, that the necessities of war are not as great and not as dangerous as they were three years ago."

The statement said that since the introdoction of daylight saving time representations have been made from time to time for a reversion to standard time.

The last representation was made on Feb. 28 by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, which said that daylight saving imposed a hardship on rural residents whose children had long distances to school, and that a "great majority" of farm people had found the regulation a serious handicap and a cause of financial loss."

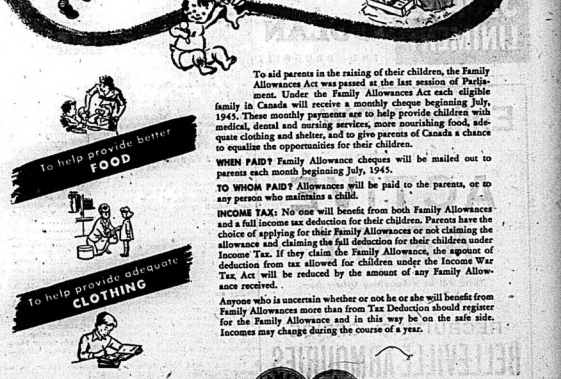
REGISTRATION FORMS WILL BE MAILED SHORTLY FOR

FAMILY ALLOWANCES

which will be paid for

EVERY ELIGIBLE CHILD UNDER 16 in Canada

The payment of these allowances to parents or other persons who are maintaining children will commence in July, 1945, and the registration of children for this purpose is to begin immediately.



To aid parents in the raising of their children, the Family Allowances Act was passed at the last session of Parliament. Under the Family Allowances Act each eligible family in Canada will receive a monthly cheque beginning July, 1945. These monthly payments are to help provide children with medical, dental and nursing services, more nourishing food, adequate clothing and shelter, and so give parents of Canada a chance to equalize the opportunities for their children.

WHEN PAID? Family Allowance cheques will be mailed out to parents each month beginning July, 1945.

TO WHOM PAID? Allowances will be paid to the parents, or to any person who maintains a child.

INCOME TAX: No one will benefit from both Family Allowances and a full income tax deduction for their children. Parents have the choice of applying for their Family Allowance and declaring the Allowance and claiming the full deduction for their children under Income Tax. If they claim the Family Allowance, the amount of deduction from tax allowed for children under the Income War Tax Act will be reduced by the amount of any Family Allowance received.

Anyone who is uncertain whether or not he or she will benefit from Family Allowances more than from Tax Deduction should register for the Family Allowance and in this way be on the safe side. Incomes may change during the course of a year.

THIS MEANS YOUR MUSCLES "NEED A BREATHER"

Muscles make up a good proportion of your body, and muscles work on oxygen. When you work too hard and too long, the oxygen supply gets skimpy. Your muscles cramp and ache, demand a chance to "lay off work". At the first twinge, put Sloan's Liniment on the aching muscles, to help stimulate their blood supply. The new blood carries in extra oxygen; sweeps out old blood-laden, with distressing, fatigue-acids. Don't ignore muscle soreness. Apply Sloan's Liniment for speedier relief.

Lighter Vein.

Silas was becoming very hard of hearing and upon the advice of a friend he consulted a doctor.

Bill—"What did the doctor tell you to do?"

Silas—"He told me I would have to drink distilled or bottled stone dead. I been a drinkin' so much better than that I been a-hearin' that I think I'll just keep on drinkin'."

Open Season.

It's the time of year when the heads of summer sports begin to think of annual meetings and the rejuvenation of their activities in athletic diversion. Among these is the Belleville and District League, whose executive will convene tonight at the call of President Jack Hannah, the principal business to be discussed is the naming of local delegates to the annual meeting of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association in Hamilton on March 30th.

Representation from all six teams composing the league in 1944 will sit in with the league executive tonight in the same local delegates to the provincial conclave. Last year the league was composed of the champion SACO "Marines", Trenton Sequin Juniors, Argyll Light Infantry, C.N.R. and Point Anne. It is doubtful if there will be as many starters in 1945, however.

Harry Rolling, first vice president of the O.A.S.A., announced today he was not certain whether he would allow his name to stand for provincial election another year, but he will attend the Hamilton meeting along with his chief advisor, Harry C. Knott.

Fans will recall the bribing of Brooklyn College basketball players and their ultimate suspension last month, that basketball scandal over a bizarre turn last week when Mayor La Guardia, of New York City, added further complications when he revealed that Larry Pearlstein, one of the former Brooklyn College cagers, wasn't even a student at the college at any time. So we suppose Pearlstein could be referred to as a "phantom performer".

Naturally after Mayor La Guardia's accusations an investigation was setup in the courts and surely enough it was established that "Larry the Phantom" had not been registered nor had he ever attended Brooklyn College. He even fooled his own mother on that score, as Mrs. Pearlstein went to the college president when Pearlstein was expelled only to learn her basketball-playing son never was a bonifide and enrolled scholar.

Now the school heads have expelled Pearlstein, but what we would like to have explained is how a person who never attended a college could be "expelled". (After all you can't take away something you never had.)

Ready For No. 21.

The dean of all active major league umpires, Bill McGowan, is getting ready to start his thirty-first season behind the mask and his twenty-first in the majors as an American League arbiter. He broke into the Big Time in 1925 and worked more than 36 consecutive seasons without missing a game until arthritis put him on the shelf for two days in 1942.

The "iron man of the umpires" has no actual count of the consecutive games in which he worked, but it figures out to be around 2,000; considerably more than the 2,130 record established by the late Lou Gehrig in playing at first base. Beans Reardon of the National comes the closest to McGowan's years in the majors, having been the Big Show one year after Bill.

Remember When.

Fourteen years ago yesterday there was much heart-searching along golf professionals when a dice-motion movie showed that Bobby Jones and Joyce Wethered popular golfers of the day, were guilty of "snorchocker" styles in golf. It soon developed, however, that "snorchocker" golfers had broken most of the rules laid down by professional teachers.

Department of Idle Statistics: One of the most extraordinary records in the National Football League was made on Nov. 28, 1929, when the Chicago Cardinals defeated the Chicago Bears, 40 to 6. It was not the Cards vanquishing the Monsters of the Midway which set the record—although modern-day critics might so believe—but the fact that Ernie Nevers scored all six touchdowns and kicked all four extra points for every marker the Cardinals made.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

The thirteen major league baseball clubs which have started spring training this week have 12 to 32 players in camp and the scouts are larger than on a gathering date last year despite man-power difficulties, a check-up by The Associated Press disclosed last night. New York Giants and Philadelphia Athletics have the largest squads with 32 men in uniform in each camp while Boston Red Sox have only 13 players.

Gunder Haegg, the Swedish Express, made a race of it in the featured mile at the indoor games in the Chicago Stadium Saturday night, leading the field of five for all of the 11 laps to finish second 12 feet behind Jim Rafferty of New York A.C. whose time was 4:13.7.

Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va., maintained a three-stroke lead in the third round of the $10,000 Open golf tournament at Seattle, Wash., yesterday by carding a 69 for a 202 total; 14 shots under par. Harold McSpaden and Byron Nelson fired 68 and 66 respectively to tie for 2nd place.

Mrs. J. L. Sullivan's Hyhuslie yesterday won the $7,000 Grand Prix mile National in a thrilling finish at the Hippodrome track, Montreal City, with jockey Don Meade bringing the Sun Antonio, Tex., horse from fourth position to a victory over Sunspear by a three-fourths-length. The winner paid $3.

The Shamrocks of London, Ont., copped the senior championship of the Ontario Ladies Basketball Association Saturday night at Toronto by posting an Toronto Maitlands 32-30 in a closely-fought struggle. Toronto Carltonettes won the junior honors with a 20-19 win over Stratford while Toronto Oakwoods defeated another Stratford quintette 44-12 to take the provincial juvenile title.

Montreal Georgians defeated Otterburn Saints 46-44 in the first of total point, home-and-home series for the Canadian senior basketball championship at Ottawa Saturday night, the return engagement being scheduled next Saturday at Montreal. The survivors take on the Ottawa Commandos in the next round.

The Women's Inter-city Basketball League finals became deadlocked Saturday at Brantford when the Watrous Lassies defeated the Golden Girls of Hamilton 21-17. The third game will probably be played at Brantford later this week.

WEEKEND STARS

(By The Canadian Press)

Bill Mosienko and Clint Smith, Chicago, who split evenly a total of 12 points in the Black Hawks' two Montreal Canadiens 4-3 Saturday and defeated Detroit Red Wings 5-3 Sunday.

Montreal's Maurice Richard, Tex Blake—Elmer Lach Line, who combined to snatch victory from Boston Bruins in the closing minutes of Sunday's game, scoring three goals in as many minutes.

Goalie Harry Lumley, Detroit, whose sensational play-offing as he handled a total of 53 shots gave Red Wings a 4-2 victory over Toronto Saturday.

Gus Bodnar, New York, whose last-second goal Sunday gave Rangers a 6-5 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs.

Toronto, March 19 — (CP) — Organized mayhem, known to the trade as box lacrosse, is reported to be in a rather unique position on the west coast. Simultaneously, box-la is to receive a shot in the arm and a kick in the pants.

The shot in the arm, if we are to believe Clancy — Vancouver News-Herald! Loranger, will be the reintroduction of Indians to their native game. Reggie Leach played by the Anglo-Saxon "foreigners" is all right, hop big chief Andrew Paul tells Clancy, but the Indian was born with a lacrosse stick in his hand.

"Sozia, Hs America," murmurs Mr. Paul, "should be given back to the Indians."

If the B. C. promoter can garner up a six-Indian squad and attempt to scalp the Salmonbellies, it should make for a banner season. But then there's the so-called boot in the trousers to contend with.

It seems there are interests across the line in Seattle that would like to educate the "Yankee dollar" to swing away from the "rum-and-coke" (with apologies to Tom Paley) and start the wickets spinning on Sunday nights as lacrosse matches.

Of course, that will mean that due to the newer sporting's across the border, Canadian "labor" would be used. That's the rub.

If the Canuck bonla boys play on the Redskin in the U.S., there will follow complaints of injuries. Fatigue from travel, and such like, all of which will be detrimental to the coast loop. Or so they say.

The lure of big chief maxima has its drawbacks.

Boom to Follow:

From Montreal there comes talk that the Forum interests are perking up their ears at the increasing attendance figures for senior basketball. The success of Sir George Williams College-Combines senior title series, drew more than 3,000 persons to the Montreal University gym. The university floor can't hold any more, though others were interested in attending.

For the past decade the court game was glad to draw 200 persons for a championship game, but it looks as though interest is revived in the Canadian metropolis. A lot of credit for the popularity is being given to the college cagers who won the provincial title at the end of their second year in senior company.

BIG SEVEN

(By The Canadian Press)

Bill Mosienko and Clint Smith of Chicago gathered a total of six points each in two weekend Nation-al Hockey League games.

The pair, already tied for ninth spot, moved right up to a fifth place tie with Joe Carveth, Detroit, and Ab Demaine, New York. Toe Blake, Montreal, picked up three points to take sole possession of third place, two points ahead of Bill Cowley, Boston, and give Canadiens' Elmer-Lach-Laurice Richard-Blake combination the three top spots.

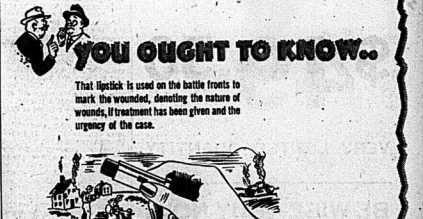
The success of Sir George Williams College-Combines senior title series, drew more than 3,000 persons to the Montreal University gym. The university floor can't hold any more, though others were interested in attending.

For the past decade the court game was glad to draw 200 persons for a championship game, but it looks as though interest is revived in the Canadian metropolis. A lot of credit for the popularity is being given to the college cagers who won the provincial title at the end of their second year in senior company.



Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 61
By HAM GORDON
The Bridge

Today thing about a good rule of bridge playing. We always say it does it. We look for a hand to apply the rule, figuring this is the time for Judgment.

Take a hand in the north with this hand:

♠ Q 8
♥ 10 5 4
♦ K Q 6 3 2
♣ 8 5 4

West south opens with one diamond, they let you grab of north supporting trumps emits you because. Even with more trumps than usual, you may not be able to make in a hurry.

Only each high card and each short card is counted as a trick. So, long supporting trumps do not constitute extra tricks. With enough trumps in your hand, surplus trumps are here duplicate values.

Count your high cards and the hand with three high cards and the two short cards is regular. With three no-trump announced by south's opening, you see ten tricks.

Ten tricks are not enough for game in diamonds. And a jump bid is a signal that you can tricks enough to help make game. So, unless you have any do, you should not jump.

You have to be taken suit. An assist comes before a no-trump bid. You should not jump. So, what does that find you? It means your first response should be a no-jump assist to two diamonds.

Maybe you would prefer to gamble with an immediate hop to five diamonds. So would I. Not because it would be right. But because I have the same urges and desires as you.

We think partner may have an unbeaten trick, or unexpected value. Or that he may pick up an extra trick. Or he may get a favorable lead.

In our hopeful devilishness, abandoned is knowledge of what partner will bid again if he has another trick. And if he has not a second bid, a trick, making a game is too uncertain.

It is partner who must do right. We like to do as we please.

2:06 1-5 at last season's handicap is back.

But he will find more competition, from Jack Finsterwald, Vinnie Richards' Greenlee Stables to Sunday Tarabillas, will be in the running. The famous chestnut won his first start here with Don Meade aboard.

Until the horses are off the Canadian tracks late this spring, all racing reports lead to Maple City.

THIRD PERIOD ASSAULT WINS FOR ST. MICHAEL'S

Defeat Galt Red Wings at Home to Take 2-1 Lead in Series

By The Canadian Press

St. Michaels once more pulled off their third-period rumble-dazzle scoring flourish Saturday night to vanquish Galt Red Wings 4-2 on the latter's ice to take the second game decision in the finals of the junior "A" series of the O.H.A.

The Toronto Collegians slammed a 3-1 margin in the first canto on goals by Thomson and Costello with a single reply from Galt via Bill Adams's stick but Red Wings actually tied up proceedings early in the second period when Mousseau began the only marker of the inning. After a scoreless duel in the third session Galt looked like a winner when Kronychuk hit the twine to pen Red Wings ahead 3-2. Then St. Mikes broke loose with their usual third of period rally.

Only 13 seconds after Galt grabbed the lead Bob Bain knotted the squabble for the students and, at 2:06, Thomson won the battle by converting a pass from Turik. Galt wilted and the visitors ran in four more counters to make victory assurance. Johnny Bluto collecting three of them.

Thomson and Bluto topped the list with three goals apiece and Costello and Paul registered one each. Adamo, Mousseau and Kronychuk were Galt's goal collectors. The teams meet for a third time tonight at Toronto.

By EDDIE LEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Both nights, at Toronto and New York, play-by-play broadcast networks was mentioned as instrumental in the Leaf reverses.

The Wings who looked good against Leafs, blew up in the final 10 minutes against Chicago Black Hawks Sunday and lost 5-3. It was the first Hawk victory in five starts. Yours.

The N.H.L. champion Montreal Canadiens added their National Hockey League mastery to the 4-4 verdict against Hawks at Montreal Saturday and 5-3 decision over Bruins at Boston Sunday. Montreal has 70 both games they came from behind to win.

Lumley a Standout

Sensational goaltending by Harry Lumley coupled with a late third-period goal by Joe Carveth humbled the Leafs Saturday. Only three of 32 shots, 23 of them in the middle session, escaped the young Owen Sound, Ont., net-minder. Steve Woolley of Wings and Babe Pratt of Leafs matched goals in the second period. Fresh Hollett and Nick Metz duplicated in the second.

Carl Liscombe and Bob Davidson had tallied for Detroit and Leafs when Carveth notched his winning goal with four minutes to go.

Leafs started a blazing attack at New York that gave them a 3 - 0 lead in the first half of the third period on goals by Pratt, Mel Hill and Sweeney Schriner. Joe Shack and Hank Goldup had two of them back for Rangers before the session ended.

Schriner scored his second of the night in the second period and Walter Atanas and Fritz Hunt counted for Rangers during the session. Brad Thurler of Rangers and Lorne Carr of Leafs scored early in the third and Grant Warwick counted at 6:02 of the third period.

Two In Ten Minutes

Two goals in the last 10 minutes gave Hawks their triumph against Wings, their first in 19 meetings during the season. Veteran Mush March and rookie Pete Horeck were the marksmen.

Hawks took the lead three times. In the first period Bill Mosienko scored but Joe Carveth evened it up several minutes later. Mosienko put Hawks ahead again early in the second and Clint Smith made it 3-1 a few minutes later. Mud Bruneteau in the second and Syd Howe in the last period accounted for the other Detroit goals.

Bobby Fillion blasted two third-period counters that Hawk goalie Mike Karakas to give Canadiens their Saturday victory. Clint Smith, with two, and Bill Mosienko accounted for the Hawk goals, all in the first period. Tod Sloke and Butch Bouchard were the other Montreal goal producers.

At Boston, a three-goal outburst late in the third resulted in the Montreal victory as Montreal's big line — Maurice Richard, Toe Blake and Elmer Lach — scored in rapid succession. Herb Cain and Dutch Hiller had accounted for goals in the opening session and Jack McGill gave Bruins a 3-1 lead early in the third, Richard's goal was his 50th of the season.

CAPITALS GRAB PLAYOFF SPOT IN W. DIVISION

Will Meet Hershey Bears in First Game of the Play-downs

(By The Canadian Press.)

Indianapolis Capitals grabbed the American Hockey League Western Division's second playoff spot last night by an 8-4 victory over Cleveland Barons, division leaders. Pittsburgh Hornets, who had been tied with Capitals, dropped their game to Cleveland Saturday 12-10.

Capitals will be at home to Hershey Bears Tuesday in the first game of their best-of-seven playoff series.

It was an unfortunate weekend for visitors in the league, all five contests going to the home teams. Bears defeated Buffalo Tigers 9-3 Saturday and bowed to Providence Reds 10-3 Sunday, while Buffalo Bisons downed Flyers 10-5.

Lou Trudel started at Cleveland Saturday, scoring three goals for a season total of 46, two more than the record set two years ago by Harry Frost of Hershey. Hi Proteau, George Agar and Roy Kelly notched up two each for the winners, while Tony Heamsenling and Bob Gracie, doubled for Pittsburgh. The game was set a record in total goals, three more than the previous record of 19.

Hal Johnson and Art Stobel were high scorers for Hershey against St. Louis, with three and two respectively.

At Buffalo, George Pargeter sparked the home-towners in an experimental game played without blue lines, scoring three goals in the first period and two in the third. Paul Mundrick added two for the winners.

Four goals by Pete Lawrick provided the spark that led Indianapolis to victory over Cleveland and assured them their playoff berth. Johnny Mckinnon made it sure with two more.

At Providence, Reds took a 4-3 lead in the first period which Hershey was never able to overcome. Scoot Gagne and Freeman Jack provided three goals each for Reds' winners and Morden Hafner two.

THE SECRET OF THE MARSHBANKS

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

CHAPTER 21

"She told wipe off that pistol some time or other," Cherry reminded him.

"I know she did. Oh, there's a lot that can't be explained," Kelly conceded. "It's very puzzling, of course, even if it's not likely, that when she went downstairs that night she carried between him and someone else who still going on. She knows more than she'll say. I'm sure of that. Anyway, if Fran had done it, she's smart enough to know that, after all, we're not telling everyone, pleading impulse, excitement, accident. Accident!" Kelly interrupted himself to explain, struck with the idea, "it was his gun. He was shoving it to her. It went off in her hands."

"It would've got off in her fist away," Cherry objected. "And if she was going to murder Judson, why didn't she do it before?"

"Because," Kelly said, frowning thoughtful, "something's changed her mind."

"We're nearly home," Cherry said, "and you do promise me, Kelly, you promise me that you'll let me stand by you—you'll not put me out—you'll realize that for only the first time in my life—the only happiness, will be near you, and to comfort you in case?" Cherry pleaded, her eyes brimming again.

"Darling, darling, my darling," he said, "my life is you life now. Here we are!" he finished abruptly, as the car drew up at the Marshbanks doorway. "Now we'll see what this is all about."

He felt her cold fingers gripping his as they went up the steps. Cheerfully, he advised her to go straight upstairs, but she followed him to the library.

There were four officers there now, instead of the usual one or two; Fran was there, too, silent, very pale, tragic-looking, with her white dress a vase-shaped halo.

"I had to tell them, Kelly," she said breathlessly, apologetically, "I'm sorry. I thought for a while that we could hide it. But I had to tell."

"You go upstairs and get into dry things," Kelly said to Cherry. "No use your catching pneumonia."

He sat down at the desk and Cherry reluctantly went away. May was waiting for her in the hall and Cherry, dazed and indignant, the hot bath but descended afterward to the kitchen for tea and toast.

"If you aren't in for flu, I'll miss my guess!" said May.

When she came upstairs with the tray, it was to ask Cherry if she would have her little publication meal in old Mrs. Marshbanks' room. "She don't feel very good and she asked me if you weren't too tired would you come in and see her."

"Well, of course," Cherry said. Feeling weak and dull, she was not only vaguely flattered by the proposal, but she was glad of any company on this dreadful afternoon.

Cherry found her grandmother restless and uneasy. But as Cherry's great relief she seemed disinclined to speak of the affairs of the moment, and Cherry took the cue, and they discussed California's amazing climate and Mrs. Marshbanks's final impressions of it, when they had come to the west a bride half a century before.

The clock struck four. The old woman looked at it, and with a pause, her voice sounded oddly firm and clear in the silence.

"Judson was an honest man," she said, "but he never was fair to his brother, Frederick. Frederick was impulsive, I loved both my sons; it was never true that I loved Judson more. But he needed me more than Judson did. You—you are like him."

Cherry was unable to speak. She felt her throat thicken; tears stung her eyes. The proud, stiff old voice went on.

"I would be very sorry to think that anything I had ever done had hurt you," said Mrs. Marshbanks.

When something surprises you and—and disturbs you, sometimes you act without thinking."

"I don't think it matters much now," Cherry said, with some difficulty. "It might have been unimportant. Nobody knew what was in that envelope."

"It was unfortunate. I suppose," the old woman said reluctantly and proudly, "That my boy indicated—perhaps—to someone else. He would not be crossed."

"I am surprised that you say I'm like him then," Cherry said, with a half-smile, "for it ever a human being was crossed, I have been!"

"You are much stronger than your father," said Mrs. Marshbanks. The girl felt an odd sense of pride. It was something—even on this dreadful terrible day—to have won the respect of her strange and difficult grandmother.

"You can stand what would have broken him," Mrs. Marshbanks presently added. "You know, I suppose, that Judson left you a little property in will? What I have will be yours, too," she went on, unemotionally. "It is not what you might have had, but it is something."

"Thank you," Cherry said simply. There was a tap at the door and Cherry started to it, her heart hammering wildly. It was Kelly.

He looked at her with a grave in manner than she had ever seen him.

"Fran and I are going out with these lads a while," he said, without preamble. "I wanted you to know, See you later."

She caught at him, her eyes frightened. He smiled and was gone.

Mrs. Marshbanks and Cherry sat quietly, saying little. It was a relief to both when Greg came in.

"What's happened?" he inquired. Martin looked like Boris Karloff when he came in."

"Nothing's really happened; at least we don't believe it has," Cherry told him, choosing her words carefully. Then Fran went sort of crazy-today and told them a long story about how she killed Judson Marshbanks."

"What do you know about that?" Greg demanded scornfully. "I've got on her nerves, What'd they do?"

"Well, she and Kelly Coates went out with them — to police headquarters, I suppose."

"Coates, too?"

"Coates said it was on his account."

"Ha!" Greg ejaculated, more scornfully. "I never knew there was anything wrong on there!"

"It was over anyway," the girl stated. "And he and I were going to be married," she added, after a pause.

"It sounded as if you said—you didn't say!" old Mrs. Marshbanks stopped, her midsentence looking keenly at the girl.

"Yes, I planned it only a few days ago," Cherry said dully.

"Fran knows it?"

"Nobody knew it."

"But if that's the case, how could she possibly have quarreled with Jud about him?"

"Oh, any reason why I think she didn't."

"You mean you're to marry Kelly?" the old woman still found it hard to believe.

"I hope so," Cherry answered simply, looking away to hide her filling eyes.

"And how long has this been going on?"

"Ever since I first saw him—for me. He walked into my life" Cherry said, "and he's never walked out.

And I don't care what they say or think, I'm glad I killed him! It's the best look anything that of Mrs. Marshbanks became the severest."

"Well," said the old lady, dryly, "that certainly is one way."

It almost think it would simplify matters if should think I would, at Kelly out of it, at least," Greg said.

"I don't think anything say about his grandmother stated firmly. "His duty I've lived here enough, do, you got him away from Fran, if you can."

"That was all over. They hadn't seen each other for months," Cherry said, suddenly got all worked up about it. She had letters from him that the police found."

"Those letters!" the older woman said, with scorn.

"Letters that are months old. He told one that this morning. But they found them," and now Cherry was saying that she quarreled with the Judge, and suddenly grabbed the revolver and fired it—I—I suppose they'll think they're important!" Cherry supplied.

As Cherry was about to leave old Mrs. Marshbanks, Amy and Count Gogo burst in. Amy was laughing but was controlled by the time the day beamed darkly in her wake.

"Grab, darling." Amy said with her kiss. "We were going through town on our way to Del Monte and we got homesick, and so we're putting off our honeymoon, and we came home to see you! You kiss her, too, Gogo!"

Her grandmother was visibly startled, but she rallied enough to keep the surface unbroken, remarked Amy's self-possessed and accepted Gogo's salute of her hand. Amy explained that they had spent the night at a dude ranch near Sarah, "where Gogo stayed at the same time he was dressed, I have been!" she added cheerfully.

Cherry informed the newcomers that Fran had been asked to go to police headquarters "to explain something," and that Fran had "sort of broken down" earlier in the day, and they were questioning her.

"But why? She doesn't know anything about it!" Amy exclaimed, aghast.

"You kennot possibly know set, de-as," said the count.

These few minutes of explanation and welcome over, Amy glanced at her husband, who seemed a trifle hesitant. The old lady, quite aware that something was in the wind, looked from one to the other quickly.

"The thing is, Gran," Amy burst out, "that yesterday I got a bee-bed some things to go and meet them there was some mail on the hall table, two or three letters for me, and I took them along. We didn't look at them until this morning and then I—we—Gogo felt—both felt, that it might be important, and that we ought to talk to somebody about it."

"If it is for Aimee's comforts, sen it is important to me," Gogo said impressively.

"You say it's business, Amy," old Mrs. Marshbanks said, with a level look at Gogo. "What sort of business?"

"Fly from some lawyer, Gran," Amy explained, "Mr. George Comstock, he says that owing to the sudden death of his father, Judge Comstock, his partner, affairs in the office—I'll read it," Amy interrupted herself.

"Affairs in the office have been in some i-nevitable confusion, owing to the recent sudden death of my father," she read aloud. "My partner, Mr. Judson Marshbanks, I have been attempting to the best of our ability to straighten oft his affairs. We now discover that a document deliverable to you on the occasion of your twenty-first birthday, November seventeenth of this year, has been overlooked, and is now nine days overdue. The envelope, sealed, was deposited here at the request of your father, the late Frederick Archibald Marshbanks, at the time of his death. The accompanying instructions request that we also get in touch with Charlotte Rawlings, whose whereabouts we are now endeavoring to ascertain. Enclosed you of our regret in the unavoidable delay. . . ." Amy stopped short, lowered the hand holding the letter looked blankly at her grandmother. "I'm not sure how does it mean?" she demanded.

"Why I don't know, dear," faltered the old lady.

"Aimee has told me a story toll by whom, but I've never begun anxiously, "Coo'ti have anyone to tell me."

"It it is a duplicate of that letter," Greg said as he had had short, shaking her head.

"It seem to me as I should have known of sis., Aimee," said the count.

"Gogo, why should I tell you a lot of family rubbish that I don't believe myself?" Amy answered sharply. "Up to now—up to this time I've had letters here and there as my proof of anything!"

"There may not be now, Amy!" Even at this tense moment Cherry found in Fran's self she should be the one to console the other girl.

"Well, you can," Fran said, and she looked at Amy with her old, injured voice.

"I am sorry, I'm sure, such my dear truth with what I said," Amy put in such a terrible fashion. Oh, my dear, I'm sorry, grandmother! I'm sorry, Fran! I don't know why did you marry until this minute, Gran, Darling, Now just rush off without telling us—without—"

"But you are not saying sis. Aimee perhaps will be robt of all her property?" the count gave her the count put in, in a tone of stupendous astonishment.

"No, sir!—not saying anything like that," Cherry warned him kindly, her eyes ashing on her head, and back toy. "There's no use worrying to-night until we know. I haven't had any notice about it, and if it concerned me I think they'd have let me know. Don't worry, Amy."

There was a brief silence. The count moved to Amy and touched her on the shoulder.

"It will be very hardt, it will be very strigkes to my friens, my friens sat I have promise to my friens," he said in an annoyed tone, "I fall het to count and stay wis you, sell sem nat my horse—my house, all is fame." His expression took swept the circle; he spread his hands open, appealing for sympathy.

"TIRED" ALL THE TIME

She felt miserable—draggy—low in vitality—never in spirits. Of course it hadn't thought of her kidneys, until a friend suggested Dodd's Kidney Pills. At once Dodd's began to help. Soon she felt "tops" again! Today she says her backaches, nervousness and other signs of faulty kidneys disappeared.

This Nova Scotia seaman may well smile as he struggles back to his ship, laden down with Red Cross woollen goods. These are cold days ahead but the knitting needles of Canadian women have assured him and his shipmates that the whole may be warm. Many sailors' comforts have reached destinations such as this. In this particular case the bundles are bound for the Canadian frigate H.M.C.S. "Grou," in Londonderry, Northern Ireland.

London, March 18—(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill, more travelled statesman of the war, has travelled some 150,000 miles in his journeying to further United Nations planning efforts for war and peace.

He has met President Roosevelt nine times and Marshal Stalin four, conferred with Gen de Gaulle in France and President Chiang Kai-Shek at Cairo. He has consferred here or overseas with the government heads of the British Commonwealth, all the European Allies, President Ismet Inonu of Turkey, Premier Nahas Pasha of Egypt and Premier Ali Sohehl of Persia.

He has crossed the Atlantic ten times, visited the United States five times, and stopped briefly in Canada, Russia, Persia, Egypt, Morocco, Turkey, Cyprus, Tripoli, Algiers, Malta, Italy, France, Greece and Gibraltar.

The Women's Liberal Federation, meeting in London, has issued a demand that the housing situation be treated as a national emergency, that sweeping powers be used to obtain all the land, materials and labor needed to house the people, and that prices be strictly controlled.

The women passed a resolution calling for:

1. Equal partnership for women in reconstruction work; 2. Equal pay for equal work; 3. Full development of social services to afford full and part-time work for women; 4. Earliest possible release for women wanting to become nurses and teachers.

Chit-Chat: The Tory Reform Group, comprising Conservative members of parliament, changes its chairman annually and this year's chief is Capt. Peter Thorneycroft, who entered the House seven years ago after a Stafford by-election. He is joint-author of the T.R.G. plan for the coal industry. . . Sir William Jowitt, Conservative from Clitheroe, is No. 1 film expert of the Commons. Recently he showed six of his private party his own films of Canada's war effort, acting as his own commentator.

Election Paragraphs: Capt. Harold Balfour, Undersecretary for Air before his appointment as minister resident in West Africa, has decided not to stand again for Thanet at the general election. He visited Canada several times during the war in connection with the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. . .

Home Secretary Herbert Morrison, Labor M.P. for South Hackney, is going to contest East Lewisham, opposing Sir Ashelton Pownall, who has been his Conservative member since 1918. "I have offered myself as a candidate for East Lewisham because I like to conquer new political territory and because I believe it can be won for Labor," he said.

HOUSING SHORTAGE ACUTE

Toronto, March 18 — (CP) — The housing shortage in Toronto now is more acute than at any time since the war began, Fred Dearlove, chief housing officer, said yesterday. Legal notices have been served on 2,806 families to vacate by May 1 and "we have need up the prospective accommodation we had a year ago . . . and there is literally nothing in prospect."

FLATLY REJECTED

Paris, March 19 — (AP) — Some Paris papers yesterday published unverified dispatches, datelined Washington, outlining terms of an armistice request which they said German Marshal Karl Gerd Von Rundstedt was reported to have made to the Western Allies and which they said had been flatly rejected. The reports are without any allied confirmation.

Parliamentarians Easily Defeated By the Newsmen

Toronto, March 18 (CP)—It was the first, word of the first round of the spelling bee between the Toronto Men's Press Club and the Parliamentarians. Premier George Drew stepped confidently to the microphone.

"Stop," was the word popped at him.

"S-E-V-O-R-Y" spelled the Premier. "That's wrong," said Jack Cooke, master of ceremonies for the contest broadcast last Friday night over Toronto station CKEY direct from the club rooms.

It was an inauspicious start for the Parliamentarians who never caught up with the newspapermen. The final result: Press, 120; Parliamentarians, 110. The typewriter pounders were only 10 points short of a perfect score.

The team:

Parliamentarians: Premier Drew; R. B. Hall, Ontario leader of the C.O.F. Party; Major Alex Lewis, Clerk of the Legislature; Mayor Robert Saunders of Toronto.

Press: W. E. Elliott, Toronto Evening Telegram; Robert Nielsen, The Canadian-Press; N. J. (Tip) O'Neail, Toronto Daily Star; Corry Reding, Toronto Globe and Mail. Spell Eight Words Each.

Each contestant was called on to spell eight words during the contest and five points were scored for each word spelled correctly. Two contestants had perfect scores Nielsen and O'Neail—through the eight rounds.

Mr. Jolliffe missed on one word. He misread his letters on "kvretsbrate," but let the Parliamentarian, with a snort of joy.

Mayor Saunders, completing syllables with the crowded club rooms echoed with laughter, finished with 30 points, and Mal Lewis, beset with a combination of vowels, compiled only 15 points.

Newspapermen were stopped through their words and missed only on "Sevory," Reding's downfall, and "Chateography," which tripped Elliott.

Drew Had Two Misspns.

Premier Drew's second misque was "peripheraia." A bit baffled, the Premier came up with "ri" in the middle of an "eou" ending. Mayor Saunders flopped on "crustacean" and "Zoodid."

But then, were some nifties that were spelled correctly. Mr. Jolliffe came through with the tricky "Rhodelia." Nielsen correctly dissected "dedicate;" O'Neail didn't bat an eye at "fiduciary" and "lascivious." Premier Drew waded neatly through "estatary" and "palestie," and Reding rattled off "mucocuse."

Off and on the record—the ninth round, not reached, contained the word "mnemonics."

Individual total scores of a possible 40, five points for each word spelled correctly.

Parliamentarians: Drew, 30; Jolliffe, 30; Lewis, 15; Saunders, 30.

Press: Elliot, 35; Nielsen, 40; O'Neail, 40; Reding, 35.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself and ma was thinking, saying, William, I know that platinum just at present is very scarce and you cant be really lost beyond recall. I mean it must be in some unexpected spot either right here in this house or in one of our friends houses. I believe I'll pay a visit to Madam Sesro and see if she can locate it for me, although I dont know as I have no faith in people with scralled skyrick powers, she said.

You wrong me, my dear, pop said. When I was a young fellow I had my future read by an expert, and he certainly hit it off to a t, he said, and ma said, Why William you never told me about that.

I'll tell you now, pop said. It happened at the state fair. I was taking in the sites with my friend Ben Mates, and we came to a big sign inviting people to have their future read by a certain Doctor Merleio. It seems this Merleio chap was a combination hipnotist, star gazer and mind reader. Well, neither Ben nor I had the slightest nolledge of our own future outside of the fact that we had a date to give a bowling lesson to a couple of serious blondes that evening, and a half a dollar wouldn't quite break us, so we decided to take a chance, pop said, and ma said, My what did he tell you?

He told me I'd take up dog raising, and by golliss in the next few years I raised my dogs plently and put them down again struggling to sell my first insurance policies, and he was just as accurate with my friend Mates, pop said. He told Ben he was cut out to be an ambassador and would enter the diplomatic service, and sure enough Ben Mates is now making nitiest shirts and sweaters for all the crowned heads of Main Street, pop said, and ma said, Oh, I might've known. It would be some such unfounded rhamaroll, and I'm going to see Madam Sesro just a same regardless.

Which she probably will.

Hungarian Drive Within 12 Miles Of Komarom

Trapped Nazis Open Dikes Southwest of Koenigsberg

By RICHARD KASISCHKE
London, March 20 — (AP) — The German High Command said today that Russian troops launching a renewed offensive in Hungary have smashed to within less than 12 miles of Komarom, on the Danube north-west of Budapest.

Berlin broadcasts said the Red Army also had thrust out in huge drive to the German Upper Silesia, capturing Neustadt.

Moscow dispatches, silent concerning both these fronts, reported Germans trapped in a dwindling pocket on the Baltic coast southwest of Koenigsberg had opened coastal dikes, flooding the Lowlands in efforts to halt a Soviet extermination push.

The German High Command declared the 3rd Ukrainian Army leading out northwest of Budapest had carried beyond Tata, 12 miles from Komarom, German stronghold on the Danube's south bank at the Hungarian-Slovakian frontier. Tata marches 24 air miles northwest of Budapest, and 84 miles from Vienna.

Withdraw Across Rhine

The German command also said Germans had withdrawn across the Rhine River on the Hungarian-Yugoslav frontier farther south, but did not specify the location. The Drava runs along the southwestern border of Hungary.

Neustadt is 25 miles west of the Oder River and the three are the Czechoslovak frontier. Berlin said the Russians were attacking along an 80-mile front in the effort to overrun remaining German factories in Upper Silesia.

The German pocket southwest of Koenigsberg now had been shaved to little more than 30 miles wide—about 18 long and seven from the sea at its deepest point. The Germans within the end three miles respectively of Brunsberg and Heiligenbeil, the enemy's last two major towns.

Open Dikes

A Red Star dispatch said the Germans opened dikes of the Frische Haff (Lagoon), flooding an inland basin below sea level where refugees "hitherto" Soviet are unable to put up an organized resistance and many are drowning. A swift thrust guns and fleeing."

Both Brunsberg and Heiligenbeil, 25 and 18 miles south of Koenigsberg, were within easy range of Russian guns and Red Army gains of up to three miles along a 35-mile front. The village of Mehlsack, one mile south, fell in the closest Russian approach to Brunsberg.

The advancing Russians, who seized more than thirty towns and villages and 2,138 prisoners yesterday attacked within miles of Heiligenbeil and within the same distance of the last highway to Brunsberg, Seibelt and Braunsberg by capturing Kirschnen, 10 miles southeast, approaches of the latter enemy stronghold.

Advance Three Miles.

Other 3rd White Russian army elements, already over enemy Koenigsberg-Pillau three miles down the coast at Pr'Eich's Haff (Lagoon), cutting the enemy pocket to 18 miles in length. It is no more than seven miles from the sea at its deepest.

By German account, the new Russian drive in Germany's extreme southeast was another over an 80-miles front between Grottkau, 31 miles southeast of Neisse in Silesia, and the Oder river north of the German-Czechoslovak frontier junction.

Goering Regarded Physically And Mentally Finished

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
London, March 20 — (AP)—A German informant told me today that Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering was regarded by his own physician as physically and mentally finished.

The informant, whom I have known for years, said he spoke with the doctor of the ponderous No. 2 man German air force shortly before Cologne fell to the Allies and was advised that Goering was obsessed by two fears.

"First," he said, "Goering fears that he may have to part with his collection of Jewish and precious stones and second that he may be compelled to disgorge priceless paintings that he 'acquired' since becoming Germany's second man. These fears make him sick most of the time.

"Goering now spends most of the time in bed worrying over the future especially over the defeat he prived of the jewels and paintings. He doesn't even visit his 12 other estates and castles, but he remains there in his Hill near Berlin. On one occasion his physician had to sit at his bed for six hours just to calm him."

HONSHU'S INLAND SEAS PENETRATED BY CARRIER FORCE

For Third Straight Day Jap Imperial Fleet Challenged to Come Out for Battle

Guam, March 20 — (AP)—Vice-Admiral Mitscher's powerful carrier force was reported battling Japan today — a third straight day—defying the Imperial fleet to come out for battle and giving the lie to enemy claims that five of Mitscher's capital ships were sunk and one damaged.

Admiral Nimitz announced briefly that carrier pilots moved northward Monday to loose bombs and rockets against ship-building Kobe and a naval naval base, Kure, on the home island of Honshu. Sunday, carrier planes sent probably 2,500 tons or bombs surging down upon Kyushu and Shikoku, industrially-vital islands at-the southern end of the Empire.

Enemy attacks are still continuing," Tokyo flashed in an English-language broadcast to the United States today. "Our defense did not state whether the raid was on Honshu or whether the bombers had returned against Kyushu.

Sinkings of Ships

The enemy radio said the force comprised a troops of ships, including 15 carriers,' and was about 300 miles east of Shikoku when the first sighted Sunday. It claimed 66 U. S. planes were shot down against 8 lost, 27 damaged.

If Mitscher is continuing his attack, the total bombing of Sunday and explosive bombs and rockets fired in the Empire in three days would choked 7,000 tons. Ships dropped 2,500 tons of incendiaries on Nagoya Monday in a smash at jack on that industrial city. Carrier planes hurled tons of greater weight as 1,400 of them roared over Kyushu and Shikoku Sunday and Monday and Kure Monday.

Japanese shipping in the inland sea and at Kobe harbor and ship-building and ship repair yards, already severed by Superfortress mining, were prime targets of Monday's blows.

RELEASE CIVILIANS

Meat Rationing Depends On Export Requirements

Ottawa, March 20 — (CP) — Whether meat rationing will be reimposed in Canada, will depend on the extent to which it is considered desirable to restrict domestic consumption in order that needs abroad may be met, Agriculture Minister Gardiner told the House of Commons today.

Canada, produces more meat than it requires for her own domestic requirements, and any surplus produced is being exported.

Any restrictions placed on Canada's domestic supplies, should such steps be decided upon, will be imposed purely to supply the needs of the United Kingdom and liberated areas. It was understood the combined food board in Washington had adopted the view the Dominion should increase her overseas meat shipments.

Action of the United States in cutting civilian meat supplies by 2 per cent and effecting a heavy reduction in U. S. lend-lease supplies of meat to Britain, announced at Washington Sunday, is not expected to have any immediate effect in Canada. Agriculture Department officials said they considered the likelihood of a resumption of meat rationing because shipping space was still short.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner said it was unnecessary for United Kingdom authorities to ask Canada to increase meat exports as the extra products because they already have indicating they will secure whatever quantities are available above the amounts contracted for. He had no comment on the possibility of a reimposition of meat rationing.

There is "no change" in Canada's meat supply situation, the Agriculture Minister added when asked by the Ottawa Journal if the claim by the United States of shipments to Britain under-the-lease-lend arrangement might result in a shortage of meat for sale in Canada to help cover the overseas deficiency.

Canada had contracted this year to ship to Britain 400 million pounds of pork products and 80 million pounds of beef, the same as was sent in 1944.

The Canadian supply situation, he said, is entirely satisfactory. It was such that, if Britain required it, an additional 200 million pounds of meat could be shipped this year.

Under contract last year to supply Britain with 400 million pounds of pork products, Canada shipped 700 million pounds, and, under a contract arrangement for 80 million pounds, 100 million were sent.

"We can do the same again this year," said an Agriculture Department official. "We know we are able to lift rationing from the American market."

For the time being, it was understood, there is little likelihood of rationing being imposed, as Canada not only can fill the overseas contracts, but can ship additional millions of pounds.

AIR POUNDINGS COST GERMANS 5,000 VEHICLES

Hammering Enemy Withdrawals And Equipment in All Sectors of Front

London, March 20 — (CP)—Allied planes ranged the skies over the western front today, hammering at enemy withdrawals of troops and equipment, while the Berlin radio indicated that heavy fighting were smashing at Germany from both England and Italy.

British and United States aircraft continued the pounding of battle sectors which cost the Germans close to 3,000 vehicles yesterday.

The R.A.F. made its 20th consecutive raid on Berlin last night, the first such contract attempted shortly before dawn instead of about midnight. Other night bombers attacked the Ruhr communications targets from the Ruhr to Hannover and Hamm.

2,000 Over Germany

Approximately 2,000 Allied planes swarmed over Germany yesterday in the greatest mass sweeps this year. The Tactical air fleets hurled their heavy day since the trapping of the enemy in the Falaise-Argentan pocket.

The U. S. 9th Air Force flew more than 2,300 sorties against rail, motor and boatdrawn traffic from the Ruhr to the Saar valley. Medium bombers claimed 4,320 vehicles of all types destroyed or temporarily knocked out, and rail lines cut in 30 places.

The 9th reported the loss of 10 planes in the day's operations.

"The British 2nd Tactical Air Force flew 1,000 sorties, losing seven aircraft. Railways were cut in 80 places and a number of transport dropped in the Cologne-Bonn-Coblenz sector, the Air Ministry announced.

The Allies destroyed 67 German planes yesterday, 47 in aerial combat and 20 on the ground.

Jet Interference

Little interference was offered by the Luftwaffe except in the area of close-support operations, but they tried hard to get at 1,200 American bombers which raided fetjolane bases and war factories in southern Germany.

The U. S. 8th Air Force fighters escorting the bombers shot down 28 German fighters and lost 16 in the day's dogfights.

British medium bombers concentrated on assaulting what appeared to be a German attempt to move supplies from the Arnhem area to the front opposite the 21st Army Group in the north. Fighters and the marshalling yards at Dulmen and Coesfeld crowded into a surround of transport.

Munich Yards Hit

United States bombers operating from Italy yesterday hurled 2,000 tons of bombs on the railway centres at Muhldorf and Landshut marshalling yards east of Munich.

BRITISH CAPTURE FORT DUFFERIN IN MANDALAY

Refugees Imprisoned in Fort Course Out and Japanese Flee

Mandalay, March 20. (Reuters)—Fort Dufferin, stronghold in the centre of Mandalay, which many European refugees have been holding out for some days, has been captured.

Heavy intense bombing by medium bombers this morning refugees imprisoned in the fort came out, hoisted a white flag and Union Jack, flying over it. They said that the Japanese defenders had cleared out of the fort.

The 19th Indian and Indian troops of the Indian 19th Corps broke into Mandalay. The Japanese were driven into the moated fortress which occupied one square mile in the centre of the city, and which was the last enemy stronghold.

Mandalay was being left behind as the 20th Indian Division which swept south and east across the main Mandalay-Meiktila road, 30 miles away at Singaingonyo, 22 miles south of the city, pushed eastward against light opposition.

Columns were striking in all directions from Mandalay, to the south of Mandalay

Meanwhile the British and Division pushing northeast from Ava occupied Amarapura, six miles south of Sagaing.

West of Irrawaddy in the Sagaing area, Japanese resistance has ceased.

Sharp fighting continues in the Myinmu sector, where Japanese troops are fighting in the southern half of the town.

In the northern combat area concentrations of Japanese troops of the 28th British Division entered Mogok, 65 miles west of Mandalay, yesterday and the 36th Division advances continued mopping up operations round Singaw.

Butter Ration Up April 1 to 7 Ozs. Per Week

Ottawa, March 20 (CP). — The Canadian butter ration will be increased from six to seven ounces weekly beginning April 1, restoring a one-ounce reduction — put into effect Jan. 1 because of inadequate stocks, the Prices Board announced Monday night.

The announcement quoted K. H. Kyle, Commissioner of Dairy Products, as saying that the reducing during the winter months, imposed to ensure that supplies would last until spring, has resulted in the elimination of the shortage, and the increased allowance is being made possible by a better policy of supplying the ration to available supplies.

The ration period, which was 104, originally scheduled for May 3, will be advanced to April 26, making one four-week period each Thursday during April. Validity dates of subsequent coupons will be announced later.

Under the present butter rationing plan, butter coupons have no expiry date, and need not be used until the butter is purchased.

The Prices Board has made no changes in the maximum prices of butter ration—five of them with the increase butter rationing was introduced in 1942 on a basis of eight ounces per person per week.

Canadian Infantry Carried Into Battle Behind Thick Steel Wall

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army in Germany, March 20 — (CP)— Ramshackle buses have been transformed into battle taxis to carry Canadian infantry forward over open ground under shell, mortar and machine-gun fire. Unquestionably the biggest single factor backed by their protection.

The decision to use the Ramsa as troop-carriers developed from a scheme last August by Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds, 2nd Canadian Corps commander, during the battle for the Falaise gap road. Faced with the problem of getting infantry through the heavy fire of a defence line south of Caen, he obtained some Ramsas and, with armour, installed "Priests" and stripped them down into armored carriers They worked well.

But the Priests were required in the Rhineland battle, and General Simonds had to look for an alternative, thinking on the lines of placing Ramsa standing idle in ordnance depots in Britain.

So the Ordnance Corps went to work and the Canadian regiment of armoured personnel carriers was formed. The British army also has a number of Ramsas and used it in the Rhineland battle.

SNOW PROTECTS APPLES ON GROUND

Indicative of the value of a heavy fall of snow as a winter protector for orchards, the Intelligencer was observed in Prince Edward county this week where apples fallen to the ground during spale picking operations last week were found to be protected from the frost throughout the winter.

Mr. Clarence Vanclief of Centre district on Monday was walking through the orchard and picked up apples from the ground which had remained in the open all winter. The winter's heavy covering of snow had proven an ideal cold storage as the apples were in a splendid state of preservation and without sign of frost effects. To substantiate the story a few of the apples were brought to the office of the Ontario Intelligencer.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Pleased With Tribute To Mr. J. O. Herity

37 Fourth Ave.,
Ottawa, March 18 th

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer

I was pleased to note in your paper of the 10th instant that recognition had been given by the citizens of Belleville to the esteemed friend of mine in the person of Mr. J. O. Herity.

As I read the account in your paper I felt that Belleville then placed the award on the battle dress of Mr. Herity's many years of service. I found his friendship, as solicitor, counsel, or advice at any and all times unstinted.

On Friday evening I attended the banquet in the Hotel Quinte tendered by the Rotary Club, the distinguished cleric told the clubmen that the world thinking, mass responsibility and mass production of ideas that followed the end of the last war must be replaced by individual effort. "We are not to be spoon-fed to a certain degree, Milk is for babies. When we come to manhood we must learn to stand on our own." Mr. Ash's splendid address to the Rotary Club, the distinguished cleric told the clubmen that the world thinking, mass responsibility and mass production of ideas that followed the end of the last war must be replaced by individual effort. "We are not to be spoon-fed to a certain degree. Milk is for babies. When we come to manhood we must learn to stand on our own." Mr. Ash's splendid address to the Rotary Club,

In a tribute to Rotary, Bishop Lyons said: "The greatest educational group it has been striving to see through the confusion of the world's thinking, mass responsibility to help each other to help himself. Rotary, he said, was founded on the principle of service and it will be something towards the peace and security of the world for posterity."

Danger in Security.

But, he warned, there may be danger from security in the word security. "I don't believe we have to have peace and security until we have a new world that is thinking differently, see differently trying to envisage a new world that is different from the old. We cannot go back to the old.

The clash of physical forces in the war was expressed by somebody, Bishop Lyons said, of ideals, Bishop Lyons said. On one side Nazism, Fascism, totalitarianism is striving to impose its conception of ideals.

"What are we doing towards the support and maintenance of these ideals? We are not only at war, we are worth fighting for, surely they are worth living for. It will not be easy to maintain them. It will take a great deal of moral courage, effort and sacrifice."

Wonderful Strides.

Science has made every war more destructive, he said, "and we shudder to think what the war 20 years from now would hold in store. Science used in warfare had been turned to constructive purposes in the world we would have had today. Mr. Herity's address was very fine and put the best in life by the way of constructive thinking and how to prevent our children and grandchildren from getting through those things that our generation have suffered."

This world must have a different spirit if we are to get the kind of future in which we can live in peace and security, these can only come from an idealism that is derived from without and from above. The highly idealism inspired by Him, Who said, "Love ye one another and nations."

Much Equipment Destroyed When Drivehouse Burns

Stirling (Special)—Fire of unknown origin completely destroyed a large drivehouse and its contents belong to Mr. Wilbert Telford, a concession of Rawdon farmer early this morning.

The loss was unestimated. Included in the list of items destroyed were two buggies, two cutters, two automobiles, implements, tools, and other equipment.

The Richardson family was awakened shortly after four o'clock by the crackling of flames and a red glow shining through their bedroom window. The drivehouse was situated approximately twenty feet from the Richardson residence and rain and favorable wind veered the flames away from the house.

The building was not wired for electricity and the owners at a loss to understand the cause of the blaze. The loss was partially covered by insurance.

Kinsmen Entertain Members' Junior Hockey Team

Members of the Belleville "Senators" Junior Hockey club, their trainers and executive officials were feted by the Kinsmen club of Belleville at a men Club, when they were guests at the service club bi-monthly meeting. The boys' efforts in winning the district league were lauded by Kinsman Ken Hollway, who made a gift of the Hockey Club the Kinsmen's trophy, emblematic of the proprietarily framed pictures of the championship.

Special guest of the night was Ted Kinsman Hollway, member of the Kinsmen club recently returned after four years overseas. Speaking briefly, Kinsman Hollway expressed appreciation of the boys overseas for the splendid cooperation offered in sending regular shipments of cigarettes to the boys in the services.

"Everyone overseas has a good word for the work being done by the Kinsmen," said Ted Kinsman Hollway. "The boys really appreciate what is done and they never even if they do not write back."

Coach Introduces Team.

Coach "Doots" Holway introduced members of the hockey club to the Kinsmen, members and also presented awards to the players. The welcoming the guests Kin Cleo Colling expressed the thought that the eighth club, the called "Junior Night" as it was the first time in Belleville history that members of one family had been present at a Kinsmen meeting. Mr. Aubrey Holway, father of "Doots" and his grandson William, defence player on the local junior team, were present the meeting.

Two other special guests at the meeting were Flying Officer Dick Kinsman, Kinsman Hollway overseas duty, and Seaman Jack Seamark, former member of the Junky hockey club.

President Presides.

President Harry Rollins presided over the meeting, and with the assistance of Kin "Bollet" Lloyd Hollway handled the boys, relieving members of much spare change for their interjections. Ernie Dolsonberg and Gordon Duff acted as song leaders with Phil Huddleston at the piano. Highlighting the entertainment was the presence of Jimmy Ellett who in his customary professional style presented an Irish impersonation as he gave several comet solo numbers.

Sports Officer Heard.

Guest speaker for the evening Flight Lieut. "Jimmy" McCue, sports officer at Mountain View Air Station who was introduced by Kin Jim Ferguson. Appreciation of the club was expressed by Kin Bill Smith.

Amusing incidents from various sports and games was the topic chosen by Flt. Lt. McCue for his talk to club members and to the boys of the local hockey club. Funny incidents, which had cropped up in baseball, hockey, golf and rugby were related in realistic style by the speaker.

However, ending with a note of seriousness, Flt. Lt. McCue spoke directly to the junior hockey club, out the importance of clean living. "In playing the game of hockey, in life, you must be able to take it and hand it out," he said. "But you've got to learn to take it first."

He stressed the fact a player was to play the best he must learn to live right. He advised smoking only in moderation, total abstinence from liquor and regular hours.

Turning to Kinsmen, the speaker referred to the boys now overseas, who are also "Kinsmen at heart" of all. "These boys are now beginning to come back to us and with some they will remember. We must play ball with them," he concluded.

Must Replace Mass Thinking by Individual Effort

"I honestly believe that the time has come when man can make the greatest contribution to his fellow man, the community, to nations and the world by living for the ideals that men overseas are dying for," was the statement of Rev. D.D., Lord Bishop of the Anglican Diocese of Ontario, declared here in an address to Rotarians at the Hotel Quinte Monday night.

In a tribute to Rotary, Bishop Lyons said: "The greatest educational group it has been striving to see through the confusion of the world's thinking, mass responsibility to help each other to help himself. Rotary, he said, was founded on the principle of service and it will be something towards the peace and security of the world for posterity."

Danger in Security.

But, he warned, there may be danger from security in the word security. "I don't believe we have to have peace and security until we have a new world that is thinking differently, see differently trying to envisage a new world that is different from the old. We cannot go back to the old.

The clash of physical forces in the war was expressed by somebody, Bishop Lyons said, of ideals, Bishop Lyons said. On one side Nazism, Fascism, totalitarianism is striving to impose its conception of ideals.

"What are we doing towards the support and maintenance of these ideals? We are not only at war, we are worth fighting for, surely they are worth living for. It will not be easy to maintain them. It will take a great deal of moral courage, effort and sacrifice."

Wonderful Strides.

Ilsley Announces That Estimates to be Passed Total $2,432,185,976

By RODNEY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 20. (CP) — The Commons had before it today the program of business it hopes to accomplish before the life of parliament expires June 26, and one of the first things on tap was a debate on the post-war policies it should play in a world security organization. Prime Minister King made certain peace in all lands and to keep it.

Shortly after the 19th Parliament assembled yesterday for its sixth session, Government House Leader Mackenzie" King announced that he would move tomorrow afternoon on a resolution that called on parliament to put on record in favor of the "purposes and principles" to be submitted to the San Francisco Conference April 25.

Shortest Speech on Record.

The debate was forecast in the 325-word speech from the throne, the shortest on record—read to both houses of parliament by Governor-General, the Earl of Athlone.

Finance Minister Ilsley disclosed that the total of $2,432,185,976 in estimates would be sought. They include $2,000,000,000 to cover war costs for the fiscal year beginning April 1 and a regular service budget of $432,185,976 supplementary estimates for the year ending March 31, 1946, and the regular civil estimates for the coming year which total $1,023,621,597.

He also announced that the government will ask the House to vote $300,000,000 of the war appropriations, which are $300,000,000 less than the amount voted for the current year due to expenditures incidental to the war which will be charged to the war appropriations which starts July-1.

Defence Estimates.

Mr. Ilsley said that because of the little time at the disposal of the House before the Easter recess the international and financial business of the session would be given priority. Speech debate. This was agreed to by Opposition Leader Drew, Progressive Conservative House Leader, and Hon. C. G. Power, Quebec Conservative House Leader, and Hon. H. R. Hanson, QC—York Sunbury, expressed hope that the estimates should be voted until the government's program was put into effect and the social Credit parties and ten each.

Case Introduced.

The newest of the Progressive Conservative — Grenfield Case—was introduced in the Commons when proceedings got under way. Mr. Case, who was re-elected as a member in the Grey North by-election of 1944, succeeding Hon. Duncan Marshall McEachgahn and Air Vice Marshal A. A. Gosling, C.B., C.B.E., candidate.

The minimum of formality that marked the opening was evidenced also in the reading of the speech and seconder of the address in reply to the speech from the throne.

The mover, Maj. J. A. Johnston (L-Lethbridge), was one of four persons overseas in the present war spoke in the short history of the House. The seconder, Maj. A. J. Lapointe (L-Kamouraska), is a veteran of this war and of the First World War, made a few brief remarks and then asked that the address be adopted.

As previously agreed to there was adjournment until at two specified date.

FULL-TIME TYPE CARE OF ELDERLY ILL EMPHASIZED

Miss Gordon Tells of Work of V.O.N. During Month of March

The March meeting of the Victorian Order of Nurses was held in the Chamber of Commerce on Monday evening with Mr. Norman Edwards, K.C., president, in the chair. Routine business was discussed.

Present for the meeting was Miss Audrey Jones, a graduate of the Brandon General Hospital who is spending a month with the V.O.N. in Belleville as part of her post-graduate course in Public Health Nursing.

Miss Ethel Gordon, in her report, spoke of Miss Jones and her work, a very interesting piece of pioneering Public Health work in rural Manitoba. "During the month of February," she said, "the nursing work progressed along with 430 calls made. The list of chronic ills really ill has been exceptionally heavy. More than one quarter of the visits were made to this type of patient last month. Children's work continued by saying that the need is full of activity. Many of the cares for elderly people when they become ill. "I am convinced," she said, "that many of the immunizations carried on by Belleville who sometimes need nursing care and are not getting it."

"Visits to mothers and new babies home from the hospital continue to form a framework of the service. To the end of February this year forty new babies and pre-school children registered at the Well Baby Conference. Monitoring of the clinic activities, Dr. Cronk started the month of inoculation against smallpox March 15th. For the first time the Doctor is giving at the clinic the combined doses of whooping cough vaccine and diphtheria.

2,000 Now Idle In Algoma Mill

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., March 20 (CP)—Two thousand men are idle as the result of a strike of 30 narrow-gauge teamsters for the same wage rates as those paid to the company's standard-gauge brakemen.

Departments practically closed by the strike, now going into its fourth day, are the rail mill, finishing mill, 35-inch mill, 28-inch mill, 32-inch mill, 44-inch mill and the open hearth where 12 furnaces are closed. Lapham, who will have as his guests the delegates of the United Security Conference in April, today accepted an offer of a bullet-proof limousine for use of the conferees. Predicts Farmers Will Have Best Crop in Years

Notwithstanding the fact that the current spring-like weather being experienced is entirely unseasonable from the standpoint of all residents, an exceptionally warm March is nothing new, according to Mr. George Britton, College Street, one of Belleville's first resident lovers of flowers.

And to substantiate his claim that March weather like the present has been experienced before in March Mr. Britton recalls that he has been seeding-onions an inch high growing in his garden before the end of March. It's all just a matter of remembering, he said.

And another did the heavy snowfall of last November 30th establish a precedent according to this city nature lover who half lived close to the soil during all his 86 years. At a boy he remembers drawing cordwood from Thurlow to Belleville during October, while on the other end of the winter he recalls when a heavy snowfall necessitated a sleigh to bring out their snowplows on April 1st.

As a weather prognosticator and practical farmer Mr. Britton claims the British claiming he is seldom wrong. Appreciative of the fact that the result of the early snow no frost had entered the ground during the past winter, Mr. Britton predicted no flood in Belleville this spring.

Mr. Britton predicts that the syrup season will be brief, but that district farmers will have the best crop in years.

State Socialism Attacked By Bert Trestrail

"Unless business men, and women and progressive labor leaders combine to tell the people the plain truth about State Socialism, the votes of hundreds of thousands of Canadians in the forthcoming Federal election will be based on prejudice, ignorance and plain distortion without the faintest realization of the type of regimentation and slavery the Socialists are submitting themselves and their families" said Bert Trestrail, Provincial Secretary, Relations Counsel and Chairman of the Dominion Command Association in an address at a meeting of business men and industrial executives at the Y.M.C.A. on Monday afternoon.

Mr. Trestrail devoted his remarks principally to the issues which he considered would be at stake in the coming election, particularly with reference to the threat of State Socialism. He said that the Canadian Congress of Labor's Political Action Committee has just announced a national campaign to carry the gospel of State Socialism from door to door across Canada. They also plan to distribute two million pieces of literature to the homes in support of the C.C.F. Socialist candidate" he said.

"Unless," said Mr. Trestrail, "all those opposed to such a program unite in a similar national education effort or even start up to a similar tune that destroy individual freedom as surely as though we lost the war. The outlined plans for a comprehensive educational campaign, with the support of all ranks, who stand for freedom of opportunity, is the only campaign to thwart the effort of a handful of ideologists to fasten the yoke of State Socialism on to Canadians.

"Time is short," Mr. Trestrail said, "We have a chance to destroy this menace once and for all. If through apathy, disinterest or timidity we fail to combat and annihilate this potentially program we will regret it till our dying day and our boys overseas, who have fought so gloriously for freedom, will never forgive us for neglecting our responsibilities and selling them down the river." Following the meeting a general discussion was held and some committees formed.

Ventriloquist Causes Laughs In Legislature

Toronto, March 20 — Somewhere in the non-government benches there is a ventriloquist, and the boys in the press gallery of the Ontario Legislature think he has that. Mr. Speaker W. J. Stewart would dearly love to locate Mr. Big.

The mysterious voice has brought more amusement to the house than anything in the current session.

One evening last week as the labor-minister, Charles Daley was looking at his notes and making a speech, a voice called hoarsely:

"Put down those notes. Stop reading your speech."

Mr. Daley put down his notes. The speaker looked all around but could not tell whence it came.

At another time, Dr. Stobbs Taylor, Progressive Conservative, Huron, was talking about sugar coated pills.

"Better take one before you go to bed, doctor," came the same voice in a high feminine falsetto.

Everybody looked at the two women members, but they were both splitting their sides. They hadn't said it.

Once the "voice" was thrown up to the speaker's gallery and it sounded as if someone in the audience was dead tired.

The dignity of the House may suffer, but mostly the members are having the time of their lives until found and isn't stopped . . . for the "voice" has provided the best comic relief in years.

POLICE COURT

"Pride boy's parents complain he runs the streets at night and is incorrigible around the home," stated Police Constable J. C. Donnan in evidence in police court this morning when 21-year-old John White, Belleville, appeared before Magistrate T. Y. Wills on a charge of buying one pair of textile dress trousers, the property of His Majesty.

"It might be a good idea to have the police take him over and have him registered in the army C. D. National Selective Service office," suggested City Crown Attorney G. Donnan. Enlarging the above charge for one week His Worship requested the inspector office to follow Col. Donnan's suggestion and present the lad before the proper military officials for consideration. The charge will be dealt with next week, but in the meantime White was still wearing the textile dress trousers when arraigned in court.

Careless Driving.

John Neal, Thurlow, paid $17.50 including costs, after pleading guilty to a careless driving charge while W. J. Baron, Ottawa, paid a speeding charge. The latter driving been the chauffeur for a high-ranking military officer of Ottawa. Disorderly Conduct.

Roy Heintz and Jack Haycroft, both of Belleville, paid two dollars and costs after pleading guilty to charges of disorderly conduct. Heintz, police say, caused a disturbance at the Belle Theatre last Saturday night, when he refused to leave the premises, when requested by attendants. Police later removed him and charged him with disorderly conduct.

Motorists Fined.

Motorists who continued to violate the one-hour parking by-law in the downtown district contributed to the city coffers in the usual two dollar manner.

Montreal, March 20. (CP) Northern Quebec is faced with much the same condition as Northern Ontario, where thaws are now causing concern to woodsmen faced with getting out pulpwood cut during the winter and the Quebec situation was particularly serious in the Abitibi area.

MINIMUM WAGE FOR PART-TIME WORK PROPOSED

Second Government Bill is Venereal Disease Prevention Act

Toronto, March 20 — (CP) — Speeding up business in an effort to advance Victory, Monday, March 26, the Ontario Legislature in afternoon and night sessions yesterday handled a variety of government and private members' bills.

Collaborating on government measures, one to amend the Minimum Wage Act and one to amend the Venereal Disease Control Act. Both were given second reading.

Labor Minister Charles Daley, speaking on the Minimum wage bill, told the Legislature that a Dominion - Provincial conference of Labor Ministers in Ottawa recently been arranged to consider the minimum wage question throughout Canada.

The Ontario bill amends the present Act to establish minimum wage for part-time workers and prescribes the maximum number of hours which may be worked under the minimum lage law.

C.C.F. members were critical of this measure. Charles Millard (CCF-Port Arthur) declared the legislation many provisions it should contain. The minimum wage should be $1.00 an hour, he said, in purchasing power. Arthur Williams (C.C.F.-Wentworth) told the government to establish a minimum wage, not leave it to a board of civil servants. He called present minimum wage rates "scandalously low," as low as $9 in some parts of the province.

Mr. Williams added it was high time that all labor parties recognized the equality of the sexes. He called for equal pay for women doing equal work.

Mr. Daley denied a charge by J. S. Belcher (Leeds-Prescott-Russell-Andrew) that there was a "lobby" against minimum wages.

Venereal Disease Prevention Act.

The Venereal Disease Prevention Act provides that ever physician attending a pregnant woman shall be required to make tests for venereal disease, that every infected person shall place himself or herself under care of a physician and take prescribed treatment, Mr. Daley explained. Penalties are providing for persons changing addresses without notifying treatment.

Health Minister Dr. R. P. Vivian said the government's plan had seven broad objectives: Assurance of adequate medical care, establishment of a program of health education, dealing with the problem of undiscovered cases, correction of defects, treatment of the chronic incidence of disease, protection of homes through pre-marital tests, prevention of prostitution and advancement of teaching and research.

Reads Mr. King's Telegram of Denial.

The House was enlivened when Gerry Nixon, Hamilton, C.C.F. provincial Liberal Leader, read a telegram from Prime Minister Mackenzie King which said: I "should be obliged if you would deny unequivocally the statement attributed to the Hon. Charles Daley as reported in Hansard that I or any of my colleagues intend to speaking to anyone let alone strangers and political opponents in the manner described by Mr. Daley."

After Mr. Nixon finished reading the denial, Attorney - General Blackwell rose to say he had been with Mr. Daley at Ottawa and had heard Mr. King make the statement to Mr. Daley. "I can further state," he said, and more, he said the Attorney-General, but he did not go further.

Altogether the House gave first reading to eight bills, second reading to 16, passed four through committee and gave final reading to two more.

Securities Act Amendments.

Those passed through committee included a bill providing for establishment of a board of examiners in forestry, and for registration of forestry engineers, as well as measures amending the Securities Act to tighten existing regulations on sale of securities and to require stock promoting syndicates having a capital of not more than $10,000.

Another bill given first reading was a government measure to provide $100 per month annually for five years and $20,000 annually for an additional 15 years to the school of nursing at university of Toronto. Another extends the Dominion - Provincial Purchasers' Relief Act of 1936, providing relief for purchasers of farms for those unable to meet mortgage payments.

Other measures introduced by Attorney-General Blackwell would authorize the issuing of Martin insurance in Ontario, instead of the United Kingdom.

Farm Cheese Subsidies.

A one-year extension to the present act providing subsidies for hogs and cheese is proposed in a bill moved by Agriculture George Doucett. Acting Minister of Agriculture, he provides a cheese subsidy of two cents a pound and a hog subsidy of $1 a head.

A bill to amend the Land Surveyors Act introduced by Lands and Forests Minister Hon. W. G. Thompson would enable war veterans to take surveyors' apprenticeship examinations. It changes conditions of apprenticeship with a view to relieving a shortage of surveyors.

Lord A. Douglas, Friend of Wilde, Dies in Sussex

Lancing, Sussex, March 20.—(CP) —Lord Alfred Douglas, 74, scholar, poet and friend of Oscar Wilde, died today at his home.

He was the eldest surviving son of the Eighth Marquess of Queensberry.

One of his most recent published works, in 1941, was "Oscar Wilde: A Summing Up." He also was a lifelong friend of George Bernard Shaw.

One of Lord Alfred's last acts, while seriously ill, was to write Prime Minister Churchill imploring him not to become involved in a "Jewish plot."

Lord Alfred, described by one literary critic as at one time "the greatest living master of the English Sonnet," never emerged from beneath the cloud which shrouded him when in 1895 he figured as a witness for the defence in the notorious Oscar Wilde trial.

Great Writer of Poetry

The author of several biographies, five books of poetry, and a great number of satires was an undergraduate at Oxford University when he first met Wilde, then at the height of his fame as a poet and playwright.

The boy's father and Wilde quarreled over a fast friendship that sprang up between the latter and the boy poet, and finally Wilde sued the Marquis of Queensbury for criminal libel.

Fresh evidence came to light, however, which proved the charges the Marquis had made, and Wilde was arrested, tried at the Old Bailey and found guilty of gross indecency in his behalf—and sentenced to jail.

After the poet, broken in health, was released, he joined parties in Paris, and it is said gave him financial assistance and paid his funeral expenses.

Lord Douglas once went to prison himself — for uttering a criminal libel against Mr. Churchill, whom he charged was engaged in a homosexual orgy during the First Great War when he held several cabinet

Charge of Murder Follows Discovery

Orillia, March 19 — (CP) — Lloyd Wellington Simcoe, 24-year-old Indian, was in custody here today on a charge of murder following discovery Sunday of the body of Premier Walter, 71, night watchman at a paint factory here.

The slaying was described by Chief William Canard as "the most brutal murder I ever saw." Walter's body, wounds on the face and head and both hands slashed, was found on the third floor of the Vilas Enamel Products Ltd., by a day watchman reporting for work.

Police said a younger brother of Simcoe is being held for questioning and that another arrest is expected. They said they were searching the Lake Couchiching "reserve" of Indians in the area for the weapon used in the slaying, believed to be a piece of iron about 12 inches long, another unidentified instrument with a sharp point and a bunch of factory keys they said were found near the victim.

Alex Hunt, watchman who discovered the body, said Walter "was hardly recognizable." Police said they believed the attack took place shortly after 11.30 last night, the time recorded as the time clock punched by Walker.

Orillia is about 90 miles north of Toronto.

EARLY SPRING FLOWERS IN BLOOM AGAIN

Robins may have been seen; mosquitoes are said to be humming; snowdrifts are reported to be leaving trails on dusty windows but Spring lovers of flowers will be glad to have been heralding the vernal season, but irrefutable proof has been given that the year is fast around the corner is seen in brilliant yellows of crocuses on the lawn of Dr. O. H. Stoble, Sidney Street, offering colorful defiance to spring winds.

The bright cups, looking yellow suns upwards stand in vivid contrast to the drab of the early spring grass. It is expected they will be in full bloom within the next few days.

Spring Comes at Last

The rivers are running free of ice, the snow of a winter of heavy falls of snow is gone, the spring and summer birds are here, grass is growing and tulip blades are developing rapidly. All these have come about before the official arrival of spring on Tuesday, March 20th, at 7.38 p.m.

It used to be said in old days when there was dust flying off the roads on St. Patrick's Day it was the mark of an early spring. For a week before St. Patrick's Day 1945 little whiffs of wind have raised a little dust in streets, but it is always the case, for many a seventeenth of March has come with snow and with winter in partial possession of the landscape. But this year conditions on March 17th were all spring-like.

Will there be a possible throwback to disagreeable weather yet before spring enters completely into its inheritance? Some who have seen February recently end in a burst of sunshine and fairly mild weather and March come in with the frolicksomeness of the March lamb have fears that the old-time adage concerning March, "in like a lamb, out like a lion" may prove true in the next ten days or two weeks.

Those who are not so inclined to look on the darker side expect a continuance of fine weather, and note the unusual condition over the whole North American Continent as well as on the Continent of Europe with springlike weather everywhere and then note the return of the birds to their old haunts about here and in other parts of Canada.

Mail Across the Channel

Perhaps the best evidence that the American soldiers and the British people reached a good understanding during the time when they shared the island of Great Britain before D-Day, comes from a recent announcement by the U. S. Army H.Q., Base.

The announcement reveals that about 700,000 personal letters cross the English Channel each week from American soldiers on the Western Front, addressed to the friends they have made in Britain and that each week about the same number of personal letters cross the Channel in the opposite direction from British civilians addressed to U.S. soldiers on the Western Front. This is an exchange of 1,400,000 a week between Americans and Britons.

It seems inconceivable that personal tissue such a scale can fail to have a permanent effect in making relations closer between Britain and America. Nothing like this has happened between two nations ever before in history.

Bailey Bridges

The fact that during the present-war great rivers have not proved serious obstacles to the Allied Armies even when the enemy has destroyed the bridge is largely attributable to British engineering skill, notably, in the production of the famous "Bailey Bridge."

The Bailey Bridge seems the most likely method for the narrower streams and the British invention was adopted by the United States forces as a standard field bridging equipment, its plans were also supplied to the Russians.

At the beginning of the war the existing military bridges could carry little more than twenty tons, but the increasing size of British tanks and the use of tank transportation necessitated the invention of a bridge with heavier capacities, though the sections must still be capable of handling by manpower alone.

The British civil engineer, Donald Coleman Bailey, played a leading part in the development of the bridge bearing his name. It is noteworthy that the first rough plans for a new design to be used in offensive operations were made at the end of 1940, during Britain's darkest hour. Within four-and-a-half months the first experimental bridge underwent trials. The essential feature of the Bailey Bridge is its use of relatively light, inter-changeable components. The standard sections are ten feet long consisting only of seventeen parts, nine of the parts being used to make the foundation. The heaviest part can be handled by six men. Each section is joined to the next by one steel pin, as simple as constructing a model with a child's meccano set. (The nearest German approximation requires twenty-four nuts and bolts for each joint.) Men and women all over Britain in concerns ranging from small garages to large steel works have been engaged in manufacturing thousands of these parts.

According to the loading required the strength can be varied from one row of girders to each side to three tiers, each three girders side by side. The girders are assembled on rollers and pushed out through the gap to be bridged. To overcome the natural sag over the gap the forward section is raised upwards to form a "launching nose" which is received at the far end on rollers, light enough to be carried across by men straddling the girders. The sag is also countered by weighting the launching end with sections, afterwards useable to complete the bridge. At each end the bridge rests on bearings of an orthodox type.

For the lightest loads gaps up to two hundred and forty feet can be spanned. Much larger gaps can be crossed by forming a pontoon bridge, each section of which can be constructed independently. In pontoon units, pinned together by bottom only joints at the top are left open so that if the load on any one pontoon makes it sink unduly the top joint is loosened up, allowing the load to be distributed along the whole bridge.

The simplicity of the construction enables any section damaged by the enemy quickly to be replaced with pontoon sections, which are also interchangeable with main sections. The initial bridge suitable for light tanks may subsequently be built up with additional sections to take heavier types. British sappers have learned the art of assembly by night as well as by day. The longest Bailey Bridge heretofore mentioned,—the pontoon bridge at Chindwin across Chindwin near Kalewa, was thus constructed by night as well as by day utilizing lorry headlights. Sections of this twelve hundred-and-fifty foot bridge were built independently and then floated into place on a selected site. Transport of material from factories in Britain, the U.S.A. and India, then three hundred miles across Burma from the rail head is a notable feat of British organization. Almost as long was the twelve hundred foot Bailey Bridge across the Sangro River in Italy, constructed on brick piers left by the retreating Germans. A fine example of engineering was the bridging of the three hundred foot gap across the Trigno River, also in Italy, in thirty-six hours.

Several hundred Bailey Bridges have already made a notable contribution to Allied victories in Tunisia, Italy, France, the Low Countries and Burma. Military authorities of all nations have accorded the British invention the highest praise. Montgomery says, "Quite the best thing in that line we have ever had." The British Bailey Bridge, now such an outstanding success in the war, offers a wide post-war prospect of service to communications in many less developed regions of the world where towns and villages are cut off by water barriers only traversed by slow and awkward ferries.

Scientific War

(Chicago Daily News)

A study of war casualties by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company reveals the inefficiency of scientific war.

Only here in World War II is catching up with World War I in killing. Yet this war has lasted longer and has mobilized more men; more machines and more weapons of destruction mature. In money cost it is already seven times as great as was World War I for America.

This apparent paradox rests upon another one. "Armies have become so mobile and can handle firepower on a observer in France when our lightning columns charged down at the German border because our armies had to wait for more gasoline and more shells.

Ultra mobile war travelling by fuel power on land, at sea and in the air demands the services of so many men back of the front that the proportion of men engaged to the total enlisted gets smaller and smaller.

He was so young and fair,
So fine, all through;
Born with the will to dare
And the wish to do.

High were the dreams he had
For his years to be;
But for power one man went mad.
Now, his victim, he!

The world one man defied.
With his legions great,
And the boy put dreams aside,
Saying: "These can wait!"

None knows what he might have done,
What he might have been;
But his gift to us, every one,
Is the earth made clean.

Great Armada Heads for Japan

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Western Pacific.—(Delayed)—There are many more dramatic about our start for Japan.

We simply pulled anchor about 6 o'clock one morning, and got under way. The whole thing resembled peacetime and routine.

Our ships were so strung out they didn't seem as many as they actually were. We left behind the swarming, pulsing mass of ships that literally blackened the water when we started to Sicily and to Normandy.

Once at sea our force broke up into several prearranged units and each unit soon became separated between itself and the next.

Each was self-sufficient. Each had battleships, carriers, cruisers, and destroyers. Each was complete unto itself.

The eye could easily encompass the entire formation in which you were sailing. And very dimly, far off on the horizon, you could see the silhouettes of the ships ahead, on each side or you, although they seemed remote, and not really neighbors.

The rest of the fleet was out of sight, far over the horizon. Altogether, the ships must have covered a hundred miles of ocean.

The formations were commanded by admirals and above them all was Admiral Marc Mitscher.

All day and all night the air was full of communication between our ships. Messages were transmitted by radio, by signal flag, by light blinker, by destroyer, by rigging written messages, and even by planes flying slowly over and dropping messages on the deck.

The admiral commanding our unit was a fine, friendly man whom I met before we sailed. On the third day out he sent a message over to our captain which said:

"How is Ernie getting along? Does he wish he was back in a foxhole?"

We messaged back that I was happy, hadn't been seasick yet, and that I hoped all my friends aboard could be as plush as this one.

We kept radio silence to keep the Japs from finding where we were. That is, we didn't send any long-distance radio messages.

1,100-MILE FENCE

Australia has put millions of dollars into fences, the longest of which is 1,100 miles, to barricade dingoes and rabbits.

We had a long way to go from our starting point, and our route was a devious one to boot. We zigzagged a lot, and long before we were at our destination, Japan knew. We sailed long enough to have reached the Atlantic coast—if we had been in the Atlantic.

But those ships were busy ones. Our planes began operating as soon as we were under way. Three fighters that had been aboard the carrier island, flew out and landed aboard the carrier. And a carrier is a big complement of planes.

We were up before dawn every morning, and our planes were in the air before sunup. We kept a constant aerial patrol over our ships. We flew at great height, completely out of sight, and also at the medium altitude. And still other planes circled constantly only a few hundred feet above us.

Every day we practiced our little destroyers plowed the ocean, always at top speed, in circles. You really couldn't be sure of feel safe with such a guard around you.

Every very comfortable aboard our carrier. I shared a cabin with Lieut.-Cmdr. Al Masters from Texas. Masters, Jod., just a few miles from where I was born, and we had much in common.

In our cabin we had metal closets, and writing desk and a lavatory with hot and cold water. We had a steward assigned to keep us clean up the room. Our bunks were double-decked, with good mattresses. I was in the upper one.

Our food was wonderful, and you could buy a whole carton of cigarettes a day if you wanted to (doesn't that make you jealous?). We saw a movie every night except when in battle. The first four nights our movies were "New York Town," "The Major and the Minor," "Swing Fever," and "Claudia." I don't know enough about movies to know whether they were old or not, but it doesn't make any difference to a sailor who hasn't been home.

I came aboard with a lot of dirty clothes, but I've had nothing washed since leaving. I'll have a month before.

The ship's store took my clothes to the laundry about 9:30 one morning. They were back to the cabin an hour and a half later, here they remained all night and dry and ironed, lying on the bed. What a ship!

'Mighty Tough' Say Veterans of Battle in Italy

(Ottawa, March 30 —(CP)— Repatriated Canadian fighting men arriving in Ottawa during the weekend found the going very tough in the Italian campaign with word that the hardest there is "mighty tough"—much tougher than most people at home realize.

Odum, A. Rowan of Carleton Place, Ont., and Odum, L. T. Girard of Fredericton, N.B., aides to Governor General's Foot Guards in Europe, observed categories put them out of the fighting in Holland.

Rowan had high praise for the people of Britain for their courage under German V-1 and V-2 attacks. "Those bombs are much worse than you think," he said. "They give you no warning and when they hit they wipe out whole blocks. The Hun is RAF driving them into Italy and they are battering parts of the country to rubble.

Three officers and other ranks and nine army brides, three with children, made up the weekend arrivals.

Escaped Convict Is Arrested on Murder Charge

St. Louis, March 30 —(AP)— John Dillinger, Jr., 21, escaped convict charged with murder in the slaying of Mrs. Nancy Boyer in Washington state, was under questioning in connection with the death today of a woman who was arrested by the Federal Bureau of Investigation here Sunday night in the company of a St. Louis woman.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the F.B.I. in Washington said agents and members of the St. Louis police department had found a hotel register in a hotel and he admitted his fingerprints were on it, signed with the name of James H. Hannan, of Chicago.

The F.B.I. expects to return Medley to Washington for trial in the murder case, Hoover said the body was found in his apartment today.

Last Saturday police recovered an overhead trunk containing Mrs. Boyer in a Pittsburgh pawnshop. Hoover said a silver fox jacket and a handbag answered the description of similar items missing from the home of Mrs. Boyer found in Medley's possession.

Medley is a suspect in the killing of Miss Laura Fischer, 26, a nurse worker from New York whose body was found in a hotel room in a New Orleans hotel room March 10.

Chicago police also want to question Medley in connection with the death of Mrs. Blanche Zimmerman, 36, whose body was also found in a hotel bathtub there last Feb. 17.

Rheinmetal-Borsig Armament Works Set Afire in Raid

London, March 29. (AP)—The sprawling Rheinmetal-Borsig Armament Works, one of the largest in the world, was set ablaze in Sunday night's heaviest concentrated attack on Berlin, United States strategic bombers reported today.

One Air division of 400 heavy bombers attacked the factory spread over 200 blocks on the northwestern side of Berlin. They bombed the area with high explosives and then with incendiaries after they had dropped bombs and when they left for home they looked back and saw "enormous fires the target area", the communique said.

Bombs fell into powder rooms and "huge explosions" followed and huge explosions mushroomed.

Large machine shops and smelting furnaces were destroyed, the report said.

The plant, which employed 25,000 to 30,000 persons, was engaged in war material for the German Army, Navy and Air Force, including tanks, guns, bombs and torpedoes.

Several damage also was accused near the heart of the battered capital where a heavy concentration of bombs fell on the Siemens-Schlesicher Railroad station and North Station, Berlin's two.

More than 2,000 tons of bombs were dropped at a rate of almost a ton a second during the Berlin attack, biggest daylight attack of that city.

Attack coat 25 bombers and five fighters, largest lose suffered by the Eighth Air Force in Berlin waters, planned to make itself self-sufficient in vegetables in the Northern Territory but the native bees were found to be so lazy that crop pollination failed. So they imported bees from the south.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

THE SINS OF THE FATHERS

By whatever name the call "shell shock" or "war neurosis" or "battle fatigue," it existed in a talk here last fall, the same thing existed after the preceding world war, but the breakdowns would have been ascribed, if "studied," when I first graduated my trap and called it a day, to "overwork," worry, business cares, financial embarrassment, domestic strife, the stress and strain of modern life, whatever that may mean.

Now I'll try to define the 'kins I had in mind.

First there is alcoholic indulgence by which I mean the use of alcohol as a narcotic or, if you prefer to be headstrong about it, as a "stimulant." This includes most so-called "social" drinking and especially the habitual habit, dropping in at the Refactory for a quick one on the way home to dinner, resorting to the alcohol to escape consciousness of one's shortcomings. I believe alcoholic indulgence is accountable for a great deal of the "nervous breakdown," "nervous weakness," "psychoneurosis," "neurasthenia," or whatever fancy name you please to call it, and by no means slight of the fundamental physiological fact that the only kind of energy scientifically recognized is ordinary physiological or muscular energy — no one has shown that a significant amount of energy is expended by the functioning of the brain or the nerves. Some laboratory experiments have thought their observations showed that a considerable amount of energy for a few hours on a difficult mental task, but the energy from one or two peanuts, but the accuracy of such observations—the energy the investigators assumed the brain consumed, was not actually expended actually by the heart or the kidneys or muscles or the alimentary muscle.

Next in the sins of the parents or the sins of the neurotic per se is chronneurotic himself or herself is wrong eating habits. By no means, covers so much territory and is so poorly comprehended by most people that I shall not attempt to define it in the space available here. It calls for definition, however, in talks to follow. But please do not imagine it means overeating or eating too much starch or sugar, or eating things difficult to digest, or eating wrong combinations of

Let's Agree to Disagree

I swear by almost all of your teachings, but I do wish you would really discuss the folly of the teaching that sudden change of temperature, wet feet, chilling, drafts, etc., are harmless.

Answer — I'm sorry but I am too set to realize it now. But you need not rush your self about it—there are thousands of old time practicing medicos who agree with you that these things are baddies. Read the booklet "Call it Crit" Even, you, Mrs. J. L. R., may change your mind it—send twenty-five cents and stamped envelope bearing your address and also a stamp. Bronchiectasis

Mr. G's cough is terrible, doctors say it is bronchitis and sinusitis. He has had it for years. He has coughed hard coughing spells in the morning he gets weak.

(Mrs. C. G.)

Answer — Sounds like bronchiectasis—dilatation and thickening of bronchial tube or tubes. Postural drainage will stand on his head or at least lie with hips higher than head, chest and hands on floor for five minutes, three times a day, morning to favor drainage. A tablet or capsule of ephedrine sulphate hydrate (nothing else with it) three times daily for ten days to two weeks, now and again, may check such cough.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED

By GEORGE W. STIMPSON

GLASS SNAKE

"Glass snake" or "colonied snake" is popularly applied to a legless lizard found in the United States.

This creature looks so much like a real snake that the ordinary person would not realize that it was not. True snakes, however, do not have eyelids, while true lizards do. The glass snake is an example of a thing in the process of becoming a snake. It is a connecting link between true snakes and true lizards.

The glass snake gets its popular name from the myth that it can break into pieces when attacked and later reassemble them. According to the most usual version of the myth, when this creature is struck with a stick it will disjoint and the parts will wriggle off in different directions and will later come together again provided the tail is not destroyed or destroyed. Some people believe that it is not the tail but another section, that is endowed with the power to control the movement of the other sections. If the tail section is destroyed the lizard is deprived of the power to reassemble its parts.

This myth arose, no doubt, from the fact that the glass snake, aided by a sudden twist, shakes its tail violently when it is a wire provision of nature. When caught or pursued by an enemy the glass snake drops its tail, and then wriggles off and coils and wriggle. The enemy usually seizes the wriggling tail while the glass snake slips away to safety.

It is also a myth that the glass snake later returns and gets its tail. The creature does, however, grow another tail, but it is different in size, shape and color from the tail that was lost. The body of a glass snake is broken in two, the reptile dies.

Closely related to the American glass snake is the Old World glass-worm or slow-worm. Despite its name, this creature is not blind, nor is it a snake. It has really a head without visible legs, has tiny ear openings and bony girdle elements. Its long tail breaks off at the least touch. Scientific name, "Anguis fragilis."

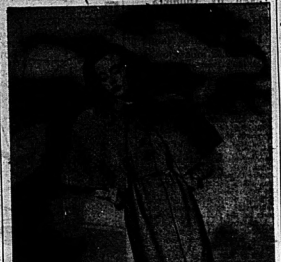
Cape and Frock Costume



A sleeveless dress with centre front closing may be worn with pullover or blouse. This one is fashioned in shepherd checked wool. Sizes 10-20.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

QUICK look at this youthful shepherd check wool costume does not tell whether it's a long coat, a suit and cape, or a frock and cape, which latter it really is. The cape is a detachable affair and, in the long spring with its often disappointing lack of warmth, the dress is sleeveless.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Self-Consciousness.

There are remedies and treatments for many beauty ills, the services of the dentist, the beautician, the hair dresser, the chiropodist, the manicurist, the teacher of physical education are always to be had if there is cash standing round in the purse. But for self-consciousness—trouble that clouds pretty faces, presses hard upon young hearts, interferes with a normal social life and moistens the pillow with tears, there are no pills or powders. The victim of a feeling of inferiority must work out her own salvation. Some girls hurl herself out of the ditch of despair. It has been done.

Social fear is the cause of self-consciousness—fear of appearing stupid or ridiculous, fear of the opinions of other people. The composition of fear is courage. A little healthy conceit may turn the trick.

Every self-conscious girl should realize that almost every human being, even those who are bright and clever and hold high places in the world, have their moments of self-condemnation. Some of the greatest actresses have lived suffered all their lives from stage fright. Before appearing before the public they stood with palpitating hearts, skin cold, limbs trembling. Once on the stage, they regained composure, became natural and normal. Self-control came to their aid.

A college girl I know was so timid she could scarcely recite in class. She attended a class in public speaking, endured agonies, but banished self-consciousness forever. "I had my own way to make in the world", she explained. "Couldn't make any headway in business or social life with such a handicap. Public speaking was the plunge into icy waters; but I did it, and it cured me of fear", that's common sense for you.

Everything that makes for mental health is all to the good. Laughter and gayety of spirit are excellent medicines for a self-conscious girl. Remember that almost all human creatures. It is a mistake to be too serious. When the self-conscious girl can laugh at herself, instead of brooding over her social short-comings, half the battle has been won.

Person who criticises the shy daughter, and brothers who ridicule her are helping her. She has her still more unhappy. She should be patted on the back, told that she is as sweet and bright and clever as the girls whose casual deportment she envies. That policy will build self-respect. It will give her confidence.

Self-consciousness will vanish if the mind can detach itself from the ego, be interested in the interests of other individuals. Forget yourself that way.

Development of interest in good literature should be encouraged. The well-written novel is sometimes a mine of interesting information on human conduct and emotions.

The timid girl must banish the idea that she is one apart, different, fated to be ruled by and overlooked. That is an unhealthy state of mind.

The Marry Go Round

She Wins "By a Nose".

In heart affairs, as well as Beauty Contests, a girl often wins or loses "by a nose". That is why I so heartily agreed with that young woman, who wanted to have her unattractive nose altered by a plastic surgeon, because it was "spoiling her life".

I have never known a girl, who wouldn't cheerfully exchange a beautiful disposition and an intelligent mind for a cute bobbed nose, like Hedy Lamarr's, Myrna Loy's or Billie Burke's.

Of course, many Hollywood beauties have classic profiles—but a classic profile is something you've got to live up to. It may win the admiration of artists and the public. But it never got a girl the masculine indulgence and tenderness, that a little retroussé nose commands. A pert, saucy, tip-tilted nose!

That Beauty Surgeon, who shortened a young woman's nose, and then fell in love with his own handiwork—and married her—merely followed the natural impulse of the average man. The moment her nose was bobbed, he declared her "the most beautiful woman in the world!"

"A quarter of an inch on the end of Cleopatra's nose" would have changed the History of the world, "because it would have made a respectable spinster of her and probably turned her into a reformer. It might have given her a dominant nose!

A cute nose that just tilts up a little, as if to say, "Oh, you great big, wonderful man!" is a marvelous asset. It disarms a man; because he never suspect that he could be an iron will and a lot of character behind it. But there can often is.

On the other hand, your character may be milder than a May morning and your disposition sweeter than a song; but if your nose is straight, strong and dominant looking, like Viola Dana's, Duchess of Liberty's, you can't be cute or appealing or ingenious. You've just got to live up to it and be dignified—or you look all out of drawing.

I know all this, because I have had to go through life with a classic nose, myself; and have envied girls with bobbed or turned-up noses. You can have your teeth straightened, your smile made ravishing and hair permanently waved. But there's nothing you can do with your nose, except powder it.

A man can forgive a girl for almost any sin in the decalogue, it she holds up an appealing little nose with a tear hanging from it.

Don't go to a fortune-teller to find out what your future is. Just look in your mirror and your nose will tell you.

Given the right brand of nose, a woman can get anything on earth she wants or asks for—from a man's last cigarette to a verdict of acquittal for murder.

Fashion Flashes

A sure thing this Spring is the navy blue suit. A good model in navy blue men's wear woollen is made with a smart little mess jacket buttoned with silver ball buttons, that also fastens the envelope flaps of the pockets.

It's very difficult to resist the charms of a flower trimmed hat. A little sailor, in pale pink straw cloth, has its brim covered with layer on layer of silky green velling linky which is tucked all around a small rosee, some buds, others half open—in shades ranging from the palest apricot to deep pink.

It's a toss-up between stripes and checks for the season's favorite. Stripes rule in a handsome little frock of soft rayon jersey striped in American Beauty, blue and black with belt of black grosgrain. An oval neckline, short draped sleeves and panels in the waist add interest to this smart little casual.

An Appeal to Red Cross Knitters

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Announcing a Service Wedding.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I . . . hope to be married soon. . . . It depends on that "problematic" furlough date! We're to have a small informal wedding—the invitations by notes, or maybe by telephone, but my parents want to send formal announcements. Since I won't know the date, I can't order them now. Does it make much difference if they are late in being sent out?

2.—Also is it proper for me, at my fiance's request, to buy my wedding ring?

Marie

1.—No. But you can speed up the mailing-date by doing most of the preparations for them now. Assemble, most carefully, your list of names and addresses. Have your fiance and his mother send their lists of their relatives and friends and their addresses. Meticulously write (or better, type) the lines of the announcement-form, (date line to be given, when known), in the engraver's form, the kind of paper and envelopes you want, order the number your combined lists indicate. Have the envelopes delivered "blanks and ready to address." Then, the address all of them, enlist some relatives and friends (first check on their handwriting!) to come to your aid in addressing them. Then, the date set, complete your order to the engraver.

2.—Yes. Many a furlough bride these days has to play proxy for the bridegroom, and receive the wedding ring. (P.S.; but the bridegroom pays for it!)

The Problem of the Wedding Gift.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I have recently been married, and a very good friend of mine is to become me asking me to suggest a wedding gift I would especially like, so as not to duplicate something I already have. I am puzzled as to just how to write to tell her something I would like. Would you please give me some suggestions?

B. S.

A good friend of yours indeed . . . and many a bride wishes that more friends would be as wise and sensible as this! I suggest that for convenience and your chotes, you give her a general type of gift, followed by ours. They come from Headquarters.

Yours sincerely,

Blake - Lach - Richard Combination Wins All the Point Records

Montreal, March 30 —(CP)— The powerful Blake-Lach-Richard combination of Montreal Canadiens packed one-two-three atop the final National Hockey League scoring statistics released today, hanging up new goal and assist records left with high-man Elmer Lach just falling short of the total-point mark.

Lach's 26 goals and 54 assists in his most successful N.H.L. season up date gave him a total of 80 points, two below the record set by Hobbs Cain of Boston last season. His 54 assists represent a new high in this department, topping by five the mark he built up by Clint Smith of Chicago a year ago.

Maurice Richard followed Lach in the total-point column, and with a record of 50 goals in 50 games, was Maurice Richard who smashed the league's record for most goals in a season by one. Joe Malone of Canadiens back in 1918. Malone did his scoring at a faster clip, however, with 44 goals in 22 games.

Captain Third.

Rounding out the "big line" domination of the statistics was Captain Toe Blake of the Canucks, in third spot with a 32-goal total and after clinching the show position over Boston's Bill Cowley in the final week-end play, Canucks wound up in fourth spot with 69 points.

Richard scored 18 goals more than any other player in the league, his closest competitor being Cain with 32, followed by Blake and Ted Kennedy of Toronto Maple Leafs each was 14 up in the assist section, with Cowley leading with 30, Blake with 28 and Syd Howe of Detroit and Gus Bodnar of Toronto with 30 each.

Sets New Record.

The Canucks line also set a record for the greatest number of points for a single line in a season. They accounted for 166 goals and 215 assists for a total of 381 points, a single mark above that set by

As a team, Canadiens scored 328 goals, six below the record set last season but 10 ahead of Detroit Red Wings, their nearest rivals. The 131 goals against them made goals Bill Durnan an easy winner of the Vezina Trophy, as he was beaten by 40 times less than any other goalie playing the full season.

Pat Egan of Boston was an easy winner of the title of league leader man. He served 79 minutes in penalties during the season.

As a team, Canadiens were the surest rulebreakers, serving 376 minutes in actual penalties as well as one match penalty and four misconducts. Toronto Maple Leafs were next with 317 minutes, one match, and one misconduct.

DETROIT READY FOR THE HAWKS

Detroit, Mich., March 30 —(CP)— Detroit Red Wings, champions in the regular schedule of the National Hockey League, tonight take on the Boston Bruins in the Stanley Cup semi-finals, a best-of-seven series.

The Wings' clash with Bruins here again Thursday before moving to Boston for the third and fourth games. A fifth game, if necessary, will be played here, and a sixth at Boston and seventh and eighth at Detroit.

But the Wings are confident of disposing of the Bruins before the series gets that far. Their belief is that Boston has not won a game from Detroit this season. They trounced the Bruins 5-1 at Detroit on Jan. 3, 1942.

Another reason for the Wings' confidence is the play of Flash Hollett, Detroit defenseman, who scored to shine brightly against his former Boston team-mates. In 10 games against Boston this season, Hollett has scored nine goals and seven assists.

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, March 30 — (AP) — Lieut. Wilbert Snow, red-top-lanyard baseball-playing flyer whose workouts with Navy nine and the Yankees caused a brief "feud" between Clark Griffith and Larry MacPhail, may be much more valuable as an object lesson to wounded soldiers than as a ball player . . . there's no doubt, however, that Shepard's real ambition is to become a major leaguer . . . Lieut. Ross Lehman, who was a close companion of Shepard during his imprisonment in Germany and who returned with him from Switzerland (at least a leg) tells of Bert's determination to resume his baseball career.

He Wouldn't Give Up:

The only baseball equipment available to Shepard during his confinement in Berlin was a softball and bat, Lehman says. Nevertheless, Shepard worked hard to get batting and pitching controlling his pivot in batting practice, throwing from an imaginary mound and toughening his leg where he was wounded . . . when there was right ankle, . . . he also talked baseball morning, noon and night, constantly advising Lehman of the interferences whether they thought he could play ball or not. "That was my determination, was something to be hold," says Lehman. "Baseball was his whole life and he was determined to play the game again if it could possibly be done."

Albert College won the junior basketball championship of the Bay of Quinte group of the C.O.S.S.A. defeating their ancient cage rivals, Belleville Collegiate Institute, 35 to 27 on their home floor Monday night. Coach Stewart Alberts' Juniors took the group play-off round by an aggregate score of 60 to 52 in a two-game series, points to count. In the first league play-off game the quintette played to a 32-all draw at B.C.I. after having dubbed their regular season's schedule tied.

Albert drove through to a 20 to 16 lead at half time, and although Coach Ted Townsend's "collegians" in the last half they were unable to haul down the margin that ultimately spelled defeat for them.

Team Boxing Title Taken by Gunners

Win Canadian Army Unit Championship From the Infantry by Wide Margin

By ALLAN DICKINSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aldershot, England, March 30— (CP)— A heated bout of fists from an artillery unit won the Joe Louis Memorial team boxing championship by winning all but two of nine bouts from infantry opponents. Both teams represented reinforcement units.

But the only fights won by the infantry was considered the outstanding event of the card, total victor was Lieut. Joe Gagnon, Empire Games pugilist from Montreal, but a left-handed attack was his only victory margin over Sgt. Ernie Brabant of Regina in a top-notch lightweight bout around these parts for the past couple of years.

A 90-second knockout featured the heavyweight clash, Cpl. Jack Wilton, medical officer from Chicago, Alta., routed Pte. Ira D. Pepper of Montreal as the opening bell rang, and three three hard lights that followed brought the ropes for the count.

The most thrilling bout was also the shortest. Bdr. Charlie Fyfe, artillery middle from Fredericton, Waterford, N.B., put Cpl. J. Appollo of Montreal, down for a short count after 30 seconds of welter-weight bout. Appollo got up and dropped with a right to the left jaw, Fyfee, and after a short clinch, landed a terrific right that flattened Appollo and ended the fight.

The light-heavyweight bout next by didn't stay there long. Pte. H. Hemphill of Woodstock, N.B., was knocked down by Gunner Turner on a rush home and see his job, born on the day Victoria died, and his new wife. He decided to compete, however, beat Lieut. J. Roberge of Quebec in a unanimous decision. He travelled to his home near the south coast.

Sgt. H. W. Kennedy, Minico, Ont., forwarded the first knock-out after three fast rounds with Cpl. Lacoste of Montreal, and other winners were Pte. Ken Hall of Wetaskwin, Alta., middleweight, and Sgt. Jim Clarkson, Turner Valley, Alta., another middleweight, Sgt. Clarkson, Calgary, was four National Voluntary Organizations were presented to team members by Lt.-Gen. F. J. Montague.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

The midnight curfew rule in the United States affected Jimmy Byrnes, War Mobilization Director, has brought a new condition in the baseball world. Both the National and American Hockey Leagues and the American Association, in their recent overtime contests, the N.H.L. will need a points system in addition to the home-and-home arrangement for a series while the American loop will determine winners on an outright points basis, the first team to score 60 runs being declared the survivor of a playoff series. Clubs will be awarded two points for a win and one for a tie.

Bob Gracie and Bob Walton, both of Pittsburgh Pirates, wound up the season in a tie with 24 points for the scoring championship of the American Hockey League. Gracie scored 10 goals and 14 assists, because he collected 40 goals against Walton's 37 counters. Johnny Lou Trudel of Cleveland Barons "won" third, only one point behind.

Byron Nelson and Sam Snead found themselves deadlocked at 272 at the close of the $10,000 Open golf tournament at Charlotte, N.C., yesterday and they met today in an 18-hole playoff for their second $1,000 cheque, earned by winning season. Snead won out in 19 holes after Nelson had tied the 18th in the Gulfport, Miss., tourney last month. Harold Mcspaden wound up in fifth place with 281.

St. Louis Cardinals opened their spring-training season yesterday as best they could under spring-food conditions at Cairo, Ill., with the outfield of the practice diamond under four feet of water. The squad of 16 players went through a drill of physical jerks during the day while officials looked for a dry field.

The Professional Golfers Association decided at a meeting in Charlotte, N.C., yesterday on a share-the-wealth plan which calls for a 30 per cent reduction in the top three cash prizes for summer tournaments and a spread of the additional money over 17 other places. The chief complaint was that Byron Nelson had amassed $62,000 in two seasons and Harold Mcdspaden rung up $36,000 in the same period while other touring pros barely made expense money.

GREAT LAKES WON

Great Lakes, Ill., March 20—(CP)— Great Lakes Naval Training Centre athletic teams have rolled up 29 victories, against 40 defeats, and two ties in three and a half years of competition.

The basketball squad has won 130 and lost 16, and the football team has won 27, lost seven and tied two.

Toronto, March 20 (CP)—The list of survivors in the Memorial Cup hockey carry shrunk still further in Toronto are looking forward with great interest to the annual best-ever spring tourney for the two teams. It's the series follow the average, the books tend to make one believe that St. Michael's College may be the winner.

That is based on the fact that since the cup was donated, it has been won 12 times by teams from Ontario. Manitoba teams have taken it nine times, Saskatchewan three, and Alberta once. On the other hand, taking the totals of Memorial Cup winners by cities, Winnipeg squads lead with eight championships, Toronto (Shamrocks) three, Regina three, Owen Sound two, and Kitchener, Brandon, Fort William, Calgary and Portage La Prairie one each.

Ontario alone has carried the burden for the east—her 12 wins equalling the west's total. Considering these figures, Mike (Kingston-Whig-Standard) Brandon says: "Let us hear less about the alleged dominance of the west and learn to appreciate those closer to our own firesides."

However, let there be no underestimation of the challenger from the west.

Pat's Promise:

Pat (Boxcar) Egan, burly Boston Bruin blue-line leader, has a sense of humor. It seems that Pat was "loaned" four bottles of beer recently by his old friend Staff Sgt. Jimmy Hayward, who used to coach the Montreal Amateur Athletic Ass'n was playing under khaki colors. Sam (Montreal Herald) Maloney relates that Jimmy, most emphasic that the bottles be returned. Egan gave his promise to this effect and went off with the Bruins for Boston. A few days ago he Jimmy received a card that there was a parcel awaiting him at the customs office. Jimmy rushed down and the clerk undid the package for inspection.

Out rolled four beer bottles — empty. It cost faithful Pat $1.85 to return the bottles.

Little Fellows?

Western sport scribes are "het up" about Toronto Maple Leaf scout George (Squib) Walker's report to Hap Day that all the junior players in the west were "little fellows." Tony (Winnipeg Tribune) Allen goes so far as to submit evidence that a recent survey shows Winnipeg schoolboys of 15, 26 of 5 inch taller than they were before the war.

Try this second rub was in Walker's report that he wasn't impressed by Winnipeg's "clean" of Saskatchewan and Alberta juniors.

Squib may not be very welcome next time he comes a-scoutin' the west!

ARTHUR KING WINS ANOTHER

Toronto, March 30 (CP)—Arthur King, Toronto Negro featherweight, stopped Manny Beauchamp of Montreal in the third round of their feature bout last night on a boxing card at Maple Mall. After Beauchamp had landed a few heavy lefts King had him down twice for nine counts in the second before forcing him out in the third. Fighting at 130 pounds, Al Robson of Toronto scored a fourth round knockout over George Pert, Sudbury.

At 126 pounds Ollie Britton of Montreal and Marvin Lewis of Woodstock battled three rounds to a draw.

Bolly Anglehart, Sudbury, won a decision over Mike Gadzuk of Guelph at 145 pounds fought three rounds to draw with Jimmie Stewart of Toronto.

Jackie Stewart, Toronto, 140 pounds, won a decision over Manny Sorbara, Guelph, after three rounds.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 625
By SAM GORDON
The Ribbies

There is nothing tricky about showing tricks. An opening one bid shows five. A new-jump responding suit shows three. Each non-jump raise shows another. Any jump shows enough to make a game.

Base yourself into this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH	NORTH
♠A 10	♠ —
♥ —	♥A J 7 6 4 3
♦A J 7 6 4 3	♦K 8 3 2
♣K 8 3 2	♣ 7 6 5

South opens with one diamond, showing five of his tricks. North has five tricks. Not yet seeing more than ten tricks, north must not jump. He assists to two diamonds, showing three of his tricks.

With seven tricks, south does not yet see more than ten tricks with only three so far shown by north. So, south must not jump. He rebids to three diamonds, showing his sixth trick.

Now that south has shown six tricks, north can see 11 tricks with his own five. So, he should jump. His bid is a one-jump to five diamonds.

South has shown only six of his tricks. North would not have jumped without seeing 11 tricks. So, south has now learned that north has five tricks.

With north now known to have five tricks and seven tricks in his own hand, south can count 12 tricks in their pair. Why, then, does south refrain from going to six diamonds?

The safety of a slam depends on having enough aces and kings. To learn of enough aces and kings, one of the partners must use the four or five no-trump ace and king asking convention.

Since north has already bid five diamonds, it is too late for south to use the four no-trump signal. And south has not enough aces in his own hand to use the five no-trump signal.

This shows another efficient feature in the five-diamond method of bidding. If 12 tricks are not discovered until too late to use the ace and king showing convention, a slam is improbable.

A game in the hand is worth two that you post.

AT THE McCARTHY— Blondie (Penny Singleton) and Alexander (Larry Simms) discover Dagwood's spy hobby, which seems to turn up her nose in this scene, one of the many fun-makers in the first of the new "Blondie" series, "Leave It To Blondie," next at the McCarthy Theatre, with "The Unwritten Code" as a companion feature.

AT THE CAPITOL — New litter of pups tickles Frank McHugh and Bing Crosby no end in "Going My Way," which opens for a return engagement here today at the Capitol Theatre, while Barry Fitzgerald looks on with a dour expression. A special matinee for this attraction Wednesday at 2.15 p.m.

Training Camp Notes

New York, March 20 — (AP)—A trade is brewing between Brooklyn Dodgers and Chicago Cubs, baseball circles heard today.

Word came from the Bear Mountain camp of the Dodgers that President Branch Rickey was searching for a catcher to help Stan Andrews, the only ketchupper the Dodgers currently possess.

Rickey, it was rumored, was eyeing the three catchers the Cubs have. As trading ball Rickey is said to have put Frenchy Bordagaray on the block.

Other training camp briefs:

Boston Red Sox — Five players still unsigned, among them star pitcher Joseph O'Neil who wants more money.

Detroit Tigers — Third sacker Pinky Higgins, 36 in May, due to take pre-induction physical exam Thursday. His loss would seriously cripple team.

Cleveland Indians — Catcher Jim McDonnell, who probably will be No. 1 catcher, arrived at Lafayette, Ind., today.

Boston Braves — Pitcher Tom Earley, recently released by Army, reported eager to resume where he left off in 1942.

St. Louis Cardinals — Blix Donnelly, world series hurler, reported in good shape for 10th time. Mort Cooper, 20-game winner, signed contract, and infielder Johnny Antonelli was classified 4-F.

New York Giants — Outfielder Sherry Gardella suffered sprained ankle when he stepped into gopher hole while chasing flies.

ST. MICHAELS EASILY DEFEATS GALT RED WINGS

Western Boys Hold Own for Two Periods and Then the Deluge

By The Canadian Press

St. Michaels repeated the last-period story to take the third straight game from Galt Red Wings 8-2 last night at Toronto in the O. H. A. junior "A" championship finals. The western Ontario crew held their own against the students for two periods, the total being 2-2 as the Collegians at the second intermission, but Mike Mosienko ran wild in the third session, banging five goals in a row five-style without assistance from a teammate by Red Wings. They clash for the fourth time at Galt tomorrow night and St. Mikes will have the title in the bag if they win next time out. Leo Gravelle and Bob Paul started for scoring honors on the St. Michael side, eighing two each, while Gravelle adding to his collection when he assisted on four other goals. Others who were distributed among Sloan, McCormack, Blote and Tuohy. Harmon shared some of the reflection from the calcium lights by providing the assist on two scoring plays.

Frenchie Magner converted Bill Sweeney's pass in the initial chapter to tie it up after Paul had fired the first counter for St. Mikes. Leader Pollock sank the disc into the net unassisted for Galt's other score, this being the only marker of the second period. After that it was all St. Mikes.

In the all-Ontario senior playoffs, Malton whitewashed Sudbury Miners 6-0 at Hamilton last night to grab the second straight game in the best-of-seven series, the nickel belt defence appearing weak against the seasoned Hamilton stick-handlers.

Mason put Malton ahead to stay with the only marker of the first period but the locals got on a major offensive in the second to collect four in a row, the marksmen being Brady, Shillington with two and Miocinovich. Johnny Conick wound up the scoring at 11.26 in the third frame with the assistance of Brady and Sherry.

Their next meeting is scheduled for tomorrow night at Toronto.

RUBY VOLANTS BEATEN

OTT PREDICTS GIANTS WILL BE THREAT IN 1945

Giants' Mentor Believes the Team Vastly Improved From Last Year

By JOE REICHLER
Lakewood, N.J., March 20—(AP)—The Giants, last year's New York Giants will be a vastly improved baseball club this year.

Although admitting he would prefer practically the identical lineup that started the 1945 National League last year, the Giants manager is highly elated and confident that his club is basically sounder.

A stronger pitching staff, a steadier infield and more outfield reserve strength are the three reasons for Ott's optimism. "If we can come up with another utility infielder and a first baseman to spell Frank Gustine and Lombardi, we will make it tough for the rest of the league," said Mel Ott.

"For the first time in years, we are well stocked in pitchers. In addition to Bill Voiselle, who once again should be our ace, Harry Feldman, Ace Adams and Ewald Pyle, the hurling corps has been fortified by the purchase of Ray Harrell, Lorne Brain and Bill Bonnerich, all right-handers. Harrell, discharged from the army last winter, Mungo may be the surprise of the staff. He's a different fellow this year. He's been working harder than ever before and he has his mind strictly on baseball.

Harrell, a 32-game winner with San Francisco last year, should help a lot. At 33, he appears to have learned how to pitch. Bain, a curveballer from Minneapolis and Bonnerich, a control pitcher with lots of stuff, from Rochester have also looked good so far.

The Giants' hitting strength lies in their outfield. Ott will be in right, and expects to play in at least 100 games; Joe Medwick, present-day batting star, will patrol left field; and fleet-footed Johnny Rucker, a .300 hitter in 1943, Mickey Witek will vie for the centrefield post. Ott hit 30 homers, Medwick 24 the club in hitting, and Treadway batted an even .300 last year.

ST. PATRICKS WIN

Ottawa, March 20 — (CP) — St. Patricks College defeated University of Ottawa 8-0 yesterday to win their two-game Intercollegiate junior hockey series two games to one and earn the right to meet Prescott in a sudden-death game here today. The winner of the Prescott-St. Patricks game will meet Cornwall's Memorial Cup representative in the Ottawa district. Tompkins and Jacks Anning each got two goals in the St. Patrick victory.

TORONTO LEAFS AT FULL STRENGTH FOR CANADIENS

Clubs Always Rivals and Tempers Generally Short When They Meet

Montreal, March 20 — (CP) — Perennial rivals, Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens clash here tonight in the first game of their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final series, and the word was out today that there probably would be plenty of fireworks before the series ends.

The teams have never handled each other gently. In this series, the Canucks will be out to prove that the edge of many Leafs have held over them for most of the season has been overcome. Added to that is the long-remembering Leafs will remember last season when they were out in five games at the hands of Canadiens.

The Leafs have always been rivals and tempers are frequently short when they meet. Added to that is the fact that the penalty records show Canadiens are the most heavily penalized team in the league to get along with peacefully, and the Leafs are the second hardest by the same measure. It ought to be quite a series.

Leafs are expected to be at full strength for the tilt. It still isn't definite whether Canadiens will have defenceman Frankie Eddolls and forward Ken Mosdell on hand, but both were still on the injured list in weekend games. The Canucks could make good use of both in the event that continues here Thursday and then moves to Toronto for a Saturday night fixture.

Pupils Given Promotion If Under Contract

Toronto, March 20 — (CP)—Pupils who leave school early this year to work on farms may be granted their high school entrance or high school promotions provided they have a written agreement of not less than 13 weeks, the Board of Education announced last night.

The announcement said pupils who wish to leave school to assist crops under the same regulations with promotions based on marks and attendance. Regulations governing employment in a checker cheese factory or at buttermaking in a creamery are also included. If the employment is authorized by the Minister of Agriculture.

THE SECRET OF THE MARSHBANKS

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

CHAPTER 22

"Your room is ready, Countess," May said, from the doorway, "and my new little pleased look, a mollified expression, came into Amy's face. The title was impressive to them all.

"Yes, we will see sis 'Comstock tomorrow, and meanwhile, I will have a bath and a 'sleep,' she announced the count, following the maid from the room. Amy loitered for a last word.

"The first thing that Cogo said when we read this horrible letter," Amy said, looking first at her grandmother, then at Cherry, "was that it wouldn't be fair to me—it would put me in a false position for him to have married me thinking that I was—well, was rich and that I could help out all these people he has promised to help, and that he could pay up some bills. At," Amy diverted suddenly with an attempt to speak normally that Cherry had found so plaintively pathetic, "as if money mattered! It was only—Cogo says it's only that he expected something different and made all these plans, and now of course he won't be able to carry them out."

"We'll know tomorrow," Cherry said, one hand over her aching eyes.

"He says, Cogo says, that it's a bad sign that they want to get in touch with Cherry." Amy only served, too deeply absorbed in her own interests to consider the possible effect of such a remark upon Cherry. She trailed away disconsolately, and Cherry was left alone with her grandmother.

The old lady extended a hand to her, and as Cherry went to stand before her, grasping it, she drew the girl down so that Cherry's face was close.

"She's destroyed her life!" the old woman said, in an electric whisper. "This money was all he wanted."

"Oh, may—no!" Cherry answered, but without conviction.

"Oh, why, why did she do it! Little fool—fool!" the old woman's only half-audible murmur.

Greatly the ball, Cherry could hear Gogo's voice speaking high and angrily in Amy's room; she heard Amy's answer, then Amy in reply.

With a heartsick pang of sympathy for Amy, Cherry turned away from her own doorway, and went downstairs. When she reached the lower landings Fran and Kelly were just coming in.

Both looked keen. Kelly's face was gray, and Fran was obviously exhausted. Her eyes, sunken in rings of pale violet, went almost without recognition to Cherry's. She said dully she was going to rest before dinner.

"You'll want your dinner upstairs, Fran," Cherry said, all sympathy.

"No, no," the other woman said feverishly. "I don't want to be alone. I'll be down for a while."

Kelly, shedding his coat and hat, drew Cherry into the drawing room.

"You're hot!" he said anxiously. "Feel that? You haven't caught cold?"

"No, I've been near a fire. Kelly what's happened?"

His hair was rumpled; his eyes were dark with fatigue. He put his arms about her, and then checked himself.

"What a comfortable person you are, Cherry," he said. "But your face feels hot, sweetheart."

"Has it been horrible, Kelly?"

"Well, bad, Yes," he admitted. "It's been a long drag. They're questioning me, they're going to shake her; I don't know what it's all about."

"But they don't believe her, Kelly They didn't for a while. I don't know what they believe now."

"You told them she was lying?" Kelly said then the truth. I feel sorry for her, but I wish I knew what she's after."

"They'll not believe her," the girl said confidently.

"They did to begin with. But after several hours—You know, Cherry," Kelly said interrupting himself, "it occurred to me for the first time what a conviction means to an innocent man. It happens. It's even happened when it was carried as far as execution."

"Oh, hush!" she said impatiently.

"Yes, I know. But I'm not talking about myself. I'm just saying that there have been cases of innocent men being convicted. It's the worst feeling. Evidence pilling up, and men whose mentality isn't up to the first order weighing it and miscontruing it and coming to their own conclusions. Hours going by and smoke thick in the air, and a woman who's a ghost and—and serving and sifting, still and—answering again. 'Mr. Coates and I had coffee and we wished my husband was out of the way.' 'Mr. Coates had told me of poisons, without ever mentioning that he thought we would ever use them.'"

"She didn't say that!"

"Over and over. She had them guessing, all right!"

"But what did you say?"

"That I had never had the slightest unmanly lowering the hope that I couldn't understand Mrs. Marshbanks' statement. . . I only stopped in to see you a minute, dear. I'm on my way home; I'll be back tomorrow.'"

"Kelly!" Instinctively she clung to him, her eyes frightened. "Don't go away! If I could only go with you! If we could only be alone over there, out of all this, where it's cool and quiet, just by ourselves! We could have a fire, talk and forget it all!"

"I wish to Cherry, This won't last long. Before you know it we'll be heading for San Rafael, we'll get married, we'll have lunch, and then go back to Topoote, and fuss around getting ready. . ."

"It sounds like heaven!" she stammered, laughing through tears. Then she raised her face for his last kiss.

May stepped Cherry as she was slowly and thoughtfully mounting the stairs.

"Would you go in to see Mrs. Jud, please?" the maid said.

Cherry's voice was all reluctance and distaste. "Did she ask to see me?"

"She did before ever Mr. Coates left. She was so upset we telephoned the doctor."

As Cherry approached the silken, pillowed, low bed where Fran was lying, she made no attempt to simulate any despair and resentment were in it.

"Cherry," Fran said, in a tragic quiet voice. "Sit down, won't you? Has Kelly been talking to you?"

"Yes, we were talking," Cherry said coldly. And then suddenly breaking, and sinking on her knees before the bed, "Fran, how could you! You know you had nothing to do with all this, did you know Kelly didn't!"

"I think I'm going crazy," Fran whispered, her eyes closed, her feverish hand tight on Cherry's. "I suddenly wanted it all over—to be out of it! And Kelly has loved me, Cherry. . ."

Still acting. Cherry's heart, opened on a sudden impulse of hope and confidence, closed again in despair.

"What do you think they will do?" Fran breathed the question; next opening her eyes.

"I don't know what they'll do. I know it will ruin his life," Cherry answered bluntly.

"Oh, no, no, no! Oh; my head!" Fran moaned. "Amy's here," she announced faintly.

"Yes, I know." Cherry sat back on her heels, chilled and weary. They stopped off here on their way to Del Monte," she said.

"They're not on their way anywhere until they find out the meaning of that statement," Comstock. I never know anyone to show his hand quite as plainly as Gogo did!"

"You saw him?"

"No, but she came in here a few minutes ago to, find you. She'd been crying. And married yesterday!"

"She wanted me?"

"Yes. It seems Gogo couldn't wait to go down to the office tomorrow, and telephoned the lawyer tonight. Comstock's coming up at eleven. I'm to be there, and Gogo is he knew how to get in touch with her, and Gogo said you were right here."

"Tonight!"

"Yes," Cherry, Fran said, opening her tired beautiful eyes, "about this other thing, don't. Judge me too hard! I never would have dragged Kelly in. They did that—these great hunky beasts of men—asking me question after question!"

"But why should you say you did it, Fran?" Cherry demanded simply. "I was all like a dream anyway; nothing mattered, except that her head ached so terribly and she fell so sad and dull.

"Because I did it," Fran persisted. "Or at least I know who did!" she added half aloud. "Or at least I think I do."

"But you wouldn't say who did it to protect Kelly, Fran?"

"Why should I? Nobody's protecting me. I'm sick of the whole thing." Fran tossed on her pillows. "I think I'm going out of my mind!" she said in a whisper. "I'm going down to dinner, Cherry," she added, "if you'll stay. Don't you think or I'll go to—I'll keep hearing their hateful faces and their sneering their questions and I can't stand it!"

At dinner they all talked trivialities by fits and starts. When the Countess Cherny and Gogo and Amy took them into the drawing room, and sat silently facing them.

Cherry was tired. She felt her face blanking and her hands cold. Georgia dramatized serious and middle-aged Amy's hasty, confused long envelope and took from it a woman white as a sheet and—and which of the young women was Amelia Marshbanks and, upon Amy claiming the title, handed it ceremoniously to her.

Amy opened it. The lawyer then stretched his hand for it, and she surrendered it obediently enough. He read it aloud.

"My dear daughters, if both of you survive until the day set for the reading of this will," it began, Cherry's head was whirling. By this time she was gripped in the deadly fascination of adding and dreading chills and fever. With even her most desperate effort she could not keep her mind on what the count Comstock was reading:

"For my two daughters who read this, to believe that it was only the conviction that my child by my wife could possibly survive, and my hope that the substitution of Charlotte's baby in her place would be an act of charity to all concerned. . ."

It was true. The expressions on the faces of the others told her; Amy's face was blank, bewildered, as was Charlotte Rawlings. The long oration ended, and the will began.

The voices about Cherry seemed suddenly loud and confusing. She remembered saying, "Amy," and then everything was blackness.

Cherry's weeks three days later to a new world. She had been vaguely, but comfortably conscious of what was going on about her through long nights and sleepy days. Now it was morning.

"May, I feel wonderful," she suddenly said to the maid, "Was I very sick?"

"Well, we had the doctor come in once," May said, "and then yesterday he looked in when he was here to see Mrs. Marshbanks."

"Fran?"

"Yes, she and Miss Amy—the countess—excuse me!—had high strikes and goodness knows what," May added darkly.

"But, good gracious, May, I felt as if I was dying!"

"That's the way you get when you have flu," May warned her. "Mr. Coates was real worried about you."

"Was he here?"

"Right along until this morning. He went home this morning to get a shave and a bath and some sleep. He's coming back. Mrs. Marshbanks," May continued with a jerk of her head toward Fran's room, "surprised. That's what they call it. Sh confessed and then she said he did it, and then she retracted that."

A great wave of utter thankfulness and peace to match the relief of her body went through Cherry's soul.

"Mrs. Marshbanks said she'd not been telling the truth?"

"Said she didn't know what she'd been saying. She and Mr. Coates had a long talk yesterday."

"Oh, my God, I thank thee!" Cherry said, in her soul. Her breakfast tray was taken away. She lay back looking about, going from a half sleep to a real sleep and waking much later to see Kelly there and watching her.

At the sight of his dear, familiar face with its look of concern upon it, she had good reason to appreciate how weak she still was, for her lips trembled and tears brimmed her eyes.

"Feeling all right?" he asked. "May tells me you had some breakfast. Good girl."

"I'm good to see you!" she said with a little effort. "Don't—don't go away. It's all been such a nightmare, and I'm just awake!"

"A nightmare for us all. You are the Marshbanks heiress. Your Grandfather Wellington left you a lot of money."

"That was really true. Your father, Frederick Marshbanks, left a manuscript statement. And Old Judge Comstock, the one who died, also left a paper confirming it. It seems too fantastic to be true, Cherry, but there's seems no question. Your father believed you were dying; his wife had taken the other child to her heart, and as time went by I suppose it grew harder to think of undoing it all."

"Her dear Amy, take it, Kelly?"

"Very badly, of course. Nothing in Amy's life has prepared her to step down; she's always been proud of being a Marshbanks, descended from the aristocratic Wellingtons. And then, of course," Kelly went on with a slight grimace, "There's Cogo."

"What's he doing?"

"He's keeping very, mum. But he looks years older."

"Cruel will Amy have," Kelly?"

"What would have been enough for Amy is not enough for you and me, Marshbanks."

The name brought back her colors and her spirits.

"Not the Porter money. But she'll be happy with the money that he's sure to get over her. Funny, funny! If she hadn't been so terribly afraid of little things! It never occurred to her she could go and see Mrs. Marshbanks and upon Amy claiming the title, handed it ceremoniously to her.

Amy opened it. The lawyer then stretched his hand for it, and she surrendered it obediently enough. He read it aloud.

"My dear daughters, if both of you survive until the day set for the reading of this will," it began, Cherry's head was whirling. YOU'VE BEEN REAL FRIENDS, "REPATS" TELL RUSSIANS

Canadian Sapper Tells, of Work in German Sugar Factory

Odessa, March 20 —(Reuters)— Captured in the early days of Hitler's raid, Sapper William John Archer, 37, of Toronto was among the first Canadian "repatriated" men prisoners of war who have arrived from here for repatriation. After being released from German camps by the Russian advance.

Archer said that after his capture he was put to work in a sugar factory in upper Silesia.

"Two thirds of the prisoners in the factory were Canadians," he added. "The Germans called us 'Dieppe bandits.' It was real hard work.

"The Dieppe 'invasion rehearsal' cost the Germans 3,000 wounded and 2,000 missing or taken prisoner.)

The Russian men called in what in peacetime was a crack British cricket team, but her grey war shirt she slipped away from the quay, her decks brown with khaki.

Then the movement for those on the quayside, as well as for the passengers, began—cheering and shouting like schoolboys, were calling for "Repats."

"Thank you for everything—you have been real friends," they shouted to the Russians. "We will meet you in Berlin."

Only One of 20 Synthetic Oil Plants and 19 of 78 Coke Ovens Are Now Operating in Germany

By HENRY B. JAMESON

London, March 30 — (AP)—Only one of Germany's 20 synthetic oil plants and but 19 of her 78 coke ovens are operating and the Allies are gaining a commanding lead over "all forms of movement inside Germany," a high percentage in British naval war councils told a specially-summoned press conference today.

His statement was made as 1,200 American bombers and fighters hit yet plane installations and war industries in southern Germany and R.A.F. Liberators again showered 11 and six-ton bombs on the Arnsberg and Bielefeld viaducts in the Ruhr area.

These strikes followed yesterday's record American daylight assault on Berlin by more than 1,300 heavy bombers in which the Reichmeister's flying armaments went out of the world's largest, we set blazing.

Mobility Hashed

Mobility, the British official, whose name must remain anonymous under the established press conference rules of his position, said German shortages were severely limiting the mobility of Hitler's mechanized armies by already depleting effectiveness of his air forces.

Referring to captured Nazi documents and statements of prisoners of war, he said one German tank force had been ordered not to use any gasoline from the end of December until it was ordered up to the western front — and then it was leased an insufficient amount of fuel to get to the front.

No Training Flights

Commanders of the German day and night fighters as long ago as early November were barred from using gasoline for training flights, he said.

R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. heavy bombers hammered vital German communications centers behind the western front last night while Mosquito bombers struck at Aalst in the night assault on Berlin. The enemy capital was still smoking from the Sunday attack by American planes.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, March 30 —(CP)— Col. Clifton Brown, speaker of the British House of Commons, has been touring units of the R.A.F. 2nd tactical Air Force in Belgium and Holland, talking to many Canadian pilots about their experiences and studying the background machinery of operations and intelligence.

With him were Sir Ralph Verney, secretary, and Hilary St. George Saunders, chronicler of many phases of Britain's war effort.

At one advanced air field the speaker met Air Vice-Marshal Harry Broadhurst, commander of "I" Group which has in it two complete Canadian wings and at another he met Air Vice-Marshal E. O. Rudkston, commander of 84 Group which has scores of other Canadian fliers.

The visitors watched hundreds of fighters and fighter-bombers taking off and landing in "an endless procession during one of the busiest day's flying on the Western Front.

PO. G. Moe of Morrin, Alta., was one of the pilots in a force of R.A.F. Coastal Command Beaufighters which made a moonlight torpedo and rocket attack on a German convoy in the Skagerrak, off southern Norway.

Without loss the planes scored hits on a merchant vessel and an escort vessel and a small tanker.

Moe said that he had to take evasive action because of flak from the convoy and couldn't see what he hit but that his R.A.F. navigator told him there were several underwater rocket hits on the ships.

Gnn MES63 twin-jet aircraft was damaged by Plt.-Lt. L. A. Stewart of Fairy Hill, Sask., as he was returning from an armed recce in the Munster area on Clarion.

The Messerschmitt was one of several enemy jet planes sighted by the Polish Squadron of the Canadian top-scoring Spitfire wing of Group Capt. J. E. "Johnnie" Johnson.

"When the MES63 saw us he put his nose down and said Sharpe. "It was able to get about a two or three-second burst at him before he passed under me.

"When I broke around after him there was black smoke pouring from his starboard engine nacelle."

The damage was confirmed by PO. H. W. McLeod of Park Corner, P.E.I., and PO. W.O. Busby of 062 Dudley St., Winnipeg.

FO. E. A. Oswald of Heriot Bay, B.C., an R.C.A.F. Lynx Mosquito pilot, and his navigator, damaged a Junkers 88 during intruder operations over southern Germany. The enemy machine was sighted in the Munich area and, after a short burst from Oswald's cannon fire was a pop flash and black smoke from the bomber's starboard port engine.

Oswald's navigator was PO. K. B. Hicks, of Plato, Sask.

You've often watched the teller stamp your cheque. Every day, in every branch of every bank in Canada, cheques are being scrutinized, stamped and recorded. During the war years, this daily flow of cheques through your bank has swollen to a torrent. Deposit accounts are more numerous and active than ever before. This increase reflects the tremendous activity of Canadian life and business. Production, purchases and payrolls have all reached record levels.

In addition, three-quarters of a million men and women in the armed services must get their pay, and their dependents receive allowances regularly.

The handling of this wartime volume of cheques is quite apart from numerous special services which the banks have undertaken—the delivery of millions of Victory Bonds and the sale of countless War Savings Certificates; ration coupon banking; subsidy payments to producers; foreign exchange operations.

Yet all this extra work has been carried out at a time when new help has had to be trained to take the place of more than 8,500 bank workers now in uniform.

17 JAP WARSHIPS CRIPPLED BY CARRIER PLANES

8 Aircraft Carriers And 45,000-Ton Battleship Hit

575 Jap Planes Destroyed By 1,000 U.S. Carrier Planes

Guam, March 21 — (AP) — At least 17 Japanese warships, including a 45,000-ton battleship and eight aircraft carriers, were crippled Monday by more than 1,000 United States carrier planes which united to wage thebulk of the enemy 'home fleet' hitting in Japan's 360-mile-long inland sea.

The audacious raiders from task forces 58, numbering a dozen fast, battle-tested carriers, also destroyed 575 enemy planes during the attack and damaged more than 100 more.

No American warship was sunk, although one was damaged seriously and others sustained minor blows as the Japanese home fleet and air force sent wave on wave against Vice-Admiral Mitscher's armada. All ships moved away under their own power.

Combat issues of the carrier planes "were extremely light."

These first fragmentary accounts of the most daring naval action of the Pacific war were pieced together today from a preliminary report from the U.S. 5th Fleet and first-hand accounts of pilots given to Associated Press war correspondents Hamilton W. Flynn with Mitscher's task force.

The fliers, who swept over Japan's main island bases and scores of air bases assigned to defend them told Pacific Fleet Nimitz's forces smashed into:

A battleship of the Yamato class, a battleship converted into a big aircraft carrier, three large aircraft carriers, four small, new 'flat-top' airwins, a heavy cruiser, a light cruiser, four destroyers, a destroyer escort and a submarine.

(The 45,000-ton Mitsubishi was sunk last October in the Battle of Leyte Gulf in the Philippines and her sister-ship, the Musashi, was damaged. They were Japan's two biggest battleships.)

Six Surface Craft Sunk.

In addition, six small surface craft, including one oiler, were sunk. Seven others, including two others said four large cargo ships, probably were sunk.

Flynn's figures were more definite than those in a navy communique issued 15 to 1 enemy warships damaged, six "small freighters" sunk and seven "freighters damaged, although the total was coincided.)

The carrier planes crattered airfields, attacked airplane factories, destroyed plane hangars, ammunition stores and workshops.

The Japanese warships, identified by Admiral Nimitz as "the principal units of the Japanese fleet" operated in the area the raiders drove in.

The battle of Monday toll of more than 575 enemy planes destroyed or damaged on the ground, sending from Kyushu to Honshu made a total of 1,400 accounted for over Japan, the Pacific Fleet staff Mitscher's carrier air arm knocked out 883 planes from the skies in the Tokyo area last February.

The Monday toll of 30 ships sunk or damaged was added to the 71 battered in the February assaults.

Tokyo said 1,400 Japanese planes participated, from 15 aircraft carriers. They sent out a "wave" of Japanese strongholds such as Kobe, Japan's No. 1 shipbuilding centre and leading port, and Kure, major naval base.

Tokyo radio broadcast the unconfirmed claim that more than 180 American planes were shot down in two days and 14 warships sunk or damaged.

1,200,000 FAMILIES TO BENEFIT

Ottawa, March 21—(CP)—Of the 1,500,000 families in Canada, 1,200,000 will benefit through family allowance payments scheduled to begin July 30, Health Minister Chaston announced at a press conference here today. He said 300,000 families will receive no benefits under the act because of the size of their annual incomes.

Weather Forecast

Nursing Sister Home After 2½ Years of Service

Ottawa, March 21 — (CP) — Its a long way from the battlefields of Europe to Georgetown, Ont., but R.C.A.F. Nursing Sister Molly Mulholland is back home after 2 1/2 years service overseas including 9 months in front line hospitals on the continent.

Nursing Sister Mulholland was one of the R.C.A.F. Nursing Sisters who landed in Normandy just 11 days after D-Day and they were the first to be sent to front line hospitals. Through France, Belgium and into Holland they went as the Allies advanced and the mobile hospitals moved forward.

During the first few months the Sisters lived on straight service rations — hard-tack, bully beef and canned puddings — but later such items as fresh meat, potatoes and vegetables were added to the diet.

Miss Mulholland couldn't say enough in praise of the aid given frontline hospital and medical service by the Queen Alexandra Corps. They had a constant supply of Canadian blood, both in plasma and whole blood form and it was used constantly.

She arrived back in England from the continent in February and was posted back to Canada for duty here.

Decisive Battle Is Shaping Up In Central Burma

By MICHAEL MacDONAGH

Advanced Allied Headquarters, (Delhi), March 21 — (Monday) — (Reuters)—The battlefront in central Burma was rapidly moving south of Mandalay today as British 14th Army troops drove towards Meiktila, key communications citadel of the Japanese escape routes through central Burma.

Allied columns which quietly probed south of Mandalay while the battle for Mandalay was in full swing apparently were hot meeting in any great strength.

Unofficial reports said operations so far as the battle for Mandalay today had reached the mopping up stage.

It was problematical whether the Japanese would hold the city long enough to make it one of making a decisive stand in central Burma. Its fall today was a big result in the tural defence line along the Irrawaddy.

They might withdraw east or attempt to slip through the 16th Army's encircling net and join their main forces in south Burma.

Whatever their intentions the stage was being set for the biggest land battle in Burma since the Japanese-controlled sector of the Lashio-Mandalay road.

Say World Police Force Formed To Track Down Nazi War Criminals

London, March 21 (CP Cable) — Formation of an international detective force to track down Nazi war criminals is in any country in the world in which they might take refuge was widely reported in political circles in London today.

The body will operate as a sort of United Nations' Scotland Yard, working with dossiers supplied by the United Nations War Crimes Office and other evidence obtained in Germany. Headquarters will be in London, it was said.

The force, drawn from several countries with wide experience in international police work will engage in the biggest manhunt in history, probably before the end of the war in Europe. Reports said the detective up will not be confined to Nazi party top-echelon but may also include others influential in Germany and Italy who might be able to contribute to a revival of Nazism and Fascism.

RUSSIANS SMASH ODER BRIDGEHEAD OPPOSITE STETTIN

Menace to Berlin Grows Hourly as Zhukov Probes River For Springboard

Moscow, March 21. —(AP)—The 1st White Russian Army, now in possession of virtually the entire east bank of the Oder from the Baltic to its confluence with the Neisse, crowded siege artillery to the edge of Stettin today after wiping out the enemy's Altdamm bridgehead.

The menace to Berlin grew hourly as Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov probed along the river, seeking a springboard for his next big attack east and northeast of ruined Berlin.

Marshal Ivan S. Konev still is engaged in liquidating the encircled Germans in Breslau and Glogau on the upper Oder, but has moved additional units of his 1st Ukraine army group to the Neisse line in southern Silesia.

In East Prussia, Marshal Alexander M. Vasilevsky, 1st new vice-chief of staff of the Red Army, was stating the final act in the Soviet campaign to pocket along the coast southwest of Koenigsberg.

Headquarters announced today had taken over the 3rd White Russian army front after the battle death of Gen. Ivan Chernlakhovsky was killed. Marshal Stalin spoke of the day yesterday saluting the capture of Koenigsberg, last major German bastions in the pocket.

Vasilevsky's seizure of Samlandsvig completed the encirclement of the bag. That figure is expected to be more than doubled when the last nest of resistance in nearby Heiligenbeil falls.

Capture Altdamm.

Zhukov took Altdamm with one fierce lunge after a series of hard actions and reached this suburb, less than five miles from Stettin proper. Front dispatches said one of the huge engine factory with more than 1,000 new engines intact, an airplane assembly plant and a railway repair factory were among the booty.

Only 12 miles to the west, Russian storm units found German dead piled high from machine gun fullows in Altdamm. An Investia dispatch said an order from Hitler had been found saying that troops leaving positions voluntarily should be shot on the spot. Any man in army uniform were signs reading "hangman because I fought back" and corpses of executed civilians had a placard saying "I was hanged because I evacuated".

Rising Waters Endanger East-End of Montreal

Montreal, March 21 —(CP)— Rising flood waters on the St. Lawrence river today continued to endanger the metropolitan district after giving way in numerous places in the suburbs as a means of transportation.

Measures were being taken against possible overflowing of sewers in east-end Montreal where dwellers had reported flooded cellars.

The south shore, across Montreal, was the worst hit point in the area as St. Lambert, a municipality at its worst flood in 27 years and 50 families were evacuated from their homes at Laprairie.

Water poured over the Victoria bridge, spanning the St. Lawrence river from Montreal to St. Lambert, and traffic was stopped as were used there even for delivery service.

Canadians Await With Confidence Beginning of Showdown in Germany

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

On the Lower Rhine, March 21 — (CP Cable)—It is the hill before the storm here on the Lower Rhine. Field Marshal Montgomery's 21st Army group forces are building up rapidly for what Prime Minister Churchill called the "good strong pound is crushed," which will end the Rhine crossed in tremendous strength when the Russians storm beyond the Oder in a gigantic pincers on Germany.

The zero hour is fast approaching for the beginning of the final showdown in Germany. American, British and Canadian armies are poised for decisive action to destroy the major portion of the German forces in the west. They may smash them on the Rhine River line and Germany will be laid open.

"We are fighting on German soil and we have entered the ring for the last round". Field Marshal Montgomery told his soldiers in a message in the first issue of the new British army magazine, 'Soldier' which reached the front yesterday. "There is no time limit over this round; we shall continue until our opponent has had enough".

Key and decisive have been definite words for the Allies is certain, all that remained now was the conquest of Germany itself.

The Field Marshal's confidence is reflected in every Allied unit waiting on the Lower Rhine line. Canadians, for instance, are probably better form than at any time since they landed on the north across France last Summer. Regiments are all up to strength and everyone is optimistic that the impending battle will be decisive.

NINE AIR FIELDS, OIL REFINERIES NEAR FRONT HIT

Blistering Assaults by 2,000 Bombers in 'Victory Weather' Create Great Damage

London, March 21 — (CP) — A force of 2,000 United States bombers and fighters blasted nine air fields in northwestern Germany and a tank factory at Plauen, 10 miles from the Czechoslovak border, while another large fleet of British planes blasted a large oil refinery at Bremen today.

Both blistering assaults were staged before noon.

Berlin said U.S. 15th Air Force bombers and fighters hit airfields at Ursla, continuing blows which yesterday knocked out all but one of eight key lines between Vienna and Munich.

It was another day of what airmen are calling "victory weather." In the Italian theatre 1,000 tons of bombs were dropped on the southern bases of the Saarland and Palatinate, did not even take off. Its prisoners beyond the first 6,000.

The rich Saar valley, with its steel mills and vast coal deposits, was being torn from Germany's last third largest industrial sector.

Important cities such as Saarbrucken (population 130,000); Saarlautern (61,000), Worms (50,000); Volklingen (31,000), and Zweibrucken (16,000) were captured by the Yanks, U. S. Seventh and 7th armies.

Some divisions advanced 16 miles or more a day. The destruction of the Saarland industry was complete. It seemed doubtful that the Germans could rally for a stand in strength east of the Rhine—where greater offensives currently were in the making.

Ruhr Area Threatened.

Spearhead of the U. S. 1st Army's east Rhine bridgehead to a depth of seven miles, was within long and easy up to nine wide undercarved the Autobahn (Nazi) Road. The Reich raded on the west and threatened by Lt.-Gen. Hodges' troops in Bend. Main suburb is 4½ miles south of the Rhur. Gen. Eisenhower warned that the Ruhr, the source of 70 per cent of all German war production in 1944, was next in line of conquest.

Already the lack of power cast of the Rhine was apparent in Germany's ranks. Prisoners plodding dejectedly to the rear in uncounted thousands. One enemy division was the last to be troops saved from the 1st Parachute and 6th Panzer armies as the Remagen bridgehead and failed to check its advance.

The enemy was falling back upon the narrow Sieg and Wied rivers, hastily preparing to defend them. Americans from the east bank of the Rhine.

Canadians Patrolling.

Canadians of the U.S. 9th, British 2nd and 1st Canadian stood in strength opposite the cities of Duisburg and Dusseldorf and engaged in vigorous patrolling over the wide Rhine. Only artillery, mortar fire or was favorable and improving daily.

Lt.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch's 7th Army captures at least nine cities and towns as it drove forging the ring around the Saarland in conjunction with Lt.-Gen. George Patton's 3rd Army 12 miles west of Kaiserslautern. The two armies were squeezing German stragglers in a double pincers.

Fighting places captured were Niederwerbach, Hassel, Kirkel, the recent rain has prevented any work on the land.

Cereal and forage fields were reported too soggy for any effective operations. Potato planting in the Guelph district are somewhat similar although some farmers had hoped to get their seed in the earliest in Perth County.

Bruce County farmers were plowing last week, two weeks earlier than usual, and the earliest in 20 years, and plowing operations in Wellington County are also reported a month earlier than usual.

In contrast to most of the Province of Western Ontario land in Kent was reported dry and in some cases in need of rain.

Germany Loses Her Third Largest Industrial Sector

Bridgehead Now 25 Miles Long by Nine Miles Wide

By JAMES M. LONG

March 21 — (AP) — The German debacle in the Saarland and Palatinate appeared likely today to cost Germany the third largest industrial area of the Reich and one of the most highly developed sectors of the entire German economy.

Front dispatches said the enemy was in full retreat in the Saarland and Palatinate, with the Germans fighting only rear guard actions to cover the withdrawal of their forces.

At Supreme Headquarters, it was estimated that the 80th and 90th Army of Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton alone had herded way an estimated 30,000 prisoners since Sunday, pens in 48 hours as it and Lt.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch's 7th Army drove up from the southern bases of the Saarland and Palatinate, did not even take. Its prisoners beyond the first 6,000.

The rich Saar valley, with its steel mills and vast coal deposits, was being torn from Germany's last third largest industrial sector.

The daylight raids started only a few hours after a great fleet of R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. night raiders had struck at enemy oil refineries and Munitions plants in the Ruhr on the 20th consecutive night.

Not a German warplane was missing.

It appeared that the Allied Air Command was throwing everything at Germany for the third straight day in a softening up offensive for what Nazi commentators warned will be the final battle to end the war in Europe.

For 36 of the last 36 days Germany has been clubbed by great forces of Allied planes carrying out the most intensified air offensive in history.

Allied Planes Direct Thousands of Huns To Prison Camps

London, March 21 — (CP) — Thousands of German soldiers, roaming about the western front intending to surrender are being directed by yellow arrows laid by allied planes, radio Luxembourg said today.

The Luxembourg broadcast added the following a suggestion by Gen. Eisenhower, great masses of German civilians in Mendacher, Germany, are moving eastward to the Main, including war workers, are moving eastward."

BOMB COPENHAGEN

Stockholm, March 21—(AP)—Danish sources said some 30 Allied planes bombed Copenhagen at noon today. Reports from Mamoe said the bombs fell near the ferry landing and the port area in the eastern section of the Danish capital were attacked.

Plowing Operations in Some Sections of Ontario 10 Days Ago

(By The Canadian Press)

Although plowing operations had started in some sections of Western Ontario a week ago, the first two days, farmers report the heavy condition of the ground after heavy rainfall has impeded progress in the last few days.

Seeding operations in Waterloo County, expected to have been the earliest in Ontario, did not. Fields were interfered with by rain as were operations in some sections of Wellington County.

In the Oak district where the first seeding operations started two weeks earlier than usual, farmers started plowing last week but the

German Cities, Towns by Scores Fall to Yanks

By The Canadian Press

German towns and cities by the scores have fallen to the United States 3rd and 7th armies in their envelopment of the Saarland, Hesse, Rhenish Prussia, and the Palatinate, this week.

The whole Saarland and its 1,000,000 people — a great proportion of them skilled steel workers and coal diggers, has been overrun. Approaches to the major cities captured in the last day or so are these:

Saarbrucken, 136,000, capital of the Saarland; Worms, 50,000; Kaiserslautern, 61,000; Neunkirchen, 20,000; Saarlautern, 33,000; St. Ingbert 20,000; Homberg, 36,000; Zweibrucken, 16,000; Landau, 10,000; Coblenz, 58,000; Bad Grunenach, 29,000; Bingen, 15,000; Dillingen, 15,000; Boppard, 10,000; Wissembourg, France, 8,000; Bexel, 10,000; Hornberg 8,000; Marsberg, 20,000.

Capital producing city of St. Ingbert (20,000) and Homberg (36,000), on the eastern boundary of the Saar.

The 103rd Division moved seven miles west of Wissembourg and captured 1,000 prisoners, 14 of whom asked the honor of surrendering personally to the 103rd commander, Maj.-Gen. Anthony McAuliffe, hero of the siege of Bastogne in December.

Up to yesterday, Lt.-Gen. Patch's 7th Army had inflicted 45,000 casualties on the German 1st and 19th armies in the Saarland, Palatinate and Hesse. He added 8,329 prisoners to that yesterday and still had 30,000 awaiting transport to cages. The 7th Army, striking as an Army for the first time, captured more than 6,000 prisoners in a day.

Already the lack of power east of the Rhine was apparent in German ranks. Prisoners plodding dejectedly to the rear in uncounted thousands. One enemy division was the last to be troops saved from the 1st Parachute and 6th Panzer armies as the Remagen bridgehead and failed to check its advance.

Kaiserslautern Falls to 25 Men And One Grenade

By THORBURN WIANT

Kaiserslautern, Germany, March 21. (AP)—This vital road and rail centre fell yesterday to one hand grenade and 25 infantrymen.

A city with a pre-war population of 81,000, Kaiserslautern long had been figured by Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton's 3rd Army strategists as a tough nut to crack. They logically figured Field Marshal von Rundstedt would order the strictest resistance because Kaiserslautern is the key in the network of roads and rails westward to Saarbrucken, Germany's last-and Metz-and Mannheim, Germany's last-and Mannheim.

But Gen. Patton's armor stirred up such bewilderment and terror that an American Party 15d by Sgt. Byron Hoover of Chicago, moved in and took over almost without a fight.

Actually the first Americans into Kaiserslautern were members of the armored task force "Cherry", named for Lt.-Col. Henry T. Cherry of Augusta, Ga. But his 10th armored Infantry battalion had cut 46 miles in 36 hours, swept through the city and eastward at a 35-mile-an-hour clip.

The job of taking over the city then fell to 26 infantrymen who entered as the armor left.

Hoover's men captured a colonel, four majors, five captains, 10 lieutenants and 200 enlisted men trapped in one batch by throwing a hand grenade through a window where the Germans were hiding.

"A few snipers provided the only opposition we found", Hoover said. "Honestly, this deal was a push over".

SOVIET RUSSIA DENOUNCES 1925 PACT WITH TURKEY

Moscow, March 21 (AP)—Soviet Russia last night denounced her 1925 treaty of friendship and neutrality with Turkey and declared that "serious improvements" were needed in the pact.

Admitting the value of the Soviet-Turkish treaty for the purpose of upholding friendly relations, the Soviet Union nevertheless considers it necessary to state that at present the pact "does not satisfy us, especially during the second World War, this treaty does not correspond any longer with the new situation and it is necessary to make serious improvements," and an announcement from the Soviet Commissariat of Foreign Affairs.

The 20-year pact would have been automatically renewed June 7, this year unless denounced six months previously.

An Investia editorial said that "in the present war there have been important changes in the relations between the Soviet Union and Turkey, which require a new basic settlement."

The newspaper made no reference to Turkey's recent declaration of war on the Axis, which brought about a sharp rupture between Turkey and Germany in 1944 was scoffed at by Moscow newspapers as "a farce." They held that it was a disgrace that Turkish diplomatic contacts were maintained between Ankara and Berlin.

MUSKRAT CATCH SHAPING UP WELL.

Quality and quantity of muskrat skins compare very favorably with those of other years, a consensus of dealers reported today.

The king of muskrats, however, was a small one. Only 11 inches last week one dealer said. It was the smallest 11 inches seen in ten years.

The rats, it appears, are plentiful and the pelts are prime. Warm weather of the past few days are to quote one trapper, "right on our alley."

The latest "rats" of the season that far captured last Saturday when a local dealer bought 400 skins.

A second alarm was screwed to 9 Hazel Street this morning as a chimney fire. No damage resulted in either case, firemen reported.

Flight Sergeant Lyle E. Bedell Reported Missing

Flight Sergeant Lyle E. Bedell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Bedell, R.R. 2 Belleville is reported missing after operations over Germany. Other German air patrols were informed of the fact that Flight Sergeant Bedell, twenty-year-old air gunner enlisted in the R.C.A.F. in 1941, taking training at Belleville and Trenton before going overseas. He was an air gunner in Canada before being "operational." His "crew," as Mess Bedell, followed.

"I have been sweating in the records of the lads," he said, "but my turn." It was bona fide. He completed his tour of duty and his arrests were the same.

Flight Sergeant Bedell's brother, He "peripires only" as has been said, on the right side of his face. But he doesn't know when it will happen. Periodically perspiration will pour down his right cheek, whether he is working in the barracks in summer or out on the field in winter, sitting in his living room or standing still.

The medical fraternity are puzzled by the case. Physically his nervous system is normal. He has the same feeling in the right cheek as he has in other parts of his body.

He was advised at one time to have his teeth removed. His dentist extracted those with the upper and lower jaw. Nothing happened.

When he was fifty-two he played hockey for a team in the Wellington district and scored a goal when the boys knock him down and carry him off the ice. He was unconscious for a few minutes. He was back in the game a few days later.

He was also pitched for his community band ball team many times. He played a fine game and His ugly has been done dry since that day fifty-seven years ago when he was born.

Despite his "peripires" he is a good shot and can hit a bull's eye on one side only.

He has had his embarrassing moments. Perspiration, without warning, will suddenly pour down his right cheek. And stop as suddenly. His eyesight is normal with both eyes. He is not a drug addict.

3rd. Sidney — Sunny days and warm winds last week and the weekend rains have melted the last remaining snowdrifts and there has been piled high on the sides of the roads all winter. A "thaw at last" and "I dunno" seems as far as any old-time weather forecaster cares to go when asked "Is Spring really here to stay?" Many predict some cool and windy weather yet to come and others are recalling the occasional year Spring by when land was worked and seed sown in March.

A few in the district "tapped" their sugar bushes last week and had a couple of days run of sap.

Good roads, after a Winter's blockade of snow, sunshine, Spring-like atmosphere, and the privilege of attending Divine Service in a kind free of bombs and the terror of starvation, would seem a strong incentive for filling the church to the doors on the Sabbath Day.

The Lenten sermons on the Life of Christ and His Teachings, as delivered by the pastor, Rev. H. H. Hillis, are of spiritual aid to those seeking guidance in this time of great need, and it is regretted that the members of Alkena Church do not turn out in greater numbers to hear these messages and to attend Sunday School.

Decline in Hog Production Threat To Future Export

Ottawa, March 21—(CP)— Western Canada's hog producers, who have made the biggest contribution to the Dominion's wartime expansion of hog output, were warned Monday night that if the current decline in marketings continues the future of agriculture will be "all the more critical." Not only for the west but also for farmers throughout Canada.

In a broadcast address Dr. G. S. H. Barton, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, said Canadian agriculture was standing "at the crossroads," and, depending upon the choice it made, may gradually relinquish the export position it has reached with a number of major products and "sander back to the more limited field of home consumption and restricted export" or "choose the highway stretching out to the markets of the world."

War Veterans Insurance NOW AVAILABLE

Offers protection, without medical examination in most cases, to those discharged.

When Canada entered the present war, it was realized that men and women who went into uniform faced the possibility of returning as civilians life with their health impaired, or with some partial disability. It was realized also that, as a result of this impairment in health or disability, insurance would be unable to provide protection for their families through the normal channels of commercial life insurance. To meet this situation, Parliament, at its 1944 session, passed an Act known as The Veterans Insurance Act. This Act has now been proclaimed and applications may be made for policies under it.

WHAT ARE THE SPECIAL FEATURES OF WAR VETERANS INSURANCE?

One of the principal features of War Veterans Insurance is that, with very few exceptions, it is available to all veterans without medical examination. Extra premiums are charged where the veteran's occupation is unusually hazardous—such as, mining, construction, commercial flying, etc.—and, in addition, premiums are waived in the event of total disability. There is no extra cost for this waiver of premiums.

WHO MAY APPLY FOR WAR VETERANS INSURANCE?

Any ex-service man or woman is eligible. In addition, widows and widowers of veterans may apply for the insurance on themselves provided they are not insured under the Act. Merchant Navy personnel in receipt of a war disability pension from the present war are eligible also.

WHAT TYPES OF INSURANCE ARE AVAILABLE?

The plans of insurance available are 10 Payment Life, 15 Payment Life, 20 Payment Life, Life Paid-up at 65 and Life Paid-up at 85; that is, premiums may be paid for 10, 15 or 20 years or until age 65 or 85 respectively. The longer the term of payment the smaller the premium required. Term and Endowment policies are not issued. The insurance is of the non-participating type, that is, no dividends are paid.

WHAT AMOUNTS OF INSURANCE ARE PROVIDED FOR?

Policies may be applied for in amounts ranging from $500 to $10,000. The amount of the policy is payable only in the event of the death of the insured.

HOW ARE PREMIUMS PAID?

At the option of the veteran, premiums may be paid monthly, quarterly, half-yearly, or annually. There is no additional cost to the veteran for paying premiums on a monthly basis.

IS THERE ANY CASH SURRENDER VALUE?

After premiums have been paid for two full years, the policy may be surrendered for its Cash Surrender Value, or it may be converted to Paid-up Insurance or Extended Term Insurance. There is no provision for loans against the policy.

AT DEATH HOW WILL THE INSURANCE BE PAID?

The maximum amount which may be paid at death is $1,000, with the remainder being paid, at the option of the insured, in one of the following three ways:

(1) The money, plus 3½ per cent. interest, may be paid to the beneficiary in equal monthly sums over a period of five, ten, fifteen or twenty years, as selected. If the beneficiary dies, the payments are continued to his or her estate.

(2) The money may be paid in equal instalments as long as the beneficiary lives, whether the beneficiary lives or dies.

(3) As in (2), but instalments are guaranteed for five, ten, fifteen or twenty years, whether the beneficiary lives or dies.

WHAT IS THE EFFECT OF A WAR DISABILITY PENSION?

If, on the death of the insured, the beneficiary receives a pension, the insurance money will be paid as follows:

(1) If the policy is paid up, the full face amount of it will be paid to the beneficiary in the manner elected by the insured, plus the pension.

(2) If the policy is not paid up, then the capitalized value of the pension will be deducted from the face value of the policy and, instead, the beneficiary will receive the paid-up value of the pension, deducted, plus the excess, if any, of the face amount of the insurance over the capitalized value of the pension. If the policy has been in force at least six months and the beneficiary is the wife or husband or children, or both, of the insured, at least $500 will be paid as well as the paid-up value of the pension, if any, plus the remainder.

WHO MAY BE NAMED AS A BENEFICIARY?

Where the insured is married, the beneficiary must be the wife or husband, or children, or both. If the veteran is single, the beneficiary must be the future wife or husband, with a parent, brother or sister named as a contingent beneficiary to receive the insurance money should the veteran die unmarried.

CAN RE-ESTABLISHMENT CREDIT OR PENSION BE USED FOR VETERANS INSURANCE?

Yes, this is one of the purposes for which the re-establishment credit may be used. Premiums may be deducted from pensions also, if requested.

IF THE VETERAN BECOMES TOTALLY DISABLED, WHAT HAPPENS?

If this occurs before the veteran reaches the age of sixty years, and he is not in receipt of full pension for the disability, no further premiums need be paid.

ARE THERE ANY RESTRICTIONS AS TO TRAVEL, RESIDENCE, OR OCCUPATION?

In addition to being free of occupational restrictions, the insurance also is free of restriction as to travel and residence.

Rations

Canadians will be pleased that the shortage which developed some months ago in butter and led to a reduction in butter rations has disappeared, reduction having permitted the elimination of the shortage so that the ration will be increased from six ounces to seven ounces per week beginning with the first of April. They have borne the reduction willingly.

Rationing in Canada has never been felt severe and Canadians noting the rations of European countries consider themselves as having fared extremely well besides having been privileged to assist Europe in certain commodities.

Coal of course is not rationed in Canada though consumers have had to take some substitutes and they were not able this past year to get in all the fuel they wanted at a time. At first even the weather seemed to be conspiring against the situation but for more than a month the pressure has eased on fuel owing to the mild weather and the distribution.

A look at the situation in Britain is given in an advertisement which appeared some time ago dealing with coal supplies and which is quoted in the Ottawa Journal. It is "that during the three months of November, December and January, 1946, no premises may be supplied . . with more than 15 cwt. of house and kitchen coal in the south of England or 1 ton in the north of England, Wales and Scotland.

"During the same period the maximum aggregate quantity of coke, small anthracite, small Welsh dry steam coal and manufactured fuels which may be acquired in any part of England, Wales and Scotland is 12 cwt. and stocks of fuel in this group may not be raised above one ton."

These are maximum quantities. Merchants will not have enough coal to give everybody the maximum quantity."

That is what Britain faced during the winter now officially ended, Canadians had some difficulty in getting coal and had to take it in smaller quantities than they naturally be wanted, but this country's people did not go cold and there has been enough to serve all.

In the above advertisement Canadians can see what Britain is doing and has been doing for the cause of preservation of freedom for herself and the rest of the world.

Railway Arsenals

Until a few weeks ago it was a secret that 44,000 British railway workers have been building tanks and guns and aircraft as well as locomotives and rolling stock throughout the war. They accomplished this by constructing two-thirds of their energies on their normal work and one-third on war work, and working a total of twenty million more man hours per year than before the war.

During the first three years of the war one company alone—the London Midland and Scottish—built 642 tanks, including Cruisers, Centaurs, Matildas and Covenanters; the Centaur, one of the fastest tanks in the British Army, was designed as well as built in their workshops.

Up to March, 1944, L.M.S. workshops had produced 809 pairs of Typhoon wings; 2,668 pairs of Hurricane wings; and at the time they produced forty per cent of all Hurricane wings made; 144 spare sections of naval aircraft, and 160 pairs of Horsa glider wings.

They have repaired hundreds of battle-damaged aircraft. When the first one arrived, quite unheralded, at a carriage and wagon works, a wall of the shop had to be taken down to get the bomber in. The startled superintendent and his staff knew nothing about aircraft at that time, but a lifetime of craftsmanship stood them in good stead as they repaired the plane quickly and efficiently.

Thousands of rifle butts were made in one works on spindle machines technically a remarkable feat, according to the experts —and the workers made all their own jigs and tools for the job. Two hundred and fifty 17-pounder guns and 4,500 components; half a million 4.2 shells, 88,500 25-pounder shells, and 1,000,000 40-pounder shells were produced up to March, 1944, and 13,000 gun and aperture sights for American Lewis guns.

They have produced ambulance trains and armored trains; assault boats and army bridges; and they converted hundreds of tradesmen's trucks into "Armadillos" for the protection of airfields in case of enemy landings.

The Navy's first catapult trolley was made at an L.M.S. workshop. Railway workers invented and supplied thousands of bullet-proof shields for the protection of anti-aircraft gunners on ships against low-flying aircraft.

Maintenance of rolling stock has been carried out almost entirely in workshops and nearly 9,000 locomotives to care for and 295,000 wagons to keep on the rails; and there have been 50,000 more repairs a year, and that before the war, so that retention of wagons and engines for traffic. Passenger carriages, too, have needed more and more attention because no replacements have been possible since the war, and wear and tear has gone on steadily.

In addition, British railways have operated over 300,000 special trains for the movement of troops and equipment since the outbreak of war to June, 1944.

The Brook

(New York Times)

If you would hear the voice of the changing year, listen to a brook. The brooks are singing now in every valley. From all the hillsides where the snow lay deep the waters are trickling and whispering toward the valleys where they join the rising chorus of the brooks.

Spring comes first beside such waters. Grass begins to green in the moist lowlands, where flowing water has carried away the frost. Buds are fattest on the underbrush which has its roots in the brook's bank, and which weaves its basketry of stems there in the brook's warm breath. The arums and the water plantains come first to life where the mist of a rushing brook lies most constant. The earliest of the violets will be found in the muck where brook waters rise.

There is still frost in the ground, and there will be ice over the ponds and ice to edge the brooks; but the birds are singing now as they have not sung in many months. And those of us who were winter-bound for weeks watch and listen to the flowing waters with perhaps too much eagerness. We are impatient for spring. That is the way of the human heart.

But here is reviving life, live waters seeping from the earth and singing in the sunlight. We can hear the song even from the hilltops if you listen closely, waters leaping from stone to stone rushing eagerly toward the rivers and the oceans. And on a brisk morning you can see the mist of those waters curving down the valley like phantom streams. And you know deep within you that the cold residue of winter is flowing out of the hills, down the valleys and away. You know that the brook's song is a song of vernal triumph.

The House Must Fit the Purse

(New York World-Telegram)

That post-war house can be built with such flexibility that you can rig up a new wall on a moment's notice, according to the magazine Arts and Architecture.

For example, the arrival of a baby or a mother-in-law need cause no worry over accommodation. New type houses will allow prompt installation of a partition. That will mean snug privacy for dad and mother, with gentle seclusion for the new arrival.

Obviously, the architects are doing their part. But we suggest the building industry labor and management adjourn to a little seclusion of their own and make arrangements to provide new houses at prices most persons can afford.

VERNAL EQUINOX

The sun is moving northward. It's the vernal equinox!
It is springtime, as reckoned by all calendars and clocks.
Day and night this date are equal and by scientific lore
Grim, old winter has departed; gentle spring is at the door!

There's a pair of robins nesting on my narrow window sill.
They come northward right on schedule, and I think they always will.
'Tis the sun they seem to follow; but old winter lingers on.
When by schedules astronomic, from our zones it should have gone.

There are tulips up and budding, and they're tempting me once more
To get out and start my garden as I've often done before.
But I'll wait a little longer, for I've found it doesn't pay
To think winter's really over till the month of May.

Let the calendar proclaim it, let star gazers call it spring;
I remember Old Man Winter does a lot of lingering.
March may fool old things in nature—bird and bud and violet,
I'll not doff my winter flannels—we may have a snowstorm yet.

Pyle's Presence on Aircraft Carrier Whets Curiosity of the Ship's Crew

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Western Pacific (Delayed)—It's easy to get seasick aboard a Naval vessel.

The sailors are quite as friendly as the soldiers I'd known on the other side. Furthermore, they're so well lighted and so eager and have somebody to talk to, that they erect a big standoffish.

They're all sick to death of the isolation and monotony of the war in the Pacific. I believe they talk more about wanting to go home than even the soldiers in Europe do.

Their lives really are empty lives. They have plenty to eat, good movies and their mail, and that's just about all they do have. And there's nothing to write home about.

They never see anybody but themselves, and they associate only with them. They sail and sail and never arrive anywhere. They've not even been a native village for a year.

Three times they've been to Tokyo Bay—once to surrender, the Pacific, and have been allowed to go ashore for a few hours and sit under palm trees and drink three cans of beer. That's all.

Yet they do live well. Their food is the best I've run onto in this war. They have steaks and ice cream—more probably eat better often they would at home.

They take baths daily, and the laundry washes their clothes. Their quarters are crowded but each man has a bunk with mattress and sheets and a private locker to keep his stuff in. They work hard, but their hours are regular.

They've been at sea a thousand times how this compares with the other side. I can only guess that this is much better. They seem to expect you to say that, but they're a little disappointed when you don't.

They say "but it's tough to be away from home for more than a year," and never see anything but ocean and sky for months at a time—but it is, but there are boys who have been in Europe and are still there years, and lives are pretty drab.

Seaman Paul Begley looks at his wartime life philosophically. He is a farm boy from Rogersville, Mo. He talks a lot in a soft voice that is southern clear through. He's one of the plane pushers on the flight deck.

"I can stand this monotony all right," he says. "The point with us is that we've got a pretty good ship, and we get through it together. Think of the Marines who have to take the beaches, and the soldiers in Germany. I can stand a lot better easily if I know my buddies are pretty good for coming out of it alive."

Then others yell their heads off about their lot, and feel they're people were sacrificing for the good of America a year. I've heard some boys say they'd trade jobs for a day. "You just have to keep your mouth shut to remark like that.

At least 50 per cent of the sailors' conversation, when talking of a new comer like myself, is about three things:

The terrible typhoon that went through off the Philippines; the women they left behind to go home and their desire to get back to them.

The typhoon was awful. Many thought they would go the same way as the three destroyers that capsized. This ship is inclined to roll badly anyhow. Today the still has immense dents in her smokestack where they smashed in the water when she rolled that far over. A lot of experienced sailors were aboard during that storm.

Very few of the boys have developed any real love for the sea—except that will draw them back to it after the war. But mostly they are temporary sailors, and the sea is not in their blood.

Taking it all in all, they're good boys who do what is asked of them and do it well. They are very sailors and genuine and they are almost unanimously proud of their ship.

I think I've been asked a hundred times about the battleships. Is this one as good as the battleships? Is it as fast? Is it as safe? Is it as comfortable? Is it as steady? Is it as big? I know it is, but there are boys who have been in Europe and are still there years, and lives are pretty drab.

Seaman Paul Begley looks at his hopeful tone of wondering if I does.

AMERICANS ENTER BLAZING ILOILO ON PANAY ISLAND

Capture Iloilo Airdrome and Large Bridge at Eastern Approach

Manila, March 27 (AP)—American infantry, moving under very light the burning city of Iloilo, capital of Panay Island, captured the airfield today on that central Philippine island.

Local records show that 260 service personnel, former Belleville residents, are regularly receiving cigarettes, the contributions coming from a total of 396. Of the above number 66 have returned to Canada, twenty others have lost their lives on active service, while all the others are still in the armed forces.

The list includes four prisoners of war and the same number of nursing sisters. Each person on the mailing list receives a repeat parcel of cigarettes every six weeks with such weights as the Canadian Postal Association 847.

The return of the receipt of letters of appreciation from boys overseas, members of the local C.N.R. Veterans' Cigarette Fund, show their efforts entirely repaid.

"I wish to express my appreciation for the two cartons of cigarettes you sent me," says Capt. E. May of Belleville, now with the UB. Army, who is at present in Germany after a year's service overseas. "I was in hospital in Holland when the cigarettes were very scarce in Germany at that time, and my stock peanuts and I certainly enjoyed them."

Standing Behind Us

A letter of appreciation from Bandsman Alf Gerrard, formerly of this city, has also been received. Writing from Germany, Alf says that others in Belleville have certainly been standing behind the boys and we will supplied with cigarettes," he states.

Cards from Warrant Officer Donald J. Dall, prisoner of war in Stalag 344, Germany, have also been received indicating receipt of parcels forwarded overseas. The parcels were sent last July and August and apparently were regularly received. Other letters of acknowledgment cards were received from Belleville in March 1st.

A feature with the C.N.R. cigarette fund is that when a soldier gets a parcel or a letter acknowledges, he gets a personal letter in return from the president of the fund, Mr. Ernest Bush. This gesture seems to go over well with the boys overseas.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

THE CONTROL OF STOMACH ACIDITY

Milk fresh, raw, pasteurized, powdered, buttermilk, sour milk, condensed, evaporated, condensed, dried (powder), skim milk, sweetened milk, cream, whipping cream, ice cream, cheese (all kinds), and things such as custard made largely with milk (custard is usually hardly contains enough milk or cream now to justify the description) are the foods which most desirable and agreeable food for those who have stomach (hyperacidity). And it is generally believed by them that a pint or six ounces a day instead of taking just the customary three meals a day.

Egg, cooked as you like, in 1 hard, second only to milk in the diet for one with Tankes stomach. They cooked as you prefer is more easily digestible and more completely digested than raw egg. However, if you prefer taking raw egg it is nearly as good for digestibility and for general nutrition as when cooked.

Next most essential and agreeable food in such cases is lean meat, and then comes whole wheat bread and cereals. Those who cannot send stamped envelope for my address, for instance, "Wheat to Eat", which suggests how to use wheat in the everyday diet.

How to neutralize excessive acidity when hunger pain, heartburn, sour eructations, bloating or gas become distressing is what every one with these troubles wants to know.

One of the most satisfactory and least objectionable remedies for these common manifestations of hyperacidity is prepared chalk; tablets more or less as to the particular dose each one calls for, either. Better still, a combination of prepared chalk, sodium bicarbonate and magnesium trisilicate in the proportions of, say, 2 to 1 parts chalk to 1 part trisilicate, and this should be taken in the form of a powder which can be as fine as possible to chew—chewing it is preferable to swallowing it whole.

So far I have said nothing beyond the purely symptomatic factors of gastric hyperacidity or the lately popular idea that "acidosis" exists and expanded its positions in that area. Other that division troops landed Sabang Bauang, six miles south of San Fernando.

Heavy bombers struck Formosa with 104 tons of bombs.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED

By GEORGE W. SYMPSON

SONS OF WILD JACKASS

On November 7, 1939, Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire made an address in the Washington, D.C., before the New England Manufacturers' Association in which he said:

"Mournfully I prophecy that the next step will be a request from Canadians who now control the Senate will probably go forward to consummate annexation."

Senator Moses referred to a group of independent Republican senators who had joined the Democrats in opposing the Administration's labor or tariff protection desired by New England Republicans.

The particular epithet used by Moses was keenly resented by members of the insurgent senators and the subject was widely discussed in the press. Various interpretations were placed upon what the New Hampshire senator meant.

The utterance of the stalwart Moses was the subject of a stormy debate in the Senate the following day. A feeble and fulsome effort was even made to unearth him as chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee in the Republican National Convention of the Senate.

It is often said that "sons of the wild Jackass" was borrowed from the Bible, but no such phrase occurs in the authorized version. It was undoubtedly suggested by a recent resuscitation of the phrase of several Biblical passages.

Senator Moses afterward explained that the phrase was inspired by Jeremiah 14:6, which reads:

"And the wild asses did stand in the high places, they snuff up the wind like dragons; their eyes did fail, because there is no grass."

Job 11:12 says: "For vain man would be wise, though man be born like a wild ass's colt."

The fact that the donkey is the symbol of the Democratic Party, with which the insurgent Republicans had affiliations, may have influenced the spicy phrase used by the Republican senator following day.

With Canada's Naturalists

Toronto, March 21 (CP) — Red snow is the latest sight to appear in patches on glacial slopes in the Canadian Rockies every year about this time, Dominion entomologist Seabrees living in the snow give it this startling hue. Red snow algae are the specific down now and then in wooded areas. These tiny black flakes are popularly called "red leaves which have been carried to great heights by the explosive force of forest fires and then drift down again in areas miles away.

In the Canadian northlands, far from the fringe of settlements strung across the southern parts of the Dominion, the ill-omened ravages of Hitlerism's Shakespeare of Nature is still practising his traditional role of scavenger. Hunters near Arrow Lake, west of Lake Superior, shot a deer in dense bush and did not find it until two days later. Ravens had stripped the carcass to skeleton in that period. Almost disappeared from the haunts of men, the raven for some unexplained reason is never found where there are crows.

The ruffled grouse is peculiarly characteristic of Canada. He walks barefoot on woodland trails all summer, but comes the first fall snowfall he sturdily quickly puts the glittering grust of the snow wrapped with snowshoes and gaily ears of ruffled feathers.

The widest vocal range and repertoire of any animal in the world is far beat for the prairie coyote. No Westerner who has ever heard one of these nocturnal soliloquists dispute the claim. Other world-wide fame of the Canadian animal world include the timber wolf with its weird howls, the dancing Canadian lynx, the warbling white-throated sparrow, the Weglit shrew who begins his challenge in the morning and ends at night, the rhythmic section of thumping rabbits drumming their muscular hind legs against the ground.

Mocking birds, the finest vocalists among native American birds, are established residents in the far west and of Lake Erie, the only place in Canada where they have been reported regularly every summer for the past 18 years. Stray specimens turn up in the eastern reaches of the prairies and British Columbia. The more familiar catbird, however, ranges Southern Canada from coast to coast, limiting everything from the cat from which he derives his name, to grisly gasps, and comments ging throatily to his companion on every passer-by.

Official floral emblems have been chosen by six of the nine Canadian provinces. Nova Scotia adopted the pink trailing arbutus as their flower, in 1901 and five years later Manitoba chose the western crocus one, or lavender wind flower. Ontario's choice was the white trillium in 1927 and Alberta chose the wild rose in 1930. The blue violet, hardy woodland pansy and the golden penny, was chosen by New Brunswick in 1936 and Saskatchewan chose the orange prairie lily in 1941.

British Columbia, Quebec and Prince Edward Island have not yet announced their choice.

Lapourt Lacombe (Ind-Lavel—Two Mountains) was the only Commons member expressing opposition to sending a Canadian delegation to San Francisco.

Finance Minister Ilsley disclosed a Federal-provincial conference proposed refunding of Alberta's indebtedness.

London Letter

By JOHN DAFFURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 21 (CP) — With the glow of victory on the horizon, London's stubborn face takes on new emphasis and there's a feeling that after 5½ years of war something definitely should be done about it.

The job of putting London back where she of course, will take years. You can't clear away the rubble but my hombe in a day, a week or a month. You can't put back overnight all the windows shattered by blast and now boarded up as they have been for over so long.

There isn't enough paint in the country and won't be for ages—to touch up the woodwork grown dingy since 1939; and there isn't the manpower to do the work either.

And so the Evening Standard has decided that women must have bright, new clothes to welcome home the fighting man when Germany is licked and partial demobilization is passed. That, it contends, will help restore London to her old "loveliness" that and a civic "spring cleaning."

"We must spring-clean our city and set our homes in order and prepare for them (returning servicemen) with new color and comfort at our command.

"Before our men come back the women of Britain must be given time to prepare their welcome. As far as is possible they must be released from the duties that have taken them from their homes.

"Home relaxation of the sumptuary laws of our day, the issue of coupons that restrict their personal adornment should be made.

"There are a limited and one time they must do to make ready for the great day . . . our women no less than the men they have waited for so long, deserve the best that we can give them."

Deserter From German Marines Brings Wife With Him; Finds Sidelights on Reich Operations

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(C.P. War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Army in Germany, March 21 (CP) — A German marine, discharged from the service when he lost a foot, deserted to the Canadians and brought his wife with him when he received an order telling him to report for further duty.

The marine arrived in the village of Till, a few miles southeast of Elsen, and was at his home when western Canadian reconnaissance troops entered the village yesterday. Dressed in marine tunic and civilian trousers, he surrendered the moment.

Despite the loss of his foot he had been ordered to report for service in February. He wanted none of that, however, and took the first opportunity to come over to the Canadians.

His wife was nearly in tears when she learned she would not be able to remain with him in the prisoner-of-war cage.

Lieut. Leonard Chadwick, Montreal, led the recce troops who occupied Till. They went in over 1,000 yards of road from a village called Hetzerath, arriving at two a.m. after having to clear away road blocks.

"Hatherath out of the recce line," said Chadwick, "we used to a strange joke."

There were no German soldiers in the built during that first night Chadwick and his men searched all the houses and sorted out the civilians.

German soldiers defending Calcar had a few uneasy moments one afternoon when a barrage of high explosives and smoke shells fell among their positions. It was the sort of shot which usually precedes an attack.

Soon their machine guns were chattering through the smoke, but the Canadians came and after a brief period the barrage ended. It was a ruse designed to cover reconnaissance troops towing one of their armored cars from the mud by the side of the road.

The armored car became stuck in view of the enemy and within range of their mortars and machine guns but the crew got out and at out was to hide it in smoke. The high explosives were put down deliberately to keep down the Germans' heads.

Headquarters of a Canadian Highland brigade set up a farmyard as a fire duty and the operational room was in a cellars under the farm house. Some of the men and pigs were quartered in some of the buildings and the headquarters staff men put down their blankets in the straw of other.

In these German cellars, by the way, have been a godsend in the advance into the Reich. They have thick concrete roofs and walls and provide a perfect safe against shelling and are the quietest places for a bed-that has been even the noise of guns is deadened.

CANADIAN BELLE FOOD ECONOMIST IN WASHINGTON

"Canadian Government Glamor Girl" is Only Five-Foot Young Member of Combined Food Board in United States.

By HELEN BANNERMAN

Ottawa, March 21 (CP) — Canadian beauty has been recognized in Washington, but she is pert-looking girls, with the name officials there have given Mrs. Fryderyk C. Turner, Food Board administrator of oils and fats and one of the Dominion's representatives on Combined Food Board.

They call her the glamor girl of the Canadian government.

Mrs. Turner was appointed the Board's chief administrator in December, 1941, succeeding Dr. George Hilton to whom she had previously been technical adviser.

Anyone, interviewer or husband-man, who meets her in her office, is impressed not only with her beauty, but also with her thorough knowledge of economics and wartime controls.

The reason for her success at her exacting job of seeing that fats, oils and soaps are evenly distributed, is simple. She is a peanut importer from Toronto whose request for permission to import more peanuts was turned down.

"She says 'yes' quickly, but she says 'no' very slowly and politely and saves your feelings," he summed up.

Mrs. Turner is modest about her achievements, but she is eager to talk of her outside interests such as the Canadian-American Women's Committee for International Relations of which she is chairman of the Canadian section.

She has just arranged for two student teachers from Edmonton, Anne Herman and Catherine Pierce of the University of Alberta, to go for a month's exchange to the State Teachers' College at New Haven, Conn., as part of the committee's work.

Two American girls, June Sprague of New Haven and Jeanne Smith of Stamford, Conn., are already at the University of Alberta for a month and they will take back much important knowledge of Canada. We are hoping to arrange exchanges of students in the middle and far west, too," said Mrs. Turner.

Born in Rossland, B.C., Mrs. Turner studied economics at the London School of Economics and the University of Marburg, Germany. Then she married Fryderyk she returned to British Columbia with her husband, became and Brenda, and later was appointed chief research economist with the Tariff Board and the Dominion Trade and Industry Commission. She came to the Prices Board on loan from them.

Halifax, March 21 (CP) — Dimitrine Cuevas, Marial Maher, officer commanding No. 106 Depot Company, Canadian Women's Army Corps; here, has trod a variety of interesting paths in her slim 24 years.

RED CROSS LODGES
Bring Them Together

THIS first Red Cross Lodge was constructed twenty-five years ago by the Canadian Red Cross, adjacent to one of our military hospitals, to provide a home away from home where convalescent soldiers may meet quickly with their relatives and friends. It has been found that these frequent, happy visits with their loved ones in an atmosphere of cheery, homelike comfort considerably aids the convalescence and rehabilitation of our wounded servicemen. To provide for the convalescent patients of this war, 8 Red Cross Lodges will be built wherever needed. New Lodges already under construction are modernly equipped with spacious lounge and recreation rooms, snack bar and kitchen, comfort-room and Red Cross Hostesses in attendance to see to the comfort of the men.

Some of the Lodges have the added feature of Nursery Hostels to provide much needed overnight accommodation for next-of-kin visitors, especially women and children.

Every Red Cross Lodge that is constructed for our wounded men is an expression of deep appreciation of all Canadians to those who have bravely fought and sacrificed for freedom. The need for more Red Cross Lodges is great, as many and more of our wounded are returned to Canada for convalescence. To carry on with this vitally important war work, the Red Cross calls upon every loyal Canadian for support. Let your response be immediate and generous. Help your Red Cross to meet the largest money task in its history.

"Dunkirkers and Wrens are as urgent and desperate in the liberated countries, that the Minister of National War Services asked the Red Cross, early in the fall of 1944, to launch a United Allied Relief Fund representing the War Charities of women of the United Nations, to include funds for this relief in the national appeal.

Doll Waistlines In Easter Suits

New York, March 31—(CP)— Be prepared for surprises when you go to pick out your Easter suit.

You'll find Cherie Sallaer has developed a lot of new tricks —no jeer, but that you'll hardly recognize the dear old girl.

You'll see suits with long tunic jackets, for instance, nipped in at waistline, and flared below, worn over matchstick skirts.

You'll see bolero suits in all varieties, fanciful closings, unexpected color combinations.

You'll be amazed at the new wrinkles in lapels, which sometimes disappear altogether, sometimes jut out like wings, roll like cornucopias or multiply in petal-like formations.

Checks are big news this spring. And so is navy blue, as always. Grey flannel is one of the season's high notes, and then there are the tri-color suits, with jacket in one color, skirt another and blouse a third tone.

Blouses still go for the high, wrapped neckline, and jackets as a rule have high closings.

It's a suit spring, but this year you can be as feminine as you please, and still be suited.

Fashion Flashes

YOU JUST CANNOT FORGET that it's Spring when you glance at a millinery window. Spring-like is a new Spanish sailor of red and white checked taffeta. In back is an attached snood covered with big red poppies.

DRAW IN the belt for a nipped-in waist. Something new is the drawstring jacket. It is used in a suit of grey flannel and red checked woolen. A red cord with big silky tassels assures a slim waist when firmly tied.

EAST AND WEST MEET when the east goes all out for fashions inspired by ancient robes. The shops are bright with cowboy shirt blouses; stone-studded belts and suede coats with fringed ends, denim slacks with side pockets and closing. Cowboys, Indians, mountains and such! Real Americana!

BACK AGAIN comes the swagger belt, casual hat. A new model is in beige felt with fairly high crown softly manipulated, with a draped band. The brim is pulled down to one side.

BIG PET of the younger crowd for evenings is the cocktail frock with the snug top and full skirt. A beautiful dress is made with elbow-length sleeves in a black thin wool jersey blouse, very snugly fitted, with embroideries at the neckline of glittering gold beads. The skirt has alternating panels of coral pink and deep jade chiffon.

GROWING IN FAVOR is the idea of the suit whose jacket is a long, slim tunic that can be worn with or without a belt, and that looks as well over other things as it does when it is worn with its own skirt.

Government's Plan for Canadian Participation in World Security Organization Draws Support

(By HAROLD O'DONNELL)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 21. (CP)—Few members of the Canadian House of Commons appear opposed to the need for a world organization to keep the peace, and generally, it seems fair that secondary nations, such as Canada, should have representation in such an organization. This was made clear in the discussion on the Dumbarton Oaks proposals yesterday when leaders of the government party in the Dominion participate in the establishment of a security organization free of support from government and opposition parties.

Only one of 10 speakers — Liberal-Conservative Donald Matheson of Perth — opposed the plan to send a delegation to the conference on the Dumbarton Oaks proposals which will serve as the basis for setting up a body of international peace organization.

Mr. Matheson said the government had no mandate from the people to participate in the conference and he believed that Canadians should remain at home and provide for peace and security within the Dominion.

Prime Minister Opens Debate.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King opened the debate by proposing acceptance of a resolution which would approve the "purposes and principles" of the British, American, Russian and Chinese proposals which will be considered at the San Francisco conference on April 25.

Mr. King declared that the Canadian government is in full support of the general plan for a world security organization. In his 10,000-word speech, he declared the general tenor of Canadian representations to the conference was on the draft plan for the world security organization as it emerged from the Dumbarton Oaks Conference and simplified at the Yalta Conference.

Offer No Amendments.

He said Canada would offer no amendments or additional reservations at the San Francisco conference, but he served notice that the Canadian delegation to San Francisco, including opposition members, would study the proposals in full and reserve freedom on two points:—

1. Unqualified support for application of economic sanctions against an offending state.

2. Establishment of an appropriate status within the organization for the secondary states, such as Canada, as distinguished from the big five—Britain, Russia, United States, China and France—and the smaller powers.

". . . Kept to the winning of the war, the test will be how the achievement is the winning of the peace", said Mr. King. "Nothing can stop the lasting through of co-operative action on the part of peace-loving nations. . . .".

Not Peace Conference.

"The meeting at San Francisco is not the peace conference. It will have nothing to do with the preparation of the treaties of peace. It will not discuss the terms which the United Nations will impose on Germany and on Japan as some have thought. It will deal only with the constitutional framework of the future society of nations. Its purpose is to provide for the maintenance of peace once peace has been secured.

"Since the invitation to the conference was received, I have had an opportunity for personal conversations with President Roosevelt, in the course of which I was informed of the main features of the proposals, and suggested that the Canadian government believe would make for improvement in the effectiveness of the international machinery. Early in April, there is to be a meeting of representatives of the Canadian government in London to discuss the proposals. I shall not be able to be present myself at that meeting."

Secret Political Purpose

"I believe that the discussions in London will serve a useful purpose as an exchange of information, and as a clearing house of views among the different nations of the Commonwealth, all of whom will be deeply interested in the success of the conference."

Mr. King referred to the voting procedure in the proposed Security Council of the world, peace organization. The Big Five would be permanent members of the council and other countries of the United Nations would be temporary members for two years, on a rotation basis.

Outside the Big Five would have an additional number of being elected from time to time to the Security Council.

Open to Objection

The Prime Minister said the voting procedure in the Security Council agreed on at the Yalta Conference where wrongly or not the powers could veto the application of sanctions, was open to objection to "theoretical objection."

Since, however, the decision represented an achievement of substantial unity by the three great powers—the United Kingdom, United States and Russia—it would be unwise to attempt to reject the decision outright. He suggested there was reason to reserve judgment until all sides of view had been explored at San Francisco.

The general objection could be taken to extending some special prerogatives to the big powers on the ground the major responsibility for maintaining peace would rest.

Two Viewpoints

This was his only reference to the much-discussed veto power on which he agreed on at Yalta as a compromise between two opposing points of view which developed at the Dumbarton Oaks Conference and which led to the postponement of all the question for decision by Prime Minister Churchill, United States President Roosevelt.

Mr. King then declared:

1. That all members of the Security Council should have equal voting powers which would permit a majority to declare any country an aggressor and apply sanctions against it.

2. That no question of declaring a country an aggressor or applying sanctions could be settled without the affirmative vote of the permanent members of the Security Council, Russia, China, United States, United Kingdom and France, except in either case would give any one of these veto power.

"The agreed proposal is that the Security Council, in dealing with a dispute involving any country up to the point now before it, before the membership of the delegation is announced. Once the resolution is adopted, I would hope very shortly thereafter to be able to make an announcement by associating with the delegation members of political parties other than its own, the government is seeking to lift and to keep the strife in the enduring peace above the arena of party strife . . .

The Draft Proposed

The draft proposed that all members bind themselves to carry out decisions of the council, and military sanctions at the request of the Security Council against an aggressor.

Separate Agreements

As to the military sanctions there were to be separate agreements and they were suggested to place forces at the disposal of the council except to the extent that it was willing, for instance, if the draft is accepted, Canada would not be bound to send forces abroad unless the Dominion agreed to do so in a separate agreement which would have to be ratified by Parliament.

No similar provisions were made for special agreements for economic sanctions and co-operation of more than one state not participating in deliberations of the Security Council might be necessary to effect economic sanctions.

"It would seem to be desirable to develop some procedure whereby states not represented on the Security Council could not be called upon to undertake serious enforcement action without the opportunity of participating in the council's proceedings or without agreeing separately to this in executing the decisions of the council," said Mr. King.

Mr. Coldwell agreed with this and said that under present proposals Canada might be directed to sever trading relations with, or supply armed forces to fight against, some future aggressor, without having had the opportunity of participating in the decision reached.

DECISIVE TEST FOR DREW GOVT. IS APPROACHING

Provincial Election Imminent Prediction of Speakers Debating the Throne Speech

Toronto, March 21—(CP)—Throne Speech debate is scheduled to continue in the Ontario Legislature today with Premier Drew and Opposition Leader Conboy scheduled to speak this afternoon tomorrow is also anticipated, but must be dependent on C.C.F. and Liberal amendments to the speech in reply, expected to produce the decisive test of the Progressive Conservative administration.

The possibility of a sudden provincial election, which has hung over the assembly since the session opened Feb. 15, was accented yesterday when T. B. Hogarth (CCF—Hamilton Centre) called on the government to "come on now or never" after Farquhar Oliver (L.—Grey South) expressed his belief a dissolution of the House is imminent. Both spoke on the Throne Speech debate.

Mr. Thornberry said the government's policy of "keeping on good terms" with the people and "should let somebody else do the job who knows how."

Mr. Hogarth said: "I want to inspect the C.C.F., as the next largest group in the House, to make up the rules. Then let every Progressive individual support or condemn it."

Criticizes Number of Boards

Mr. Oliver criticized the number of government boards and commissions and said they show enactment of legislation, Establishment of a division of marketing and co-operatives by the Agriculture Department was an essential step towards securing post-war markets for farm products.

There will be a "vicious" search for markets during the post-war period and Canada's outlet into Europe, Mr. Oliver said, will be limited from competition of such countries as Denmark and Argentina, he said.

Mr. Oliver charged that the government had not kept its promise to end unemployment and speeche tation at the Toronto stockyards and to reduce costs to farmers.

"You know when you made the promise that you couldn't cut costs" he said. "You knew the Federal Government has complete authority over the cost of hay and bedding and all the other items. Today the farmers are selling their hay for $13 a ton; and for every ton they sell it at the stockyards. The Complete Commission charged that the government had not kept its promise to end unemployment and speeche tation at the Toronto stockyards and to reduce costs to farmers.

Archbishop of York Puts Hitler, Himmler and Criminal Gang In Class for Instant Death

London, March 21—(CP)— Major war crimes, including Hitler will be treated "as murderers, assassins, thieves, torturers and the like," Lord Wright, chairman of the United Nations War Crimes Commission, declared in the House of Lords Tuesday.

He made the statement after the Archbishop of York told the House that the principal war criminals, once caught and identified, should be put to death on the spot.

"When the commission added Hitler to its list," Lord Wright said, "it was as an ordinary criminal, and the commission was not thinking of 'political crime. There was evidence, however, that the murdering of people in gas chambers was a deliberate scheme under the direction of a single, organizing mind. If that were brought home to Hitler, why should he not be indictable as a murderer?"

The Archbishop of York pleaded against criminal public trials.

In the category for instant death, the Archbishop put "the master criminals Hitler and Himmler and their gang who have corrupted Germany and ordered these hideous crimes."

The Archbishop, saying he received critical letters every time he spoke of punishing war criminals, declared:

"It would, of course, be much more pleasant for me to plead for mercy, but sometimes justice has to take precedence over mercy, just as righteousness has to take precedence over peace."

Nazis Sold 250,000 Persons as Slaves in Koenigsberg in '44

London, March 21—(CP)— The Moscow radio said yesterday that a brisk slave market had existed in Koenigsberg, capital of East Prussia, at which adult persons from occupied lands were sold for about 10 marks (about $4 prewar) each, said children for five or six marks each.

The broadcast quoted a captured German, identified as Erich Zwemmer, director of the Market, as telling a Russian war correspondent.

"I had 53 assistants and we had plenty to do, as in the last year 250,00 foreigners from occupied areas of the Soviet Union, Poland, France and Belgium passed through the camp. A few of the fewer than 75,000 Russians a year."

'Yankee Imperialism' Not Feared by Aussies

San Francisco, March 21 (AP) — Australians have no fear of "Yankee Imperialism" but, on the contrary, welcome greater United States participation in Pacific affairs, said Deputy Prime Minister Francis M. Forde, Australian delegate to the forthcoming San Francisco conference.

Mr. Forde and Dr. H. V. Evatt, Minister for Eternal Affairs, are stopping briefly on the Pacific coast while en route by London for a peace-conference meeting with other British Commonwealth leaders.

In an interview last night, Mr. Forde declared:

"I have met many thousands of American servicemen in Australia and have having had an opportunity of seeing our countryside and knowing our people and having have told me they would return after the war to settle on the land and establish new industries."

Mr. Forde said the Australian government had taken steps to encourage the immigration of these men, he termed "the very flower of American manhood."

Striking German missiles would soon be used by Gen. MacArthur in a major Pacific action, the Deputy Prime Minister told a press conference.
